Our Opinions

with this edition, we, the editors, sign our "30" mark, for though the Journalism law, "30" is the word for "a day," it is also a word for a story. And as we sign our "30" mark, we publish this edition of the paper.

We look back at the week as we face the coming week with our eyes fixed on the horizon. As we search the past, we can see that certain stories have a common theme, which we believe is the theme of the day. It is the theme of the day, the theme of the week, and the theme of the year. And we believe that this theme is the theme of the world.

It's just about being here, and it being happened, basketball coach Lynn Schueler has told his players and any others upon the dose and sad. "You did the best you could, and that's the best you could," he told them. "You did the best you could." And he meant it.

The state's basketball season has come to a close, and the Indians have been to the state championships but two times, in 1931 and 1933. And now, the Indians are back for another season, and they're not going to let anything stand in their way.

The Indians have been working hard, and they're ready to go. They're looking forward to another great season, and they're ready to give it their all.

The team is made up of the best players in the state, and they're going to show the world what they're made of. They're going to give it their all, and they're going to win.

The Indians are a team of champions, and they're going to prove it to everyone. They're going to show the world that they're the best, and they're going to win.
