Dorm space near full for spring term

By Ray Urehel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

University Housing occupancy may be a bit “tight” for the spring semester, but enough space should be available for students requesting rooms, said Joseph Gasser, assistant housing director.

Figures compiled through Nov. 4 show that University Housing has 407 requests for spaces, Gasser said.

It is estimated that 200 vacancies in the dorms will occur at the end of fall semester. He said he will send about 300 housing contracts to students who have been admitted to the University by the Office of Admissions and Records.

“It’s a little too early to say” how many spaces will be available next semester, Gasser said. Notice was due Nov. 9 from students who do not expect to live on campus next semester.

If there is a high demand spring semester for on-campus housing, Gasser said, University Housing may be forced to temporarily place some residents in the basements of some dorms. Gasser said he is aware, however, that students are not satisfied with the conditions in the temporary accommodations, which have a maximum of six beds per dorm.

University Housing has 407 students in the basements of on-campus dorms at the beginning of fall semester, but all were relocated after several weeks.

Meanwhile, Gasser said that University Housing “will make no effort” to use the buildings at 600 W. Freeman St. or 422 W. Main St.

“Could begin to get beds and move students,” he said. “But it’s a question of who we want to house for,” he said.

Bruce Strehmehl, vice president for student affairs, said Monday that he hopes both of the off-campus buildings can be operated properly.

University Housing officials have explained that getting those buildings reopened, although Gasser said Sam Rinella, director of University Housing, has not told him where those discussions now stand.

Strehmehl said it seems to be a shame to me that we have a facility that is reasonably good shape and we could not make it available for student residents.”

Gasser said the University could do without the 600 W. Freeman St. and Park Place facilities if they use off-campus housing to its maximum.

Petition circulated for change

By Mike Springer
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A petition to change the form of aldermanic elections in Carbondale is being circulated by a group called the Carbondale Citizens for a More Viable Community (CCVC).

The petition calls for a general election to be held to determine if Carbondale should be divided into wards with one alderman elected from each ward.

The four Carbondale aldermanic council members are currently elected from the City at large.

Student President Doug Diggie said he feels the petition would receive strong support.

“Carpenters of Carbondale northeast and northwest wards have reported to me that there is support,” Diggie said.

Once the signatures are collected, the petition is submitted to the city council. The council then has 45 days to check the signatures. If the petition is approved, the council will then have 45 days to put the motion to a vote in a general election.

Debbie DiCarlo, junior in social welfare, pauses to reflect on a silk-screen by Robert Duncan, assistant professor in the School of Technical Careers.

Duncan, whose work will be on exhibit in the south end of the Home Economics Building until break, said of his work, “Silk-screening is something that appeals to me visually, and that’s how I express myself.” (Staff photo by Chuck Fishman)

IBHE OKs $2.2 million for SIU-C

CHICAGO—The Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) here Tuesday approved a $2.2 million capital improvement for SIU, funding $501,000 to University Housing for equipment and remodeling.

The package, one of a total of 21 projects involving $1.4 million in building remodeling work, will purchase new equipment and about $100,000 in landscaping and other site improvements.

Funding for the non-instructional capital improvement projects will come from federal grants and internal sources, such as dormitory revenue reserves and auxiliary enterprises.

The University Housing remodeling project, estimated to cost $358,000, will include consulting work on power and air conditioning needs, installation of air conditioning, repair and construction of facilities including kitchen areas in student apartments. Most of the remodeling will be done in the Southern Hills married student housing.

The University also plans to spend $175,000 to replace lounge furniture, washing machines, kitchen equipment, mattresses and other moveable equipment.

Parking lot expansions currently financed by $400,000 in parking fees, are planned for the lots near the SIU Arena and Anthony Hall and construction of a new lot near Small Group Housing.

Parking fees will also be used for a $500,000 site improvement project that will provide for bicycle pads and parking pads for an additional 2,000 bicycles in various locations on campus.

Presently, the University has 4,000 spaces for bicycles.

The University anticipates grants totaling $150,000 to provide for additional specialized laboratory, instructional and clinical equipment.

The IBHE also approved plans to remodel Life Science Buildings 1 and 2 and Wheeler Hall to accommodate the SIU School of Medicine. The funds from anticipated grants will be used to install state-of-the-art, expanded distillation water production and hook up specialized equipment. The cost of the project is expected to be $250,000.

In other action, the IBHE approved a new masters degree in mining engineering and approved a reorganization of the SIU-C College of Education.

Course work for the mining engineering degree will be provided by three departments in the School of Engineering and Technology. The course will stress coal extraction, coal utilization, environmental effects and basic science related to coal mining.

All students working toward the degree will be required to have one term of internship in coal industries, research institutes or governmental agencies.

The University requested an additional $25,120 for fiscal year 1977 for facade positions, research and instructional costs and a fine-tuning of $50,000 for start-up equipment.

The College of Education will dissolve the curriculum, instruction and media and the Department of Educational Leadership.

New alderman election system sought

The people are well represented as I see it,” Jones said. “No section is being neglected in Carbondale and the goals of the community are being met.”

With the ward form of government, “you might get a help in your area and I’ll help yours,” Jones said.

Jones added that a lot of people involved might be using the petition to oust City Manager Carrol. J. Fry.

“I feel some of the people may have personal grievances rather than the good will of the city at heart,” Jones said.

