The awaited accreditation committee's visit to the College of Business and Administration is now history, leaving COBA administrators with an optimistic outlook. The visitation accreditation committee is responsible for analyzing and reviewing the quality of the college's curriculum, faculty, facilities and other pertinent areas. The committee has issued its report on their findings, which will be used by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business in the final accreditation decision this spring.

The bachelor's and master's degrees in business administration and the bachelor's degree in accounting are facing reaccreditation. The master of accounting program is facing initial accreditation.

Quinn: People not in control

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

Groups opposed to the calling of a Illinois constitutional convention are not representative of the average Illinois taxpayer, a Chicago lawyer said on Thursday.

"These special interest groups are only capturing the average interests of the average citizen," Patrick Quinn, spokesman for Citizens for Constitutional Reform, said.

"Quinn was in Carbondale Thursday to address a meeting that will appear on the Nov. 3 ballot, calling for a constitutional convention. The present Illinois constitution was adopted in 1970, and a constitutional convention was called in 1968. Despite the recent political turmoil, the present document has been in effect, proponents of the convention say there is still too much power taken away from the people and placed in the hands of elected officials and special interest groups.

"Today it is more a government for the politicians, for the lobby's and for the unility companies," he said.

Quinn made reference to the 2000 thomad raised by "big business" to stop the convention from being called. "Not one penny of the half a

Jerusalem (UPI) - Israel's two largest parties won close to one-third of the seats in Tuesday's crucial parliamentary elections, leaving both short of a majority but apparently giving the right-wing Likud edge in forming the next government, according to unofficial returns.

Both Likud and the center-left Labor Party lost ground to smaller parties - particularly religious ones - and the results left neither major party with a majority to form a government, according to early exit polls.

Unofficial returns broadcast by Israel Radio showed that with 83 percent of the vote counted, Likud had won 40 seats in the 120-member Knesset, or parliament, and Labor 38. Small left-wing parties captured 10 seats, while small right-wing parties won eight.

Arab parties won seven. The major surprise was the showing of the religious parties. The four parties increased their seats in Knesset from 17 to 17, giving them tremendous clout in the formation of a coalition government.

Official results were not expected for 24 hours. If the four religious parties.

Current business owners are concerned by an administrator's decision: "I don't think Sears will change its mind.

DeBartolo officials announced Tuesday that four anchors will join Sears in a mall that will house 40 specialty stores and possibly movie theaters. The new "Illinois Center" will be completed in 1991.

Carbondale Chamber of Commerce Executive Director James M. Fowle echoed other merchants, "I have not given up hope" of keeping Sears in Carbondale, he said.

Prowell said he considered the Tuesday statement by Sears supporting their move to Marion to be flawed.

Israel planes retaliate, leave 5 Palestinians dead

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli warplanes pounded Palestinian guerrilla bases Tuesday in southern Lebanon, killing at least five people and wounding six in apparent retaliation for a bus attack that killed four people in the Israeli-occupied West Bank. Security sources said the fourth Israeli air attack in southern Lebanon in 10 days coincided with Israeli parliamentarian elections that will determine the course of the Middle East peace process.

Iran, Iraq seek solution to deadlocked talks

GENEVA (UPI) — Iran and Iraq agreed to change the format of talks aimed at breaking deadlock over territorial claims in the strategic Shatt Al Arab waterway that separates the two nations. U.N. envoy Javier Perez de Cuellar said the warring nations agreed to negotiate directly, rather than pass their comments through the U.N.

Soviet Union sends missiles to Afghanistan

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union has sent advanced missiles to Afghanistan to help the Moscow-backed government counter rebel rocket attacks that have escalated since the Soviets began withdrawing troops. The Tass news agency said Tuesday. It Washington, the State Department identified the weapons as surface-to-surface Scud missiles capable of reaching Pakistan, which the Soviet Union accuses of supplying the rebels.

S. Africa hopes settlement remains intact

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Injunction on the part of Angola and its Cuban defenders blocked the proposed start Tuesday of the U.N. independence plan for Namibia, but South Africa is hopeful a settlement remains in sight, the government said. Angolan President Eduardo Dos Santos, in an interview published Tuesday, also held out hope that another round of negotiations under American auspices could allow for implementation of the independence plan by January.

