Academic Freedom

(Note: The following guest editorial provided by Chester Adams of the Free Press, Albany, N. Y., was awarded first place in the I.C.P.A. state contest.)

Five universities and colleges recently were placed on a central list of the American Association of University Professors (A.A.R.U.) for denial of academic freedom to professors. The list included the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Miami, the University of Minnesota, the University of Wisconsin, and the University of California. In a manner of speaking, the Southern student is the only college in the south one-third of the state and serves an area of approx. 100,000 students. In Southern, the millions of dollars are spent on aid to Southern students, and the Scholars and their families, just as all others. Hence, most of the people who would do so in any other university are doing something to improve education and the students.