The petition may have 10 percent of the popular vote in the last mayoral election. Only voters in five existing departments and combination of the petition. The last mayoral election saw 4,200 votes cast.

Once the signatures are collected, the petition is submitted to the city council. The council then has 60 days to check the signatures. If the petition is approved, the council may then have 60 days to put the motion to a vote in a general election.

FBI accused of 'dirty tricks' against Klan

WASHINGTON (AP)—A top FBI official Tuesday called the campaign against the Ku Klux Klan the bureau's "finest hour." But a one-time informant said agents really tried to keep the Klan attacks against blacks and civil rights workers.

The informant, Gary Thornton, said the FBI was also trying to prop up the Senate Intelligence Committee that FBI officials concerned his participation in the violence. The informant said agents did it to get information and sow division within the Klan by sleeping with the wives of as many Klan members as possible, he said.

Robt. Adams, the FBI's deputy assistant director, said the FBI has not implicated his investigation, testified. Rowe never was told to involve himself in violence or sexual activities.

House approves Ford's Ny aid plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House on Tuesday approved President Ford's $2.5-billion plan proceed with an amendment to the measure to the Senate where the passage was expected despite a planned filibuster.

New York Mayor Abraham Beame said he expected Senate approval within a week.

House passage was by a 213-200 vote.

Rep. Debott Latta, R-Ohio, urged the House not to approve the aid on the grounds that citizens of New York should not have continuously elected the politicians who put the city's financial into the crisis.

Toniunes said free space would be given to the city's fiscal year which ends June 30. Users would then have 60 days to apply for the space for the following year.

City council offers rent-free office space

The Carbondale City Council voted to make free office space available to interested non-profit community organizations.

The 1,850 square feet of unfurnished office space at 404 E. South Main St., will be divided among five groups at no cost to the city.

Robert Tonnes, property manager of the city's downtown office complex, said that the city was deferring to the wishes of the community.

Finance director Paul Sorgen said the city's current occupancy rate is 68 percent, and the city is seeking to rent additional space.

Councilman Neil Eckert and the city council, Fry said free use of office space is for community development projects.

The city's downtown office complex is owned by the city's downtown office complex.

City manager Craig Foy, said he was not aware of any interest in the space.

Councilman Helen Westberg also gave up a free space. "The very existence of the center depends on the revenues collected from rent," she said.

Councilman Joseph Dabin favored allowing office space for community organizations and suggested the city use the vacant space in the Center to accommodate the Ground Block Grant to meet any losses incurred by the city.

Jury argued that the availability of free space is for the public to use for community gatherings that section of town a proposal was made to the city. The city is looking for a location to accommodate the new office space.

No group has inquired about the space, said Tonnes. Norville Hayes, a representative for More Viable Community, said his group is interested in acquiring an office for its use.

Hayes said he would bring it to the attention of the Southern Illinois Union Council and the NAACP that free space was available.

Collective bargaining will insure mediocrity

By Mary E. Gardner

It appears that collective bargaining among both Civil Service Workers and faculty members at SIU is inevitable.

Herbert Donow, Faculty Senate president, says the faculty wants it and he has an opinion poll of faculty members saying, by a small margin, that they support collective bargaining.

Lee Hester of the Civil Service Council is determined to give collective bargaining to Civil Service employees on campus, whether they want it or not. A survey being taken by Hester and the council’s Steering Committee gives respondents two choices. One says, “Yes, I support collective bargaining and 2. I need more information (implying that anyone who knows enough about collective bargaining to have an opinion could not possibly respond negatively).”

It can’t be denied that Civil Service employees on this campus are paid substantially less than their counterparts at other Illinois universities. Even when the differences in costs of living in different areas are taken into consideration, SIU Civil Service employees are on a lower pay scale.

Perhaps collective bargaining for these persons is the only answer to an administration which does not allot enough money to bring equity to Civil Service salaries.

Persons in favor of faculty collective bargaining argue that faculty members should have input in decisions regarding salaries, promotions, tenure and research time.

When members of a group get together to determine what gets what sort of raise, promotion, tenure or research time it may be taken into consideration what they themselves are paid and base the other guy’s allocation on their own.

Thus, if one faculty member gets a very low raise and little or no promotion or research time he or she will probably vote against any such credit for other faculty members.

Group reasoning goes further than this too. As time goes on the standard of “from each according to his need” will develop. The upshot of this will be that the most capable faculty members will do the most work and have the most responsibility; but those who really “need” the benefits of high salary will be the ones to get it.

Many a faculty member has looked through Board of Trustees’ approved pay raises by other faculty members and said “So that’s what that burn is getting.

When bargaining on behalf of a collective whole is instituted, the whole may improve its conditions, but those members who “deserve” the benefits on the basis of capability never get it. Only those who would not otherwise have received such benefits improve their circumstances.

Collective bargaining, unionization, has been limited, for the most part, to the “little guys” who have jobs which just about anyone can do. (Doesn’t this, by definition, apply to Civil Service employees?)

But on the other hand, in jobs where the individual makes a difference and the quality of the work is directly related to the individual performing that work, individuals have bargaining power on their own. Competent people may not be irreplaceable, but they can always get other work. Someone else is always willing to hire competent people for better pay and under improved conditions.

So what would students gain from faculty collective bargaining?

They will get faculty members who are very difficult to get rid of even though they teach the same material they were teaching in 1956. There is no reason for self improvement in such a system.

