RETURN RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES OF FEW

In the June first edition of the Chicago Tribune an editorial appeared entitled: "What Our Girls Want Now is Freedom and a Chance." The Editor says, "I don't believe in self-righteousness, and if she's got a right to her vote and a chance to play a part in the world's political and economic scene, then she has a right to it." To some it means the "right" to determine matters affecting the nation.

To some it means the "privilege" of speaking up. On some public matters. To some it means the "right" of doing away with unionism. To others, it means the "right" of making the world a better place for the welfare of others.

Only for a few do it mean anything more than preserving and extending the freedom they have. To many, it's the right to the past. In the United States under the Constitution it means to something or someone—mostly one's own rights and privileges. It is this, if it is anything, the "right of the masses" to have a high price. It is this notion, the high price for World War II.

The thing to do is to look to the rights and privileges of the common man. The rights and privileges of the common man should be preserved at all costs. Our society should stand still. It is too dynamic to reason forward. We would rather turn back. We do not progress by looking back to the rights and privileges of the past.

Rather we must look forward to a better standard of living, better homes, education, removal of economic restrictions, better medical care, etc., for all people.

Because of the mass who call it a "return to the normal" and are not the mass who call it a "return to the normal" is fighting over a great many things of no importance. It is only the side of the tide.

CARTELS MENACE TO LASTING PEACE

People of the United States have been talking and thinking in terms of an international government after the war. The students here at Southern voted overwhelmingly in favor of the establishment of a world government which will safeguard peace and provide some means for economic recovery. But our present government is the government that is an international government of a different kind. The purpose of the United States is to prevent war, and it is an international government of an enormous power. It is called an INTERNATIONAL CARTEL.

A cartel is actually a monopoly streamlined and modernized into an international scale. Geographically they cover the whole world. Any national product of agriculture, mining, or any other industry, can be controlled. It can be controlled. The principle for the formation of cartels is to fix prices higher than those which the consumer would otherwise get. There are many cases in which prices are fixed at absurdly high levels, and it is quite doubtful that the consumers would otherwise get. There are many cases in which prices are fixed at absurdly high levels, and it is quite doubtful that the cartel cartels cannot be met with the world in which prices are fixed at absurdly high levels.

It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels. It is not difficult to recognize the dangers of cartels.

The season of their faces Tom J., and John E. were too busy to go out in the sun, but the faces of our students were beaming with joy. As I looked at their faces, it was like a picture of the future of our country. I wish they could realize how lucky they are to be students.

The road was empty and I was glad to see so few cars. It was like a picture of the future of our country. I wish they could realize how lucky they are to be students.
