CAST OF PLAY

ALL VETERANS IN DRAMATICS

THREE CORNERED MOUR: CHARACTERS AND PLAYMAKER

With "Three Cornered Mour" comes the challenge of staging a characteristically realistic drama. After the warwash, the cast is reduced to an audience of six members engaged in the routine of daily life in the town of "Plainfield." The stage is set with a small shop, a dwelling, a garden, and a street. The performance is divided into two acts, each dealing with a different aspect of the town's daily life.

I come home from a week's indulgence--this time, in fact--on the new book I've been talking about. I've only been talking about it, though, because I haven't been reading the wrong things--at least, not as much as some of my fellow readers in this book. I've read a lot of good stuff lately, and I still can't believe how much I've missed out on in the past few weeks. I've been too busy with my studies and other responsibilities to read much. I think I've missed out on a lot of interesting stuff.

I'm glad I finally had the chance to read this book. It's been a long time coming, and I'm happy to finally have a chance to read it. I hope you enjoy reading it as much as I did.

Dr. Ball was, even President Skulkey, "the living image of General Grant." Professor Skulkey runs on an anecdote about a former student who came into his office. Seeing a portrait of General Grant there, he asked, "why do you have to picture us here?"

Following this, B. E. Bower became president. Like Dr. Altyn, he was interested in educational programs. At the end of four years he was inaugurated as president of A.M.U. because of ill health. He became Dean of the Bible College in Drake University.

The first period of establishment really ended with the retirement of President Skulkey in 1897. The first difficulties of the new school had been met, and it was also largely to those pioneers, that the normal was so successfully organized and that it grew as rapidly

THE EGYPTIANS

With The Graduates

To the Alumni Editor of The Egyptians

You can quote me as wanting that an Alumni Association is one of the many things owned by those alumni who have reached the top. It is hard for us in the past to say, and we will back it to my earliest start. It's our way of keeping in touch with the school and with you.

When you are ready for a few more years, its time to come and I will write immediately.

Yours truly

D. Lamont Serrone

Editor of The Egyptians