It’s a pretty safe bet that all students have at one time or another had a good professor who just happened to be in just this side of senility. If they have only run across one such person they may count themselves very lucky indeed.

Collective bargaining will protect these people just as collective bargaining in industry does. It will assure students at SIU that they are to get and keep the most uninspiring of the great mediocrity, of which there are so many members.

It will insure greater tuition for higher paid instructors and less qualified professors.

Instructors and professors who are of the highest quality will go where they can individually command greater salaries.

Collective bargaining has traditionally been used for those who have no bargaining power on their own: the persons in the great mass who individually wield very little power and have very little to offer by themselves, but who, in large groups, can command their fair share—and more.

So when SIU faculty members talk about collective bargaining, it might be interesting to note who is doing the talking. It may give insight as to what they think of themselves.
Revolutionary times are good for business

By Scott Allen
Staff Writer

In the wake of the new interest in the "revolution" generated by Patty Hearst's escapades, I recently set out on my own "revolution" in the Carbondale area.

A friend who is on good terms with the neighborhood revolutionaries told me he could arrange an interview with the right person, and on the appointed night I was dropped off by my limousine driver in the Carbondale area.

Minutes after I dropped off, several fatigued-clad figures came out of the house and approached me. One of them asked me my name, then told me to follow them down a narrow hallway. I came upon a silver-grey Lincoln parked on the side of the road. As we approached, one of the men told me to get in.

The driver, who was waiting in the car, extended the door to another man and started the engine. As we drove away, I met the business-suited driver reached over to shake hands.

"I'm Letterbaum," he said, "Stanley Letterbaum. I know you who are. Uh, why don't we conduct this interview over cocktails at the Holiday Inn?"

Still somewhat confused, I asked Letterbaum, "Are you the head of COLA?"

"Uh, not actually the head," came the reply. "A board of directors makes all important decisions, but I'm a sort of unofficial public relations officer."

But I thought revolutionaries were scruffily looking people, with wild eyes and beards, like those men back in the war. But they're actually real revolutionaries, I heard revolution won't like that to, too. We bought all rights to SLOP (Society for Leeching Off Parents) and ARS (Archives Research Society). We're a political organization of marijuana and a '68 Chey, merged the two groups, and formed COLA. Even real revolutionaries have a press.

"But who were those people back there?"

"Oh, just some college students. The guns are made of wood. College students will do anything for a few free bucks, no questions asked."

By this time we had arrived at the Holiday Inn, and after parking, the driver met me at the lots and around the bar. I continued the questioning.

"Mr. Letterbaum," I began, "if what you say is true, and you bought the札mns for the other business, exactly what does the organization do?"

"Well, we certainly do have revolutionary times. Real revolutions are bad for business. COLA, like the SLA, is part of the company I work for-Revolutionary News, Inc.

"What does your company do if it's not in revolution business?"

"Quite simple," he said. "We create news. We have agreements with the news media, unwritten of course, but partly also, because you don't seem to be able to get in. We operate and state what make people lose faith in their leaders. As I said about the CIA, 'Extreme measures can be taken in lieu of bond.' We plan and state that. Business first, truth second. Have a drink, kid, and don't worry. At least you're employed, right?"

Keep the faith, cynics

By Arthur Hoppe

"Oh, Dick, that's a lovely interview you gave the Ladies Home Journal. And you're absolutely right about this country becoming so cynical. What do you think caused it?"

"Well, as I noted in that interview, Pat, we have very little leadership in our country today."

"Was that an attack on Gerry Ford, dear?"

"As a stateorganizer, I am above petty politics. Pat, I simply meant that when people lose faith in their leaders, they become cynical.

But what you and your leaders, dear?"

"Congress, Congress and the media. As I pointed out in that interview, 'A congress or a parliament can paralyze leadership.' I know that for a fact. As for me, I've been living in the country for a bit too, believing young people. Look at Woodward and Bernstein. They're nothing but children."

"Oh, it's so sad that Congress and the media have made people cynical about their leaders. But what can we do about it?"

"Well, as I told that interviewer, 'It may take the people to stop injustice. And the American lives are threatened, we may regain our sense of belief in our country and our need for leadership.'"

Confusion concerning bike violation raises ire of cyclist

To the Daily Egyptian:

On Oct. 16, I was fined $20 by a Carbondale judge for not having a license plate on my bicycle. My driver's license was taken in lieu of bond.

When I was arrested, the officer did not ticket me for not having a license plate on my bicycle. My driver's license was taken in lieu of bond without me being asked or told why.

This, I am sure you will agree, is bad, but what I am about to tell you sickens me as I recall the thought. A young black student was arrested for a similar offense on a September afternoon. He, too, had no license on his bike. He was arrested, handcuffed, and taken to jail until his friends could get his bail money together at 11 p.m. The judge was not even curious as to why the young man had been handcuffed for such a minor offense. He found the young man innocent of running the stop sign, the evidence was very flimsy, but fined him $25 for not licensing his bicycle. "That will take care of your band," he said.

It seems rather apparent to me that crosses still burn in the minds of some of the local officials. Racism is a nasty word, one that most white folks scramble to avoid at least superficially. But your "honor," I do believe that you were just a mile too obvious-obvious enough for this poor white boy to realize that, while I may have been bitten by your mad dog justice, I simply did not stop and ask questions.

I believe in the principles of America, I believe that there is no sin more than the sin of prejudice. The people stopped the war, the stopped Nixon, the people can stop unfair implementation of the "law."

