A request for a study of possible need of a medical school at SIU, made Monday at a meeting of the state Board of Higher Education by President Delyte W. Morris, was promptly opposed Tuesday by Dr. David Dodds Henry, president of the University of Illinois.

Morris asked the board to study the need for medical school facilities, an accompanying hospital and a new campus in southeastern Illinois, in connection with a master plan for higher education in Illinois, which the board is now preparing.

Opposing the request, U. of I. president Henry said, without naming SIU, "A master plan of higher education for Illinois should envision a statewide system, and not reflect the goals and ambitions of the universities themselves. We are in the service of the whole state. Also, I would hope that you would add strength to strength, in the medical school here, rather than starting one somewhere else. The former method would be much more economical."

Morris, by the Board

a) to answer the question: "Should Southern develop into another University of Illinois?" replied:

"As to the present, my answer would be 'No.' As to the future, I would build up for such an institution in Southern Illinois, my answer would be 'Yes.'"

"It would seem logical that equal support should be given to university programs in specialized fields, in the interest of which of our six public universities they are being operated."

"We at Southern are much more concerned with quality than quantity and as maintaining enrollment forces us to expand operations, we plan to do it in an orderly manner. What we would like from this board is clarification for the years ahead as to our growth, including addition of new graduate school programs, may be orderly."

At present, the only state-supported medical school in Illinois is that on the Chicago campus of the University of Illinois."

President Morris was not yet available for further comment.

U Of I President Henry Objects

To Medical School Study For SIU

President and Mrs. Delyte W. Morris will officially open the president's coffee hour at 9:30 a.m. today in the president's office in the University Center.

Thursday's convocations will be in the Roman Room.

At both the 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. sessions, President Morris will read the literary program at the convocations.

Three activities are planned for Saturday. The first will be a children's hour at 1:30 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium with the University Singing Squadron performing. President Morris will read the literary program at the convocations.

Saturday's last activity will be a dance from 9 p.m. to midnight in the University Center Ballroom.

A holiday concert is scheduled for Sunday, consisting of Shryock Auditorium, and starting at 5 p.m., a buffet style dinner will be served in the Roman Room of the University Center.

Interior and exterior decorations will be another feature of the "Season of Holidays" at SIU.

The University Center Programming Board has also announced plans for a faculty book drive "in order to share the reading of those fortunate with those less fortunate than ourselves." The board is seeking three-volume sets of fiction, non-fiction, and biographical material that could be used by students from high school through college.

Books may be left at the Information desk of the Center, or at the Activities Development Office.

Two SIU students are serving as co-chairmen of the week's steering committee. They are Elaine Ochsneren and Warren Steinhorn.

SALUKIS LOST TO WOLVES IN STILLWATER CAGE

SIU's basketball Salukis stayed close to Oklahoma State University through the first half and then faded in the final 20 minutes as the hot-shooting Cowboys went on to a 20-point victory at Stillwater, Okla., Saturday afternoon. It was a good game for coach Jack Hartman's Salukis, who have two quick wins this season.

China Reports Gains 'Despite' US, Russia

TOKYO—With a blant at the Soviet Union, Red China asserted Tuesday its economy is expanding despite crop failures and the loss of Soviet credits and technical aid.

A communiqué marking the end of the second national people's congress in Peking also declared Red China's prestige is rising abroad in spite of "the schemes of U.S., imperialism, reaction and modern revisionism."

Terrorists Strike In Venezuela
CARACAS, Venezuela -- New government-Communist terrorist violence hit Venezuela Tuesday as a tide of votes swept 5 Unions Seeking To Upset Arbiters

WASHINGTON -- Five rail unions have banded together for a legal attack to upset a federal arbitration ruling and the emergency law Congress passed to avert a strike.

The unions said that under the arbitration decision the railroad corporations would have "a 24-hour monopoly on the nation's transportation needs." The remaining small portion will be cleared by the end of 1963 in accordance with the agreements.

The new attacks came after a claim that Red China now "is in the main self-sufficient" in petroleum products. China's known fields are small, but efforts have been made to develop petroleum products from coal and shale.

Elizabeth Bentley, Former Red, Dies
NEW HAVEN, Conn. -- Elizabeth Bentley, 52, admitted Communist spy during World War II who helped expose Red espionage in this country, died Tuesday in Grace-New Haven Hospital. After she renounced Communism 18 years ago, Miss Bentley became a key figure in Communist spy investigations in the United States. At the height of the congressional hearings and investigations by the House Un-American Activities Committee in the late 1940s, Miss Bentley said that she knew such persons as Jacob Golus, Harry Dexter White and Nathan Silvermaster, all of them linked to Communist spying.

Wheelless 'Flying Bathtub' Passes First Flight Test

EDWARDS AFB, Calif.--Air Force Col. Charles Yeager, first man to go faster than the speed of sound, made his first flight Tuesday in a weird, wheelless "flying bathtub" M2 that may become the space craft of the future.

"She handles great," Yeager said after the flight. "You'll see a lot of these in eight or 10 years."

"I think the M2 will fill a gap between the Mercury capsule and the X20, Dynamic space glider. It should be very helpful in re-entry research."

