A sweat feat in the initial inning of play proved to be sufficient to clinch the game and the Maroons' slugger shoot Brown shoe factory Star 5 Stars of Murphysboro home with the small end of a 6-1 score after the Decoration Day headliner played on the local lot Wednesday. The visiting club played loosely in the first inning and gave the University club a lead of 6 runs. Play popped up from the beginning of the second inning. The Maroons did not score again until the fifth inning when W. Dixon's three-bagger scored Birkner. The visitors' lone score came in the first half of the seventh, Gartner and Anderson were given bases on balls and a subsequent two-bagger by Batch scored Gartner.

R. Dixon pitching for the Maroons allowed but six scattered hits. Baroni, the visiting hurler, was solved for nine safe hits.

Birkner, leader man for the Maroons, started things moving in the first frame when he hit safely for a single. Baroni attempted to put Birkner out at second on Dixon's hunt but threw late and both men were safe. Baroni walked Bixenstain, filling the bases. McKeen fanned out. R. Dixon singled scoring Birkner and W. Dixon; Valentine and Meffert with safe hits chased across additional scores; Henson and Chance struck out, leaving Meffert on third.

SIGMA ALPHA PI HOLDS INITIATION AND INSTALLATION
Friday night, June 1, one of the most important evenings for the members of the Sigma Alpha Pi and one that will long be remembered, for it was on this date that the first annual initiation of members was held.

The club and dining rooms were decorated appropriately for the solemn occasion, where, needless to say, lunch was served in the first few weeks of the morning.

The initiation climaxes the many activities in which the Sigma Alpha Pi has been engaged. It is now a full fledged working organization, bound together in a common bond of brotherhood for the advancement of educational interests, especially of its alma mater, S. I. N. U.

The following members received the initiatory degree:

Readers of Scribner's Magazine for May were undoubtedly interested in Dr. Phelps' article on some of the gaps and "insufficiencies" in the English language. We grant it's the best language in the world because it's ours, but it's far from perfect. We need a new word or perhaps a new phrase to perform a varied and specific work. That word is something that is so gracefully used in other languages, especially the German and French—"nicht wahr" and "n'est ce pas," respectively. A thousand times a day we have occasion to use this expression but alas, there's no expression! so we have to say prosaically, "isn't that so?" We fail would use "n'est ce pas" but we fear the audience hasn't studied French, so there we are.

Another thing we're sadly in need of is a negative interrogatory for "I am." Dr. Phelps says "Suppose you are the last person to arrive at a dinner party, and you wish to make a remark equally compounded of inquiry and apology—all goes well with your sentence until you reach the rising inflection at its conclusion, 'I'm a little late, am I not, ain't I, aren't I?—which shall I be?' He insists that "am I not" looks well enough in print but it's sure to cast a gloom and chill over the pleasant company when spoken—and besides "It would not go well with a cocktail." You're right, Mr. Author. Deliver us and ours from anybody who springs formal, correct and pedantic English on us when we're supposed to be having a corking good time at a dance or party.

Dr. Phelps doesn't solve the question—but we're confident that if all the English heads of United States said "Aren't I?" he'd use something else; probably he would finally resort to the cheerful slang, "I'm a little late, what?"

We were glad to see him heap coals of fire on the Would-Be-High-Brow up state who allowed his teachers in Cook county to say, "It is me." It should not be urged just because it's impossible to make the pupils say, "Is it I." In other words, if the standard is ivory, are we to cover it to suit human convenience, the method adopted so frequently in the sphere of morals? We answer emphatically, "No." All right, let everybody say, "It's I."

"Willie, give some of the uses of the bones.

"To keep our insides in, and to protect the brain and other cavities."

THE ZETETIC SOCIETY presents
AN EXPERIENCE
The Modern-day Flapper has been so often and so extensively discussed, that today most any expression concerning her seems trite to say the least.

But there is one quality she has that, so far as I know, has never been discussed. In fact I believe that I am the discoverer of this particular attribute of character and it was on a passenger train recently that I made the discovery. This particular trait of character is very commendable. She is so quick and accurate in grasping an embarrassing situation and removing the embarrassing factor. She just eliminates it, eradicates it, amputates it, so to speak. She is so considerate of gentlemen's feelings.

It might be of some interest to the readers of the EGYPTIAN to learn how I discovered a new side to this much talked of and oft analyzed creature known as "The Modern Flapper." It happened in this wise. I had been to make an application for a position and had failed to get it. I had gone to no little trouble on the returning train to secure a daily paper and on the front page read the extensive and inspiring account of kidnapping bandits and famine in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China.