Robert Lindberg
Graduate Student
Child and Family

Editor's note-Police Chief Kenneth, tole spokesman for the Carbondale police force, said Lindberg's bike violation was put on his driving record because anyone who has a driver's license is considered to be breaking any of the Rules of the Road the violation put on his driving record. He said bicycles are included in the Rules of the Road manual. However, Gymberg, the police representative from the Secretary of State's Office Driver's Services Division, said a bike violation may not be placed on a person's driving record because the violation must take place while driving a motor vehicle. Judge Bob Schwartz, responding to why he didn't ask about the black man being handcuffed, said it is standard procedure for anyone taken into the station to be handcuffed.

AS FOR ME, I'VE BEEN LIVING IN THE COUNTRY FOR A BIT TOO, BELIEVING YOUNG PEOPLE. LOOK AT WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN. THEY'RE NOTHING BUT CHILDREN."

Zionist to speak on U.N. resolution

The Rev. John Gravel, co-recipient of the 1972 International Humanitarian Award with Pope Paul, will speak on the recent United Nations resolution condemning Zionism as racism at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Morris Library Auditorium.

Gravel is a Methodist minister from New York and a member of the New York Racial-Peace Commission designed to combat anti-black and anti-Jewish racism.

A Christian Zionist, Gravel believes the Jewish people have a historical and religious right to their homeland in Israel, said Rabbi Earl Vineour, of the SU Hillel Foundation.

Gravel has won world recognition as a champion of human rights. Vineour said. He added Gravel fought for Israel's independence and was on board the refugee ship Exodus 1965.

"We're bringing Gravel here because we feel that the SU campus has been 'blanketed with anti-Zionist views," said Vineour.

"It's important for students in an academic center to know world issues. The speaker is of international reputation and will be able to answer questions of Arab students and others that may have misconceptions about what Zionism really is," said Vineour.

Gravel will also speak on the crisis in Lebanon, Palestinian refugees and hopes for peace in the Middle East.

The lecture and question session is co-sponsored by the Hillel Foundation and Christian Friends. Admission is free.

Activist to talk about change

George Lakey, pacifist author, lecturer and activist, will hold a lecture and discussion on "Creative and Non-Violent Social Change" at 8 p.m., Friday, in the Wesley Community House, 865 S. Illinois Ave.

Lakey, 37, is author of "Strategy for a Living Revolution." He taught for four years at the Martin Luther King Graduate School for Social Change in Pennsylvania and is a founder of the Movement for a New Society.

Richard Taylor, writing in "The Progressive" magazine, called Lakey's "five stages of nonviolent revolution" a major contribution to revolutionary thought.

Who said, "Broken rules are all the same"?

"Ordinary people do extraordinary things when they are in an extraordinary situation," said John Gravel.

"When the going gets tough, the tough get going," he added.

Lakey's appearance is being co-sponsored by the Student Christian Foundation, Cardonelia Friends Meeting, Wesley Community House, Cardonelia Peace Center and the SU Student Government.

Lakey, a Quaker, has co-authored three other books and has spoken in Scandinavia, Britain, New Zealand and Germany, as well as in the US.

Swimming classes seek help

The Murphysboro Tri-County School, which serves handicapped persons in Jackson, Perry and Union counties, needs volunteers to help teach swimming classes.

Jill Blank, program assistant, said the swimming classes are held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at the YMCA on South Drive.

Volunteers can be "anyone who is interested," she said. "They have to know how to swim," she said. The preferred ratio for student to help is "about one adult to two students," although this is not necessary for the younger swimmers.

About 36 volunteers are needed for the classes, she said. The Monday class has about 24 students from 15 to 23 years old, she said. The Wednesday class has from 20 to 30 students from 10 to 15 years old and the Friday class has between 15 to 17 students in the 10 and below age group. Staff from the school and the YMCA swimming instructor also help with the classes.

Holloway also said volunteers were needed in the tutoring program, recreation projects and juggling classes and basketball practice but "the swimming class is the most important."

Volunteers interested in going to the YMCA during the swimming classes can contact Blank at the Murphysboro Tri-County School, 1725 Shomaker Drive.

Translator says Solzhenitsyn combines Russian art, politics

Michael Glenny, visiting research associate at the HU Center for Soviet and East European Studies, has translated British of American editions of three works by Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the exiled Russian author.

The 40-year-old British scholar discussed Solzhenitsyn as artist and political philosopher during an interview at Glenny’s office.

“I’m a tremendous admirer of Solzhenitsyn. He is a masterful translator of The First Circle,” “August 1914,” and “Albert Stories and Prose Poems,”” he said. “I hope Glenny would take pains to point out that I would lose my critical perspective.”

While Glenny takes issue with some of the book’s barbs, such as his advocacy of continuing the war with Vietnam, he finds much to admire in Solzhenitsyn as an artist.

“At moments I get fed up with him as a writer of fine art. He has no humor, no wit. In this he is firmly anchored in the realist tradition of Russian literature.”

“Solzhenitsyn lays it out like a master,” said Glenny, slamming his palm down on the table.

“Solzhenitsyn is a walking, talking case history of the incomprehensible—to us in the

Los Alamos laboratory seeks summer research assistants

The Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in New Mexico is now accepting applications for summer research assistants. Positions are open to graduate and undergraduate students receiving degrees in science or engineering by June and who intend to continue with graduate studies. U.S. citizenship is required.

