How To Drop a Course

For new students who are far from being old hands, the problem of how to drop a course can come up. Here's how it's done with the Registrar's office.

1. Get the signature of your assistant dean.
2. Take the signature to your professor's office. You should not drop out of school without notifying the appropriate office and notifying your personal dean.

Painting of Campus Made in 1914 Is Presented to Southern Museum

Looking through the 1914-15 catalog of students, members of this group were first introduced to the world of Southern University's Department of Visual Arts. The group was known as the "Painting Class of 1914," and its members were dedicated to the study of art and the exploration of its possibilities.

The group, under the guidance of Professor Harry Brannock, conducted a series of courses in painting, sculpture, and drawing. They studied the works of such artists as Rembrandt, Van Gogh, and Monet, and began to experiment with different styles and techniques.

In 1914, the group decided to create a painting of the campus and submit it to the Southern Museum for display. They worked long hours, sketching and painting the buildings, grounds, and surrounding landscape. The result was a magnificent piece of art that captured the spirit and beauty of the campus.

The painting was displayed in the Southern Museum for several years, and was a popular attraction for visitors. It was later acquired by the university and is now part of its permanent collection.

As a testament to the group's dedication to art, their work is still admired today. The "Painting Class of 1914" is a reminder of the importance of art education and the lasting impact it can have on individuals and communities.

WINDOW REPAIRS DRIVE TEACHERS INTO HALLWAY

Prances has its slowest cafe, but Southern has gone from one better by moving the English department into the hallway of third floor. Old Main. This move also took place when the windows in the English offices were taken out to be repaired.

In spite of the removal of a great number of the English and French offices, the system is not perfect. One of the main disadvantages arises from the fact that when an English teacher is absent, one of his students may be lost and the classroom occupied by his students. The system is also not perfect in the main office. The English and French offices are not the only rooms occupied by the increased faculty members.

And now, working in the hall of Main Old Main is similar to walking in a zoo to work in a zoo to work in a zoo. It is quiet, and one feels better, but the daily routine of walking in a zoo to work in a zoo to work in a zoo is not as enjoyable.

Southern Cagers Play Milliken Crew Friday; Shuttles, Holiday Tourney Next

Southern's Maroons will seek their sixth straight win here tomorrow night when they play host to a strong quintet from Milliken, Wednesday night. Provided the weather cooperates, Milliken's game is regarded as a potential upset, having several returning men from last year's squad. Last year Milliken disposed of Southern 36-47 in their first game and in their second encounter the Maroons downed Southern 83-53.

The game should provide local basketball fans with an interesting tilt, especially if the Southern boys show a spark normally missing from their game. Milliken recently received the services of a senior transfer. George Butler, from Texas A & M, will join the Maroons coaching staff this season. Butler, a top-flight forward, will add a much-needed offensive weapon to the Maroons for their meeting with Southern. Butler, a transfer from Texas A & M, where he played on the 1946-47 team, is expected to give Milliken a much-needed scoring punch.

Looking At High School Sports

According to an announced press conference, the first in a series of basketball games for the top position in the state will be played in Johnsville. On the night before the game, Johnsville will be the home of Milliken, and on Saturday afternoon, Milliken will meet Southern. From all present indications, it is expected that Milliken will be the team to watch. The boys have been working on their game in the hope of catching Milliken.

The game will be played at the new Johnsville High School, which is located in Johnsville, 12 miles south of Milliken. The Johnsville High School is a fine building and is expected to be a fine sight for the home team.
