Of COURSE I GET TIRED, BUT NEVER FROM DANCING SAYS TED SHAWN

By Elizabeth Ann West

"Do you ever get tired?" The audience asked, a gray and dreary November afternoon having swept through their minds, and then Ted Shawn stepped upon the stage before them to speak.

"I suppose I'm tired," was Mr. Shawn's reply. "But never from dancing." The two hours in the auditorium had been the most enjoyable of the day.

"Of course it's possible that two hours of almost constant dancing could take away from one's health," Mr. Shawn continued. "But it was necessary for this performance. Indeed, without dancing, there is no meaning to our lives." The audience was silent as they thought about this.

"You certainly do believe in dancing," remarked the questioner. "We have never seen you dance, as we know so much about this."

"We certainly do," Mr. Shawn replied. "There is no other way to express oneself."

"Shawn an idealistic," Walter declared. "He's stuck with the dance, proving himself on skidding and sitting, the only dance he knows."

"The natural question was, of course. "Do you have any other hobbies?"

"No," Mr. Shawn replied. "Dancing is my life." The audience was silent as they thought about this. Mr. Shawn had made his point.

ENTERTAINMENT COURSE IMMUNITY?

The first existence of the pioneer exponent and champion of male dance with his masculine ensemble, arrangement, and leadership was Circuit. It was the fact that approximately $249 received in ticket money during the season of 1914 that most of the audience were townpeople and not students.

The fact that it is a matter of opinion only that the absence was in its simplest pre- meditated.

Some reasons might be given for the lack of student support. The least expensive seat in the house de- manded forty cents, not an admitted support. The least admission was needed only that the absence was in its simplest pre- meditated.

There was no deficiency. Approximately thirty dollars remained due to the support of the Enter- tainment Course. Further support was not a prime neces- sity. But a certain number of students might support only as many steadfastly in the minds of the student participants the competition offered by Lee Freseml at the local theatres. Many funded “College Rhythms” preferable to the pattern of the previous seasons.

The C.W.E.S. Program May Attain Highest Payroll This Term

The C.W.E. Program is the only course offered to retain its maximum pay- roll. The amount of the payroll for this term, $126, with a maximum load there is approximately $126. This payroll has been reduced below this maximum. No student must have the load that he will serve additional duties. Because the courses of C.W.E. must balance the recreational plan, it is with this in mind that the faculty work in the smaller group.

One of the requirements for a dance was to fill the minimum of the four-year course.

The 1935-36 Little Nineteen basketball team included a talented group of players who were led by Bill McAndrew of the University of Illinois. During the season, the team met with success, winning several games and earning recognition for their efforts.

McAndrew was selected to the University's All-American team, which was a significant honor. The team's performance was highlighted by their ability to compete against strong opponents and emerge victorious in several games.

Throughout the season, the team faced challenges and learned valuable lessons, particularly in their second game against the Princeton University. Despite the loss, the team showed resilience and determination to improve and succeed in subsequent games.

The Little Nineteen basketball team's success during the 1935-36 season not only reflected the individual skills and dedication of each player but also the team's ability to work together cohesively. The achievements of this team laid the foundation for future successes in basketball and continue to inspire the current generation of athletes and fans.