Application forms and additional information may be obtained from the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance, Woody Hall, 3rd floor.

The Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory has major research and development programs in controlled Thermonuclear energy; Geothermal Energy; Solar Energy; Reactor Fuels; Reactor Systems Analysis; Laser Fusion and Isotope Separation; Superconducting Transmission Lines; Radioactive Waste Disposal; Weapons Systems and basic research in physics, chemistry, radioactivity, materials and environmental science.

Summer employees will become involved in several aspects of scientific research and development related as closely as possible to the individual field of interest.

Salaries, based on level of education and relevant experience, begin at $900 per month. Travel expenses are paid to and from Los Alamos. Kitchensette apartments are available at moderate cost.

Summer research assistants will be selected on the basis of the applicant’s academic record, experience and interests and the recommendation of professors. Selections will be made in February and applicants will receive notification of the laboratory’s decision as soon as possible thereafter.

Interested students should submit the application forms by Jan. 1 to provide sufficient time for review of qualifications and obtaining the necessary Energy Research and Development Administration security clearance.

Applications will not be considered without transcripts of all completed undergraduate and graduate work.

SIU television stations to undertake fund drive

SIU’s television stations, WSIU-TV (Channel 8, Carbondale) and WSIU-IV (Channel 16, Olney) will undertake a fund-rising drive to collect money for public television programming in the area Friday through Dec. 15.

A series of mini-telethons, featuring entertainment under the slogan “See the Results in Better Programming,” will be broadcast from 6:30 p.m. to about midnight each evening. The telethon will be interrupted by regularly scheduled programs from the Public Broadcasting System (PBS).

A pledge of $10 or more during the telethon will bring donors a monthly television guide. Viewers may phone in pledges or take them to the WSIU-TV studios in the Communications building during the live broadcasts.

Hosts for the telethon will include faculty members from the Department of Radio and Television and WSIU-TV personnel.

Proceeds from the drive will help the stations purchase programs from PBS. Since last year it has been necessary for individual stations to buy programs from PBS.

In love? It could be matter of indigestion, scientists say

By Paul Saliek
Daily Times correspondent

A person who seems to be in love could be suffering from indigestion, depending on how he or she looks at it, say a number of behavioral scientists.

Ellen Berscheid, a professor in sociology and psychology at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis, and Elaine Walster, a professor in sociology and psychology at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, recently published an article entitled "ALittle Bit of Theory for the Love of Us All." Walster, in a telephone interview, said love "is probably important in our psychology life." She added, "Until recently people tended to look love as something to be understood.

But breakthroughs in the social sciences have changed that attitude, she said. Specifically, she was referring to a concept called 'attraction,' by Edward Schacht, a professor of psychology at Columbia University. The theory says two factors must exist simultaneously for a person to experience love. First, a person must be physiologically aroused. This may be an increase in heart rate or body temperature. Second, this arousal must be associated with a particular emotion based on cues in the environment.

Schacht's theory may be illustrated with an example. After seeing a lion, a person may feel 'fearful' and begin feeling as if he or she were in danger. Experiencing the same feeling about a beautiful woman of the opposite sex may be identified as love.

An article in Psychology Today, a newsletter of SIU's psychology department, said researchers have been unable to differentiate physiologically emotional states.

"It has not been possible to differentiate the bodily changes related to joy as compared to anger, or frustration as compared to disgust," he said.

In their article, Berscheid and Walster differentiate between passionate love and other types of interpersonal attraction. They define passionate love as a combination of 'romantic love and sexual attraction.' Loving can be explained by what is called a positive reinforcement, or reward, theory. This theory, according to Berscheid and Walster, says "the more we interact with a person in a positive manner, the more we are attracted to that person."

They believe passionate love differs from liking in three important areas and cannot be explained by evidence for the positive reinforcement theory of attraction.

The two psychologists believe fantasy are of prime importance in passionate love. In their article they state, "The most intense passion is generated by partners who exist only in imagination, or by partners who are only imagined by interactions in real life love objects seem to be far more complex."

Berscheid and Walster hypothesize that passionate love differs from liking in its fragility. Authors of marriage and family texts seem to agree that intense passion is a temporary phenomenon. They believe that after a time, a person's feelings are less affected by rewards which an individual fantasizes he will receive from his partner, and more affected by actual rewards received.

Berscheid and Walster believe passionate love involves a variety of conflicting emotions. The authors point out the original meaning of passion was "agony." Students at several universities, when allowed to ask psychologists one question, most frequently asked, "Can you love and hate someone at the same time?"

If the reward theory of attraction was applicable to passionate love, people would fall in love only with "beautiful, wise, entertaining, and wealthy people," say the authors. "Some people, with satisfying accuracy, seem to fall passionately in love with people who are available to them, which means suffering and material deprivation."

Berscheid and Walster's "prescriptive theory" is that people will experience love whenever they are intensely aroused and situational cues indicate passionate love is the appropriate label for their feelings. According to this theory, fear, rejection and frustration may enhance romantic passion.

Little research has been done in the specific area of romantic love, but in their article Berscheid and Walster have collected other work which seems to support their idea. They say "a great deal of research must be done. At the present time, however, the two authors' theory seems to be an effective way to organize the little we know about love."

Berscheid, in a telephone interview, said, "People-formerly believed love to be a personal and sacred area. If they didn't "live happily ever after," they blamed it on 'falling in love,'" they blamed it on "fascination with intoxication with infatuation. People are getting more demanding," she said. She believes her research may help people to increase their chances for successful relationships.

