Old Science Is a Building Possessing Many Legends

By Wallace P. Dye

We think it wise when we have a chance to visit other places, especially with our college students, for four years. What if we had not taken that opportunity? What if we had not been given a chance to see the world? We think it is a good idea to travel.

It has been said that the average American has traveled to a smaller country than the United States. However, it is important to realize that the average American has traveled to a smaller country than the United States. Education Is a Truer Sense

Soon, the doors of opportunity will swing open, and we will march through armed with a diploma and store of knowledge to do battle with a cruel and merciless opponent—the world. If only the future could be foretold! Have we been successful in our work of the past four years? With our implements of knowledge, are we able to take advantage of our adversary?

Behind all the cramming for tests and the study over every subject, to a deeper interest in education and of most of us does not exist the thought that we are "basic philosophers" which every instructor hopes to instill in his students.

Take John Doe for instance. While at Southern he joined a social organization. Now John was sort of shy, and only an average college student. In fact John read Speech 101, stammered through several speeches and finally came out with a C.

To many, John’s C meant that he could stand much improvement in his public speaking, but not that it meant much if John. He may never address the graduating class, but now unconsciously, John is exercising his mind in public and is taking part in some of the “bull sessions” he has heretofore found abhorrent. John may see his instructor shows a C at the end of his journal, which he hears his teacher could not place a grade on his own paper.

We are not asking you to "Why do we have to take Geography, Botany, Zoology?" Here again we are not expected to have college aviation in our programs, but, on the other side, we are to have a basic education so as to help and better understand the world around us. If you this day plan.

Some time in the future Mr. Doe, instructor and John, the man who has the wide minds of young men or women. His only is not only to instruct in his subject, but John must be able to explain the world about them. This will have to be done with his general knowledge and personality as well as the store of knowledge he has accumulated.

Louisville NAIB Winner To Play N. Y. For Olympic Playoffs

The Louisville National Industrial Basketball Tournament, which got underway yesterday afternoon with a game between Custer, Conniston, and Kelly, attracted a large crowd to the old gymnasium, where the outstanding teams from the various districts were gathered to determine the winner. The tournament was held in connection with the National Industrial Basketball Association, which was established last year to promote basketball among industrial workers.

The tournament was divided into three sections: the East, the West, and the South. Each section had its own champion, and these champions then met in the final round to determine the overall winner. The East Section was won by the team from the Ohio Valley, the West Section by the team from the Southwest, and the South Section by the team from the Southeast.

The final round was held on March 28, 1946, at the old gymnasium, and was witnessed by a large crowd. The team from the Ohio Valley faced the team from the Southwest, and the team from the Southeast faced the team from the Southeast. The team from the Ohio Valley won the championship game, 62-48, and was declared the overall winner of the tournament.

The team from the Ohio Valley was coached by Coach B. F. Jones, who had won the tournament with a team from the Ohio Valley last year. The team from the Ohio Valley was composed of players from several industrial plants in the Ohio Valley area, and had been practicing for several weeks prior to the tournament.

The team from the Southwest was coached by Coach J. H. Brown, who had won the tournament with a team from the Southwest last year. The team from the Southwest was composed of players from several industrial plants in the Southwest area, and had been practicing for several weeks prior to the tournament.

The team from the Southeast was coached by Coach J. W. Johnson, who had won the tournament with a team from the Southeast last year. The team from the Southeast was composed of players from several industrial plants in the Southeast area, and had been practicing for several weeks prior to the tournament.

The tournament was a great success, and was well received by the crowds who attended. The games were exciting, and the teams were evenly matched. The tournament was a great opportunity for the teams to compete against each other, and to see how they fared against the best teams in the country.
