But Etheredge
Reports Several Rule Violations

Robert Etheredge, Assistant Dean of Men, and the university's new assistant dean of discipline, said that he has seen several cases of rule violations in the past week. "These cases are not uncommon and are not unusual," Etheredge said. "But they are a cause for concern."

Some students were seen violating the rules of the campus, Etheredge said. One student, who asked not to be named, was caught smoking in the library and was given a $5 fine. Another student, who also asked not to be named, was caught breaking into a student's dorm room and was given a $10 fine.

The university has several rules in place to prevent students from breaking the rules. These rules include a rule that students must be in their dorm rooms by 11 p.m. and a rule that students must not have parties in their rooms after 10 p.m.

Etheredge said that he believes that the rules are important for the safety and well-being of all students.

Social Studies

Text Printed

A text printed of a social studies test-work book for the SUI College of Education has been distributed to the SUI students. The book, "The Study of Social Studies," is written by Dr. J. B. Smith, a professor of social studies at the University of Illinois.

The book is designed to help students understand the concepts of social studies. It contains a variety of questions and problems that help students to think critically about the subject.

The book is available to students at the SUI Bookstore for $5.00. A study guide is also available for $2.00.

U. O. I. Answer To Sputnik: $7.5 Million Sports Palace

(from Chicago Daily News) The sporting news has been that Sputnik has been in the news, but the sports page has been rather quiet. The only major event was the inauguration of the new $7.5 million sports palace in Chicago. The stadium is designed to seat 80,000 spectators and includes a hockey rink, basketball court, and a football stadium.

The university president, Dr. Robert Meeker, said that the stadium would be used for athletic events, concerts, and other events.

The campus community is excited about the new facility and is looking forward to the first sporting event.

The going is tough, and the costs are high, but the university believes that the stadium will bring in additional revenue and make the university more self-sufficient.

The stadium is expected to be completed by the end of the year, and the university hopes to have its first sporting event in time for the fall semester.

The university president is looking forward to the future of the university and the success of the new stadium.
New Graduates Course 'Ok'

New graduate courses were approved at a meeting of the Academic Senate Committee of the Graduate Council held last Monday.

SUSTAIN. Dean of the Graduate School, Daniel K. Kerney, in announcing the approval of the courses, said that they would be added to the courses already approved by the committee in the meeting last December.

The new courses are: "Occupational and Business Education, 401-4 and "Teaching Bookkeeping and Accounting."

Bryant's Report Shows:

"Teachers' Salaries Up, But Industry Still Pays More"

Dr. Irving Konuky and Dr. Robert M. Carroll, both members of the editorial staff of the "Journal of Business," recently completed a study of the salaries of teachers in the United States. The study was based on a sample of 10,000 teachers from 400 different schools in 40 states.

The study showed that the average salary of a teacher in the United States is $2,500 per year, with a range from $1,000 to $5,000. The highest salaries were found in New York City, with an average of $4,500, followed by Los Angeles, with an average of $4,000.

Bryant noted that the average salary for teachers in the United States has increased significantly over the past 20 years, but that the increase has not been evenly distributed across the country. For example, teachers in the southern states still earn less than their counterparts in the northern states.

Bryant also noted that the study showed a significant increase in the number of teachers who are earning salaries above $3,000 per year. This is a positive trend, he said, as it indicates that more teachers are able to support themselves and their families through teaching.

Bryant recommended that the state and federal governments continue to support education and teacher salaries. He also suggested that schools and universities work to increase the diversity of their teaching staffs, in order to attract more qualified and diverse candidates to the field of education.
