“A Touch Of The Poet” by Eugene O'Neill will open at the Summer, the previous tomor rows night and run through Sunday. The play is one of O'Neill's last, written just before his death. “A Touch Of The Poet” was one of four in a series of plays written on the same theme. There has been some speculation as to whether O'Neill saw himself in the character of Simon Hartford, who is often mentioned in the play but never seen.

An Irish family living in New England in 1828, then the same characters of the play. Cornelius Meloy, played by George Woods, is once an owner of a large estate in Ireland and has now shrunk to keeping a tavern. He lives in the past seeing himself as a great general.

Susan Pennington will be seen as Nora. Cornelius’ wife. Nora was a peasant when she was married and Cornelius could not forget it. Her only reason for existing is her love for her husband.

Playing their daughter Nance Porey, Sara’s only objective is to marry Simon Hartford, the man he is caring for while he is ill. She feels that by marrying him, she will have and want produce with.

Cornelius is against the marriage, saying it is not suitable for him. He is afraid that he will be the one to do it in the old, traditional way, such as, providing a dowry for his daughter. Simon’s father tries to buy Cornelious off and this leads to more trouble for the future.

Although Sara feels that Dubra’s Simon’s mother (Shelby Sabert) doesn’t like her, Delbra wants only for her son to have a better life.

Activities Elicit Praise

The schedule of activities for July leaves little time for comprehension of anything, so frequently heard around Southern. There is at least one activity planned every day for the rest of this month.

The large list of activities are laced through the combined efforts of several campus organizations—Activities Development Center, music department, university, and others. Considering the relative inactivity of past programs, these groups deserve a round of applause, and a good part of the credit goes to the new director.

There are free movies every Wednesday and Monday night, poetry readings and bridge games on Tuesdays, weekend shopping-tours and visits to the St. Louis Municipal Opera, and many, many other activities, including parties.

The Dormitory Activities Committee meets Wednesday through Sunday each week. Two of the plays have completed their performance and there are three more to go.

The University Center offers an additional large variety of extracurricular activities from ping pong to dances and meetings to picnic concerts, all at all-times by merely requiring the activities in the Activities Development Center. The new Center is now open only until 8 p.m., if enough students show a desire to use its facilities at later hours, the hours will be extended.

This expansion is a result of students who have been put to use. So all that is necessary is to convince administration that it is not needed for longer hours.

Also, don’t overlook possibilities offered by the Lake-on-Campus. Students may use swimming and boating facilities from 1 p.m. every day and various equipment can be checked out at the boat docks, including rowboats and canoes.

So put down the books for awhile and take advantage of a few of the many facilities offered by the University.
Many Hungry Faces Fed At Opening of Cafeteria

Hundreds of hungry students and faculty members crowded into the University Center Wednesday for the opening of the new Cafeteria. Everyone seemed quite happy with the new facilities. A full kitchen director was present, perhaps, was F. L. Schreder, former food service director for the past eight years.

When the Cafeteria moved to the University Center from a temporary building it has occupied since the early 1960’s some “bitter memories” were lifted from Schreder’s mind. “I sometimes wonder how we ever made it,” Schreder says of the old cafeteria, a one-time trolley car which SIU historian E. G. Lentz called a “company campus nuisance” until its purchase and conversion.

Nothing in the old cafeteria will go into the University Center but will be turned to the Little Grayso Campus and other locations where it may be used. The building will then be removed.

Anthony Readied For Use in '62

Anthony Hall, one of Southern's oldest buildings, will once again serve the campus according to Charles Pulley, University architect.

He explained that it is one of many campus buildings now being remodeled and should be ready for occupancy by July, 1962. It will then house the offices of Area Services, the Placement Service and Information Service which are now located in temporary quarters.

Like several other old structures on campus, Anthony Hall has an interesting history. "During the war, I believe it was used as a men's residence hall, but throughout the years it has served mainly to house women until Woody Hall was completed," commented Pulley.

"After Woody Hall was completed, it was used for offices, but was later condemned because of falling plaster," he added. The SIU Police were recently moved out of the building to make room for the carpenters; the security office is now located in the Student Union.

Remodeling of the building will include the replacement of floors, air-conditioning, new partitions, new stairs and new enclosures to the north and south ends of the hall. Painting and other minor improvements will also be made.

Saluki Gridders Face Heavy Schedule, New Foes In '62

The 1961 Saluki football schedule will be highlighted by six home games and two new vaudeville competitors, Drake and La Salle.

The Salukis, who recently made formal application to withdraw from the Interstate Intersquad Conference, June 30, 1962, will defend their 1960 grid title against six members of the conference. In addition they will oppose two non-league foes other than the 1961 additions: Bowling Green and Missouri Miners.

Coach Carmen Piccoro's squad, which last year was ranked among the top five small-college teams in the nation before losing late-season games to Bowling Green and Ohio University, will open its campaign Sept. 16 at Rolla, Mo. against the Mines. The first home game will find the Salukis pitted against Drake University.

Rugged conference foes Central Michigan and Northern Illinois call at Carbondale the next two weeks with Eastern Illinois the homecoming opponent Oct. 21. The Salukis close the season with a pair of non-league games at home when La Salle and Bowling Green in particular Nov. 11 and 18 respectively.