I had just reached the middle of the first paragraph when I was called to the opposite end of the car to meet a friend. Before leaving I folded my paper neatly and placed it in the seat by my hat. My conductor's tag was in the window. A little trouble on the returning train to secure a daily paper and on the front page read the extensive and inspiring account of kidnapping bandits and famine in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China. I was especially interested in the famine in the famines in China.

It happened just as I was about to unfold my paper that it was a success. It is an unpremeditated surprise to find that the thing you had worked up to was a success.

THINGS DO CHANGE
Intelligent and observant students of this or any less learned institution of learning will probably have noticed the chaotic confusion of the crowd around the main building which is caused by the breaking up of the old walk. We will admit that it was cracked so that it resembled a futurist sketch and that when it raised we gave a correct imitation of Leander crossing the Hellespont when we went to chapel and still this walk holds dear and valued associations to us. It has echoed with the timid footfalls of the incoming freshmen, whose only hope is that someone will put him out of misery and has resounded with the triumphant tread of fiercely senior whose only hope is that there will be a piece of the world left or him to subdue single-handed amidst the admiring awe of the so-called populace. It has also rung with the firm tread of the night watchman, pondering the students of campusry on the next window. It has seen many teams go forth to do their best for the old school on field and track and in the gym and could it speak it could tell of many clean-cut won and some defeats in which the team fighting to the last has lost just as cleanly.

Probably, also, if it could speak, it would tell of the great men and women who have plodded from class to class across its smooth surface and absorbing the atmosphere of the school have lived better and more uplifted lives.

So let us pause to give tribute to the old walk which has seen our pastimes and our sometimes unwilling labor, our triumphs and our disappointments in the hopes and disillusions, and all on other activities which would seem small to the world outside, but which with us are all important.

"The old order changeth, yielding place to new.
And God fulfillth himself in many ways."
AG STRAWBERRY SOCIAL
On the evening of May 31, a crowd of over 600 students assembled at the state farm where a strawberry social was given by the Ag Club. The main features of entertainment were the old time musicians, strawberry eating contests, and the largest family center. The girls of Anthony Hurl who went in a body won this contest. The oldest and youngest men and women students were given all the strawberries they could eat. The rest of the evening was spent in playing games on the lawn.

"He certainly was a far-sighted man."
"How's that?"
"He had a fire extinguisher put in his coffin."

Four-button suit and black brogue shoes,
A constant thirst for girls and boozes,
Hat on his nose; no cuff on pant; All he can do is pet and dance,
Pipe in his mouth, slosh in his walk, No brats at all—just talk, talk, talk.
His papa's pride, his mamma's joy, And this they call a college boy!

Too Personal

We hear that Glenn Fishel put Miss Lilie Trovillion off the tennis court. A picture of Norvitz Julian was lost.

A reward is offered for its return to room 45.

It is said that Ralph G. can make soup out of little fish.

Charles Gabbert went wading without any water last Tuesday night. The sidewalks about the front of the main building look like the upheaval of Pompeii.

The Egyptian office must be getting popular. We got six bouquets of roses last week. The chief contributors were Delmar Shackelton, Elizabeth Stein, Marie Cox and Clete Kerley.

We are mighty glad we have something to sing out of in chapel now. Why didn’t we think of those pamphlets long ago. But what has become of that song we sang during teachers’ meeting about working on the river bank or something like that.

We hate to tell it on the Socrates but it’s too good to keep. The cast of “Nothing But the Truth” planned to go to Christopher to see the play which was being given there, just as the Zetets went to Murphy. Some one called up to find out just when it was to be given and he was informed that it had been presented last week.

SIGMA ALPHA PI ENTERTAINS
One of the most pleasant entertainments of the year was enjoyed by Sigma Alpha Pi members and their friends last Wednesday evening.

The first part of the program was spent in seeing the famous production “Flashes of Action” at the Barth Theatre, after which the group returned to their home on Normal Avenue.

Many lawn games had been planned and were carried out in an entirely pleasing manner. Following this, refreshments, consisting of strawberry sherbet and cake were served.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Warren acted as chaperones.

Various members of the faculty who visited the fraternity from time to time have remarked that the members will in years to come look back upon their various social activities with great pleasure. The members feel that this particular event will be no exception.

No liars will be admitted to “Nothing But the Truth,” June 18.

Annual Spring Plays

On Monday and Tuesday, June 18 and 19, the Zetets and Socratic literary societies will present the annual spring plays. The Zetets will give “Daddy Long Legs” and the Socrates “Nothing But the Truth.”

Attention, Methodist Students
All Methodist students are invited to go on a picnic Thursday, June 7. Please meet in front of the Main building at 5 p. m. Bring your lunch and get ready for a good time.
