TUESDAY'S NATIONAL LOTTERY MARKS SECOND STEP TOWARD MOBILIZATION OF 600,000 MEN

Latest Reports Indicate College Students Stand Little Chance of Detention

By PATRICK MURRAY

The national lottery has yielded an unexpected number of college students. Latest reports indicate that college students, who constitute a significant portion of the eligible population, stand little chance of being drafted.

The lottery, which is designed to mobilize young men, is proving to be an effective tool in attracting college students. According to the latest data, more than 600,000 college students have registered.

However, the chances of being drafted are minimal for college students. The draft lottery is structured to ensure that college students, who are typically in the age range of 18 to 26, are placed near the end of the list.

In addition, college students have access to exemptions and deferments that are not available to other segments of the population. This further decreases their chances of being drafted.

The lottery has been praised for its fairness and efficiency. It is expected to continue to be a key component of the mobilization effort.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I would like to express my appreciation for the way the lottery is being handled. It is a fair and equitable system that ensures that everyone has an equal chance.

Thank you for your efforts.

Sincerely,

Axis-Jap Pact Lessens Our Chances Of Entering War, Says R. D. Bowden

By STEVE KEMPFLY

“The recent Axis-Jap Pact may lessen our chances of entering a war on the Japanese front. The pact, which was signed in Tokyo last month, provides for mutual assistance in case of attack by any third power.

This move by the Axis powers is a significant development. It means that we must be prepared for a long and costly war on the European front.

The Axis-Jap Pact is a serious threat to our national security. We must take immediate steps to strengthen our defenses and prepare for any contingency.

Correction

The recent Axis-Jap Pact was signed in Berlin, not Tokyo. This error appeared in last week’s edition.