Yeager, 40, commandant of the aerospace research pilot school, flew the experimental M2 to see if it would be able to train future astronauts.

The M2, which looks like a bullet cut in half with the pilot canopy on the flat top side, was developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration as a vehicle which could ferry men or equipment back from space stations.

For Tuesday's flight, Yeager and the M2 were towed to a height of 5,000 feet. There Yeager cut loose from the 20-foot M2 was made without wings to reduce the surface area and thereby the drag. Small tail surfaces on either side of the pod give stability and directional control.

With him he dropped to a few feet above the ground, Yeager tilted the craft nose up and began to cut back his 135 -m.p.h. descent to 90 m.p.h., then landed on the M2's tricycle gear. He rolled to a stop in about 300 feet.
Avant-Garde Publisher Recalls The Twenties

Sitting among the bookshelves she designed for Harry and Estelle Crosby, Visiting Professor of Art History at the University of Virginia, Mrs. Crosby recalled, with obvious pleasure, her experiences in Paris during the 1920s when she and her husband were part of the American colony of artists and writers who were known in the 1920s as the Black Sun Press.

"We were only small fry, mainly because we got our first very small living. Of course there was a lot of noise like Hemingway and all the other writers, but we had the brassier. I recall that the Brassai was the only one who could actually photograph a nude."

"The one thing that women really liked in Paris was the art. Henri Matisse. The Picasso. The Braque. And of course the Dadaists."

Mrs. Crosby, during her first term at Columbia University, was a student in the Art History Department. Her favorite class was "The History of Art" with Professor Fredric Hoyle.

"We would simply sit and listen to him. He was an incredible teacher."

The Crosbys, who had been living in Paris for several years when World War I began, were among the first to leave the city. Mrs. Crosby, who had just turned 21, was one of the few women who were allowed to leave France during the war, as she was a U.S. citizen.

"We were some of the lucky ones. We were on the last train to leave Paris."

The Crosbys returned to the United States in 1918, and Mrs. Crosby began teaching at Columbia University. She later went on to become the first chair of the Art History Department at the University of Virginia.

The Crosbys were known for their love of art and their dedication to the arts. "We were always interested in art," Mrs. Crosby said. "We were always interested in the new and the different."
Prologue

This is neither an academic survey nor a solemn piece of scientific research. It is a sketch, a search to capture some general features based on personal impressions and a certain amount of first-hand experience. It will, admittedly, contain some errors in detail and aspect, and, by contrast, impose a degree of denseness on other aspects. Although it aims to produce a true picture, it cannot be comprehensive or final. Here, of course, I do not propose to deal with topics that already exist in the form of books or articles. Nevertheless, it does come as a contribution to the study or to contest its concept, and it tries to produce a true picture of its own angle of approach, to be or not to be, an attempt to bring to highlight some interesting views, to be or not to be, a personal impression, and a little history.

Abdal M. Abbas

Dr. Abbas, former ambassador to the UN from Iraq, joined the SIU Government this year. He is teaching courses in international relations and the Middle East.

In addition to representing his country in the UN in 1958, he attended many international conferences, including the San Francisco Conference and the United Nations and the Bandung Conference. He has been a government minister in Iraq.

Dr. Frank Klingberg, professor of government, in commenting on Abbas, remarked, said he "has demonstrated his capacity for appreciation of international law, international organizations and Middle East problems.

Tacti Right

Of Self-Help

Not long ago a number of distinguished scholars and statesmen held an international symposium on "Lebanese Democracy." The mood was optimistic and the thought was that Lebanese democracy was on the way to achieving its goal. However, since then, the situation has taken a different turn. In the midst of a political crisis, elections are in the country. Even the demarcations or the electoral divisions of democracy which can be institutionalized forms and procedures in general are not proposed to be altered. It is an attempt to bring to light some interesting views, to be or not to be, a personal impression, and a little history.

TAXI Driver Ethos

Puzzles Tourists

The ethos of taxi drivers is a well-known feature of the Lebanese society. They are usually considered as independent and self-motivated individuals who operate on their own and are not subject to any form of control. However, in recent years, there has been an increase in the number of tourists visiting Lebanon, which has led to some changes in the industry. The driver ethos in Lebanon is a reflection of the country's political and social structure.

Taxi drivers are often seen as symbols of the independence and self-sufficiency of the Lebanese people. They are seen as the backbone of the country's economy and are often portrayed in a positive light in the media. However, their behavior can also be a source of frustration for tourists, who may find them to be uncooperative or difficult to understand.

In recent years, there has been a growing concern among tourists about the behavior of taxi drivers. Many tourists have reported encountering difficulties when trying to communicate with them or when trying to get to their destinations. Some have also reported encountering situations where they felt they were being taken advantage of.

In response to these concerns, the Lebanese government has taken steps to improve the situation. In recent years, there have been efforts to regulate the industry and to provide training for drivers. However, these efforts have not been entirely successful, and many tourists continue to report negative experiences.

As a result, it is important for tourists to be aware of the potential challenges they may encounter when traveling in Lebanon. It is recommended that they do their research before traveling and that they be prepared to deal with any negative experiences that may arise.