In a separate article, "The only man to ride with both the Hell's Angels and Richard Nixon," Dr. Hunter S. Thompson of the National Affairs Editor of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, said, "People-formerly believed love to be a personal and sacred area. If they didn't "live happily ever after," they blamed it on 'falling in love,'" they blamed it on "fascination with intoxication with infatuation. People are getting more demanding," she said. She believes her research may help people to increase their chances for successful relationships.

Schilpp refuses to participate in Unification cult conference

By Dan Hofmann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Paul A. Schilpp, SIU visiting professor of philosophy, refused to attend the Fourth International Conference on the Unity of Sciences held last weekend in New York City. He said the conference was a front for the Unification Church and attending would be like lending his name to a conference sponsored by Hitler or Stalin or Nixon.

Speaking from his home, where he is convalescing from a heart attack he suffered in September, Schilpp said he couldn’t support the conference sponsored by the religious cult because it is run by a religious leader from a country that he said was practicing “practical and total” nuclear blackmail.

Schilpp said he first learned about the Unification Church and its connection with the conference in an editorial that appeared in the September 19 issue of the Christian Century, a leading scholarly monthly. The editorial said Schilpp’s name to a conference sponsored by Schilpp said he first learned about the Unification Church and its connection with the conference in an editorial that appeared in the September 19 issue of the Christian Century, a leading scholarly monthly. The editorial said the church is a front for a cult run by a religious leader from a country that he said was practicing “practical and total” nuclear blackmail.

Schilpp said that by attending the conference, scholars would lend credibility to the conference. “It wasn’t the purpose of the conference that we objected to. Our objections came when the guy who headed the religion was using our names to enhance his universal church,” Schilpp said.

“I have always stood up for what I believe to be right,” Schilpp said. “But in this case I did not feel that I can support good conscience this conference.”

The conference included, on an expense-paid basis, some of the most renowned people of the world, including Nobel Laureates. Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review, and Buckminster Fuller, formerly of SIU, were both invited and refused to attend, Schilpp said.

Schilpp was not invited to the conference. He said the paper and other discussions presented at the conference had been published. “Once they (other scholars) learn what this is, they will not support it,” Schilpp said. He said those scholars who attended probably didn’t realize the Unification Church would benefit from the gathering.

Carbondale to assist towns in analyzing water supplies

By Tom Chooser
Student Writer

The City of Carbondale’s Central Laboratory has agreed to assist four southern Illinois communities in analyzing water supplies. The location of the laboratory is 10 miles north of Carbondale.

The City of Carbondale’s Central Laboratory is one of three labs approved by the Department of Public Health to analyze public water supplies. The other two labs are located in Marion and Carbondale.

The Department of Public Health and the Illinois EPA suggested that the Central Lab test public water supplies in cities that require a state lab to examine their water supplies. The monthly checks made by the Illinois EPA, said Alison Omert, the city’s chemist and lab supervisor.

The law requires that all public water supplies supplying 500 or more people provide water test results to the Illinois EPA lab in Marion. Omert said the test frequency averages about one for every 1,000 people served by a water utility with a water supply serving 500 or more people.

Among the communities that have received assistance are East St. Louis, Alton and Marion.

Omert stressed that the Central Lab is only an approved testing lab and not an enforcement agency. “If a water supply is found to be contaminated with bacteria the Illinois EPA will be informed along with the Department of Public Health and they will be the ones to shut the water down until it can be decontaminated,” she said.

Adorning denim clothes

new American folk art

By The Associated Press

Decorated denim is emerging from the closets of the flower children to the wardrobes of the middle and upper class as a new form of American folk art.

Stitchwork, embroidery, beads, acrylie, sequins, buttons, tassles, patches, studs, and sequins are adorning the latest in fancy pants and jazzy jeans. "It is not confined to the harried lady madonnas living on brown rice and macaroni," says Peter Beagle, author of "American Denim, a New Folk Art"—a picture of denim wear—published by Harry N. Abrams, Inc. this month.

"In recent years, the rich and powerful have become almost com­" placated about living in the traditional costumes of the variously rebellious, worn-out, penniless and freaky.

"It isn’t just a matter of current chic: there is something plaintively haunting about photographs of people like Nelson A. Rockefeller, Elizabeth Taylor, Marlene Dietrich, and Frank Sinatra wearing blue jeans and slungare jackets."

Heavy rains during Thanksgiving toakage, rains during Thanksgiving vakation caused new leaks in the th north wing of the Communications Building, but a Physical Plant spokesman said repair work will probably be completed this month.

Leaks in the Cinema and Photography Department and the Journalism Reference Center resulted from the heavy rains.

The Physical Plant spokesman said Neal Brothers Roofing Com-pamy in Mt. Vernon has been working on the roof for about a month. The company has set no date for completion but repair work should be completed this month, he said.

Neal Brothers were subcontractors of the north wing roof and are under warranty to make the repairs, the spokesman said.

E.T. Simmons Construction
Company was the contractor.

Rino Bianchi, director of facility planning, said the company had made repairs on the north wing roof and were waiting for a lengthy period of bad weather to see if the repairs would hold. He said the heavy rains provided the test of the repairs.

Clarence "Doe" Dougherty, director of area services, said he asked the College of Communications to alert him of all new leaks. He said before the company finishes the building, "there will be no leaks."

