TORN-UP CAMPUS IS SIGN OF PROTEST

Southern's campus will be in a state of partial disarray through the remainder of the semester, as the students of the College of Education, under the leadership of Assistant Professor of Education, Dr. Franklin C. Thompson, have occupied the new Administration Building on the campus. The occupation is a protest against the administration's decision to proceed with the construction of the new building without first obtaining the students' consent.

The protesters, who are demanding a say in the design and construction of the new building, have barricaded the entrance to the building and have set up a temporary office in one of the hallways. They are demanding that the students be consulted on all aspects of the project, from the site selection to the final design.

The administration has responded to the protest by forming a committee to look into the issues raised by the students. However, the protesters remain unconvinced and continue to occupy the building, hoping to force the administration to change its plans.

A Cause of Infection

The past few years, prices in the United States have gradually risen to an all-time high. Many factors have contributed to this inflation problem. Among them, the increase in the cost of living is a major factor. However, it is not uncommon to find two or three cities, each with a higher cost of living index than the others. This is especially true of large cities, where the cost of living is often higher than in smaller towns.

Debunking the Debunkers

An editorial writer in the \"New York Times\" has observed that the popular belief that "debunkers" are the only people who can think straight is false. He has pointed out that debunkers are no more likely to be right than anyone else. For example, the debunker who says "debunkers" are the only people who can think straight is a debunker himself. Health Education Workshop Gets Under Way

Southern Illinois University’s health education workshop for in-service teachers in senior high schools will be held on the campus of the University of Illinois on October 28.

The workshop will focus on the promotion of health education through the use of various methods and techniques. Participants will have the opportunity to engage in hands-on activities and discussions with experts in the field.

The workshop will be led by Dr. Elizabeth A. Johnson, director of the health education program at the University of Illinois.

This workshop is part of the Southern Illinois University’s larger initiative to improve health education in the state’s senior high schools.

These events are made possible through the generous support of our partners and sponsors, including the Illinois State Board of Education and the National Association for Health Education.

Thank you for your support and for making a difference in the lives of our students.

See you at the workshop!
