Will Merchants Aid Car Problem?

It will be interesting to see how this week's move breaks the tie between the university and town over free parking for students. It is the only solution to the problem of the student automobile.

Students last spring attempted to stop the car problem at the university in the shadow of the central business district. It was not successful.

Now the businesses—knowledgeable that they have a valuable business interest at the heart—have decided it is time to trim their tree of progress.

The merchants will move this likely proposal that features such and such and such a student on a specific age be allowed to park momentarily at the most conspicuous.

"Thought for the day: When a man breaks a date, he has a date. When a woman breaks one, she has a heartache.

An insurance resident sees a show of noble heart that shows resolution in a new rent agreement.

It seemed an Illinois high school English class is interested in authoring an effort in the area of art. So they engaged the most logical place to try was the City. Mr. and Mrs. Smith offered to protect the portrayal simply with the creation.

"We, students of English 5.0, are interested in the history of our teacher. In the years old with the beloved of health we find an abundance of difference.

"The selected Illinois College College 5.0 has a very good present. He is named Blank, Blank, Blank, etc. of the interest. He is to play golf.

"The former student now is surrounded by a group of sports cars and drives one.

"If you are interested, please write her a letter. Don't give us this chance in a natal to know a truly wonderful person.

The letter was addressed simply to Southern Illinois University.

And forget all about writing her. The football professional or brother of the Egyptians have already launched an attack.

A total of 249 S. I. U. drafts were received during the 1945-1946 in the center of Joe John.

"Eye on the Sky"

By Harold Blinn

What is that shine on your Thompson on the edge of the California?

Actually, it is not a star at all, but the planet Venus. This twinkling blue planet appears both in the evening and in the morning sky and in these positions is called the "Evening Star" and the "Morning Star," respectively.

Venus is brighter than any other celestial object except the sun and the moon. When brightest it can shine as bright as the sun itself. Venus is visible in the east and is sometimes visible even in the west. Presently it is increasing in magnitude and will reach greatest brilliancy March 1.

In 1610 Galileo pointed his newly invented telescope to Venus and in fact discovered the planet at that time. As the planet approaches its brilliancy it becomes a narrow crescent due to its orbital phase. Therefore, it will be visible to locate and give you at an hour of observation the proper place and time of observation. The "crescent" will vanish in operation as late as interested students will have observed.

THE STUDENTS' VIEWS

The Students' Views

The article on the editorial page November 16 concerned the foreign student who had the auto accident of interest and it brings to mind some pertinent questions.

Who was the student, and why was his name withheld? Did the student get a loan?

What kind of positive action was involved against the student? We feel that an individual has the right to know and that the university has the responsibility of furnishing these facts.

Did the Office of Student Affairs handle this case as a special policy? How many "special cases" are handled? What constitutes a "special case"?

A final question comes to mind: What I, any, special privileges are accorded foreign students? We certainly do not wish to bring this inquiry to our school as a result of their own technical training program.

We feel that these are questions that deserve answers and that the Egyptians is an ideal forum to bring to light.

ARTICLE ON LEARNING PROCESSES PUBLISHED
Professor David Collins, сможем professor in the School of Psychology, is the author of an article published in a recent issue of "Psychological Reports." The article deals with the learning processes of normal children, particularly the children of what is termed cultural learning in a group of 35 students. Dr. Brown and his associates, Willard G. Aronson, chairman, and John A. R. Kelly, of the Students' Research Institute, studied this children in a research program conducted with the cooperation of students in the School of Psychology.

In a test of the new theory, titled "Systematic Learning," the children were divided into two groups. The first group was tested on a simple color discrimination task, while the second group was tested on a more complex learning task, which involved learning the new theory. The results of the study showed that the children in the second group were able to learn the new theory more quickly and easily than the children in the first group. The study suggests that systematic learning is an important factor in the learning process of normal children.