Bianchi said Phase II is five years old. A negotiated agreement from the original building contract provided for the current repair work.

Olive Brown Trio
cancels concert

The Olive Brown Trio concert scheduled for Dec. 9 as a part of the SU Convocation Series has been cancelled, according to Paul Hibbs, coordinator of special programs.

Hibbs said the concert won’t be held because "the management company with which we deal advised us to cancel." No substitute has been booked, Hibbs said.

The next scheduled Convocation concert will be a poetry reading by poet Gwendolyn Brooks on Jan. 28.

rains during Thanksgiving vacation caused leaks

Beer can hobbyist's collection numbers 350 different types

By Rich Schumacher
Student Writer

Mick Pike's friends aren't surprized anymore when they see him drinking a strange brand of beer from a blue and silver can. Pike, a senior in political science, collects foreign beer cans and has about 350 different cans.

He has devised a special "punch" to remove seamless cans from the bottom to preserve the flip-tops because the cans are much more valuable with the original tabs on them, he says.

His collection consists of cans from Japan, Australia, Holland, Germany, Mexico, Finland, Spain, and Scotland.

He said he bought most of these in liquor stores, which stock imported beer, although "a friend of mine stationed in Spain used to send me different brands," Pike said.

"About once a month I drive around to every liquor store in Carbondale to check out its selection," he said. "I never take cans from the corner of a six-pack because they are usually scratched.

The two inside cans are best."

"When he is out driving he stops when he spots an unusual can near the road, he said. But the flip­tops are almost always missing, thinning their value.

Pike has also learned how to straighten out dented cans. He adds an inch of water to the can, waits until it freezes solid and then keeps adding an inch each time until the can is flat.

"He said he even has some cans which he obtained directly from breweries and which are completely sealed and empty. He said he has sampled almost all of the beer from his collection, "Some wasn't exactly too good," he said. "I've taken a swallow of some and thrown the rest down the drain."

He said he has spent from $200 to $250 on his collection, and that it is probably now worth between $400 and $500. He bases that on figures from the "World Wide Beer Can Collector's Guide."

"Most collectors from on selling cans," Pike said. "They prefer to use them traded. I traded a little bit, but then I stopped because most people have old, rusted, tab-less cans."

"I don't collect them for money," he says. "I just enjoy it.

Chinese women's hoop team leaves impression on West

By Mark Kasowski

Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

At least one person has completed her three days of experience with the touring-women's basketball team from the People's Republic of China without seeing a game.

Charlotte West, SIU women's athletic director, said she was impressed with Chinese women and "how caring and attentive they were with each other."

"I felt I gained an awful lot personally from being with them from early in the morning to late at night."

As Commissioner of National Championships for the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW), West served as a hostess to the Chinese team while they were in New York City Nov. 23 to 26.

The AIAW and the National Committee on United States-China Relations, Inc., cosponsored the five-city tour by the Chinese women's team.

The Chinese played U.S. women's teams in Los Angeles; Memphis, Tenn.; Rochester, N.Y.; New York City and Washington, D.C.

West said that at one point in the game with Queens College in Madison Square Garden in New York, the Chinese players stopped a fast break to help a player up who had fallen.

West was on the panel that selected the teams the Chinese would play.

"We made our decision on the strength of the U.S. teams and the metropolitan area," West said. The idea was for the Chinese to play where they would see the most of the country and where a larger number of fans could attend.

With this exchange program in women's athletics, West said she had "kind of a feeling that we (women's athletics) have arrived."

She said the Chinese were so pleased with the tour that there may be a chance of other women's teams from China touring the United States or even an American women's team touring China.

West, who has spent some 25 years with women's basketball, estimated the Chinese women to be about eight years behind the top international women's basketball teams.

"They would not do well internationally," she said. "Even the big girls did not have a good inside game. They depend on outside shooting and fast breaks.

"They have the long shots. They're deadly, and they're as slick as greased lightning."

The Chinese women average 5-4; the two tallest players are 6-0.

"They commit very few ball handling errors," West said.
Wrestlers face Cowboys Thursday

By Scott Burnside

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Wrestling starts with an 'Oakie' beat Thursday night when SIU wrestlers face off against tough Oklahoma State University at the Arena. Starting at 7:30 p.m. When asked how many years Oklahoma State has won the Big Eight conference in wrestling, Liem Long said, "Oklahoma State has been the Big Eight champs forever." This year shouldn't be any exception. The Oklahoma State team facing the Salukis will have been preparing within its muscular ranks.

There are five All-Americans: Billy Martin (186 pounds), Steve Barrett (196 pounds), Paul Martin (120 pounds), John Jackson (192 pounds) and McAllister (177 pounds).

Matching up against Oklahoma State will be John Gross (118 pounds), Joe Goldsmith (192 pounds), Bill Ramdon (138 pounds), Clyde Ruffin (150 pounds), Jay Frederick (183 pounds), Jim Horvath (187 pounds), Mark Wiesen (177 pounds), Tim Swoboda (190 pounds) and Rod Sherrill (200 pounds).

Long said he is concerned about Cowden at 142. "Den is filling in at that spot," he said. "He is really a 194 pound wrestler." Ramdon beat Cowden in the first round of the intrasquad rank-off for the 142 slot and Cowden is not expected to pepper the other weight classes, Long said.

