Genoa Talks
Exploration
Packer

By Richard Kratovil

No concrete results yet, says Genoa's exploration committee chairman, as local companies look for new opportunities.

The "four-power" system, automated
"periodical" and other one-time opportunities, do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the administration or any department of the University.

Jack L. Thurner, associate professor of History, said, "The present system of exploration is not a substitute for the real thing."

The question today is whether the "Communist" theory has really changed its course, and he said, and he warned taking "too easy a view" of the current parent Soviet policy changes.

He analyzed China's role in the development and European and American policies, emphasizing the present situation, that is, on the continuing balance of power in the world.

The Commie, the "great white hope" of the world, he said, "will continue to challenge the Western bloc for the next ten years, and the American administration must have a clear understanding of how to deal with it."

The high school curriculum is "still paralyzed too much on the needs of students who want to go to college and does not provide for those who want to go to work," according to Dr. Douglas E. Lovson, president of Adams State Teachers College.

"The curriculum does not provide enough for the kind of child it is," Dr. Lovson said. "It fails to do the job which is to teach him and her how to think in the necessary training in the science or other areas in which he might later find a professional career.

Dr. Lovson, talk as a former 11 years as a teacher and this in the Education Department, which is working, was a panel for a series of influential groups to provide guidelines for children in the same status, the high level, and those below average.

The school in the United States is making definite and positive steps, despite the rigorous, through the use of skilled teachers and guidance specialists.

The small school "has the little hope of offering a sufficient program. Only large schools have the necessary facilities."

The workshop is divided into two sections, the former ones for the students, and the latter ones for the teachers.

The workshop presents an intensive study of the problems faced by a high school teacher in curriculum teaching and the problems of the professional, the problems of the curriculum, and the problems of the students.

The workshop is sponsored by the Adams State Teachers College.

'Red Sody Helps Beat The Heat'

Summer school classes have its problems — tests, lessons, work — but the biggest problem of all is heat... Old Sal knows that with beautiful days like these for outdoor activities, there's a real need to escape the heat which turns the kids red and causes them to groan.

One of the most frequent places to be found was the water of Club Oak Lake. Close friends would spend many hours around moonlight. In the daytime, though, the heat would cause a mass exodus to the lake. Fishing, swimming, water-skiing, putting on a show, and drinking "red sody" was all possible at the recreational spot of Club Oak.

Of course, this is the chance of setting up a prank or two on a passing car and forcing the owner to buy a bottle of sody, but the heat has got to be put up with.

If you want to beat the heat and don't carry a camera around, "night-flying," you will find cool and exciting events in one of the kids' "red sody" store.

"If you don't enjoy that type of activity, you can always sit by the pool, drink sody, and read a book..."
