They crowded the door. Laughing, talking, impatiently waiting: the newboys. The press arrived. The United Press wire was open. Sandwiches were brought in. Coffee. THE EXTRA read: PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DEAD.

He was released with complete leisure at Warm Springs, Georgia. An artist was sketching him. In a matter of minutes it was over. The 31st president of the United States had become immortal.

"In the hour of Victory America loses her President," the headlines scream. The electrifying news spreads. The world is shocked.

The phone rang. "Tell me it can't be true," said a thin female voice. And then she said "Dear God" and hung up. "He was the only President our generation knew. The man who gave America a New Deal: relief for the farmer, hope for the industrialist. He wanted in a few days he was to make the opening address at the American Economic Association meeting. He was the only President our generation knew. The man who gave America a New Deal: relief for the farmer, hope for the industrialist. He wanted..."

PERSONALITY SKETCH

HANNAH TWEEDY

This beauty from England is an engrossing person to know in a mere passing of three or four minutes. Her cheerful disposition is so contagious even her friends have been known to say they wish they were always as happy as she.

Hannah has a great interest in architecture and is the daughter of a well known architect. She is at present taking classes in the Missouri School of Architecture and plans to return to England at the end of the semester. In the meantime, she is working at a local restaurant to help pay for college. She is the second oldest of three Tweedys, the other two being Mr. and Mrs. Tweedys. The Tweedys are to be found in the Tweedy building on the Missouri State University campus.

As the saying goes, "Architecture is not only a business but also an art." This is certainly true in the case of Miss Tweedy. She has a natural talent for design and a keen eye for detail. Her work is always of a high standard, and she is highly regarded by her peers and professors alike.

Old SCIENCE BUILDING

By DALE KITTLE

The old Science Building now on the Missouri University campus is one of the most impressive structures in the entire university campus. This building was designed by the famous architect, Mr. Tweedys, and was built in 1920. It was originally intended to be used as a laboratory for the study of natural sciences, but it was never utilized for that purpose.

The building now houses several departments, including the Department of Chemistry, the Department of Physics, and the Department of Biology. It is also the home of the Missouri University Science Museum, which houses a large collection of natural history specimens.

The building is constructed of brick and has a distinctive octagonal shape. It is topped by a large cupola, which houses a clock and a bell. The bell was cast by the famous foundry of Mr. Tweedys.

The building is a fine example of early 20th century architecture, and is a valuable asset to the university campus.