"The kids said if they wrestled perfectly, we could win those six matches," Long speculated. "I won't say who they are because I don't want that kind of pressure upon them. They have enough self pressure to contend with."

Last year the Salukis lost to Oklahoma State, 34-4, but Long doesn't put much importance on scores against the Cowboys. "We could get beat 36-4 and come out winners. It's going to be a good educational experience for the team. On the other hand, if we don't win, I'm going to be disappointed," Long said.

"If we go into the meet and feel we're better than Oklahoma State internally, we've got a good chance for good things to happen." Long said Oklahoma State is ranked in the top five nationally, while SIU has received an honorable mention in the early year polls. "Of the reasons for the honorable mention status of Mark Wiesen, SIU's top wrestler last year," Long said. Wiesen has never beaten an Oklahoma State wrestler without losing a conference match against Thursday's meet.

"I'm preparing for them just like any other team. I have no idea who I'm going to wrestle this time," he said. Last year he was pitted against a national champion, B. It's Wiesen's main goal to be a national collegiate champion. For the last two years he has qualified for the nationals. In his sophomore year he placed third and last year Wiesen was eliminated early.

He has been wrestling since the seventh grade in Fenton, Michigan, where he was state champion in the 146 pound class. Wiesen considers his sophomore year as his best season when he accumulated a 29-7 record. Last year he went 22-6 for the best record on the Salukis.

"In order to win Thursday night Wiesen feels his mental outlook will have to be tops. "I have to be mentally prepared. You can't go out there without any mental preparation. I think it's going to be a good match," he said.

Archie Griffin awarded second Heisman Trophy

NEW YORK (AP) - Ohio State's Archie Griffin, major college football's first 5,000-yard runner, overcame his lack of size, averaged the counts of 11 teams determined to ring his bell and became the second Heisman Trophy Tuesday.

"I really like to be compared to this year," the 5-foot-9, 184-pound sensation told after becoming the first Heisman repeat winner of the century, the Heisman Trophy Tuesday.

"I really tried not to think about the Heisman all year but I couldn't really get it off my mind a whole lot," Griffin explained. "I kept reminding me about it." Griffin was given the award not only because he had a job to do every Saturday.

"In a way, it was a relief to get out on the field on Saturday even though I was getting beat pretty hard and I had to budge up half the week. The hitting was a lot harder this year. It was rough out there."

Senior Mark Wiesen isn't wrestling a headless man, it's really freshman Tom Vizzi as the Salukis prepare for the match against Oklahoma State Thursday evening, Wiesen has won three wrestling letters for SIU and is considered a highlight in the starting lineup. (Staff photo by Carl Wagner)

Basketballers chase Chikas home by rail

By Dave Wieczorek

Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

They came in by train and went out by train, apparently headed for their happy hunting grounds. The Chikas from the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle came into the SIU Arena Monday night for the Salukis' 1975-76 basketball debut and were completely outclassed 82-50.

I don't mean to take a cheap shot at the warriors from the north, but the Chikas certainly were no match for SIU's or any other university division squad. They might even have trouble in a 22-7 record.

Nevertheless, it was a good opportunity for SIU to get in some game time with SIU or any other university division squad. They might even have trouble in a 22-7 record.

"I didn't have any butterflies," said Gary Wilson, the most confident of the five freshmen on the lineup. "It seemed like a high school game to me. Everything was jiving before the game, but everyone was up. I wasn't worried about this game," he said, although he raised a worried eyebrow when I mentioned UCLA, Saturday's opponent.

After several minutes it was obvious that Circle would provide less competition for the Salukis than last year's intramural champ, Little Men II, might have.

The Chikas, which is short for Chickasaw, as in Chickasaw Indians would have been better prepared for their second game of the year (Circle lost to Wisconsin-Green Bay 70-68 over the weekend) had they come equipped with bows and arrows and tomahawks.

"The purpose of playing in December when you're in a league is to get ready for conference play," Lambert said in his office Monday afternoon. "Everything you do is to prepare for the conference." Lambert starter Mac Turner explained the Indian massacre best. "The game was just a win to get under out belts," he said. "Everyone knows what the competition is going to be like the rest of the year. This was just a warm up game."

The match up with Circle was not the result of poor scheduling. It was a good move. Few coaches want to start off with the heavyweights. They want to build up to the important games in January and February.

This game with the Chikas gave SIU's young squad a chance to build up some confidence. It also introduced the rookies to college action and college crowds without putting the youngsters in shock.

There was no chance of the 10 Chikas shocking SIU Monday. The team would have been better off rounding up the 27 votes for those who live in Illinois, according to a 1975 census.

Circle did not pressure the Salukis at all and as a result, the new Saluki record also fell. One might say.

"We ran the offense two or three times and that's about it," Lambert said. "We had a couple of good shots." Lambert said. "Even Lambert is still unsure how good the offense is because the team has never seen the other team."

Even when teams win in a runaway, they don't find fault. Lambert is no exception.

"We're not playing as well as we hope we will," Lambert said. "They're still a few bugs to work out and adjustments to be made," he said.

One thing coaches and fans alike know, is that SIU better come up with one of its big performances Saturday in Los Angeles or else the Salukis will be the first victim of a new Bruin win streak.

I'm going to be disappointed," Long said.

"If we go into the meet and feel we're better than Oklahoma State internally, we've got a good chance for good things to happen." Long said Oklahoma State is ranked in the top five nationally, while SIU has received an honorable mention in the early year polls.
