Southern Takes Its Place
On the Educational Front

It is apparent now that S. I. N. U. is taking its place among the institutions of the country, for this year its enrollment jumped to 297. This is an increase for the college, which now has 297 students, a corresponding increase in other faculty positions. S. I. N. U.'s admission as one of the fifteen colleges of the United States of America is in line with the American Education Commission's evidence in itself. The college is gaining in prestige.

It is not as much the size of the college in which we are proud of as the high quality of the instruction which students receive being. S. I. N. U. has a small number of faculty members, which is big enough to ensure that students' teachers of college classes, but rather, persons who hold higher degrees.

The addition of a new training school building, for which plans were appropriated early last year, and the increase in operating funds of $100,000 will help forward the expansion of the school and will eliminate the necessity of the continual struggle for money.