Incumbent Richmond challenged for House seat

Democrat a supporter of funding for SIU-C
Challenger campaigns on shoestring budget

By Kimberly Clarke
Staff Writer

State Representative Bruce Richmond, vying for his 15th term, said ample funding for education is key to keeping his seat. "It's on the front burner" in the spring legislative session.

"The tuition increase (at SIU-C) bothered me greatly," Richmond added, saying a greater challenge is to get a tax increase in the spring because (all) elections will be over.

Richmond is a representative for the 116th District and 14th in seniority; out of 118 members in the Illinois House of Representatives.

Thus, Richmond said, is one of the strong components of his campaign. Richmond said he has three main accomplishments during his 14 years of office were for SIU-C, agriculture and Alzheimer's. These areas have made up about 90 percent of the legislation he has sponsored.

The Democratic incumbent has been the chief sponsor for legislation that has benefited the University: funding for the Lowes Law Building, $6 million for the small business incubator and a $1 million improvement project for Touch of Nature.

Richmond said he plans to keep funding for the University as high as possible, considering the funds available.

A sponsor for all major pieces of agriculture legislation, Richmond will be heavily endorsed by farmers.

"Agriculture has a tremendous impact on the economy of the area," Richmond said, and now the problems with the crops are being assessed.

"A lot of our export customers for the crops in their raw state have been hit," Richmond added. "And now we are looking for alternative uses of the products.

"The incumbent also was the chief sponsor of several bills that were passed three years ago establishing assistance programs, research and a task force to study long-term care of Alzheimer's disease.

Richmond's wife suffers from Alzheimer's, a brain disorder and one of the fastest growing health threats facing Americans today, Richmond said in a 1985 press release claiming support for the bill.

Richmond entered politics in 1957 as an alderman in Murphysboro. In 1970 he became the city's mayor. As mayor, he said he had no intention of continuing his political career on a higher level, he said.

However, the urging of a fellow politician led to the 67-year-old state assemblyman's reign as representative.

Born in Williamson County, Richmond is on a committee to promote tourism and plans to create more revenue though its expansion hoping that money will reduce unemployment in Southern Illinois.

Unemployment is one issue that Richmond plans to deal with, saying that there is no easy solution.

Richmond said he does not feel too threatened by his opponent, Frankie Eggemeyer, the Republican candidate for the 14th District seat.

Eggemeyer said she will vote against any legislative proposal for a tax increase, even if it means an increase in the cost of higher education.

"It appears that students will just have to work harder for their education," Eggemeyer said. "Nobody is told to go to school - way back when, somehow we somehow got our education if we really wanted it," she said.

"For education, but I feel that students should work for it - harder if necessary - and get motivated," she said.

The 52-year-old Ellis Grove woman said the state first needs to balance the budget by conserving and prioritizing its capital, not by increasing taxes.

The political newcomer said Southern Illinoisans need to conserve their spending - herself included.

With a campaign fund of about $5,000, Eggemeyer is cutting corners by painting her own election billboards and going on a door-to-door campaign.

Her opponent, Rep. Bruce Richmond, 65, Murphysboro, has gathered about $18,000 for his campaign.

During her campaign, she has worn two pairs of tennis shoes and, to stress the importance of cutting back financially, has glued them back together.

Eggemeyer told the people she talked in her door-to-door campaign at Randolph, Jackson and Union counties said they wanted "the politics out of government.

She said the state's political patronage system - the method of awarding jobs by political classification - would be her focus of attack and possibly source of an upset over Richmond.

Richmond, who has held his office since 1970, has done the best job he could, Eggemeyer said; however, if she is elected the patronage system would be changed first.

Unlike most legislators, Eggemeyer said she will avoid being guided "by the pack," or the large number of constituents agreeing on a certain issue.

Eggemeyer said industry could be induced into the district by reducing workers' compensation to compete with industries in neighboring states.

Eggemeyer said she realizes people do not want cuts in workers' compensation, but they understand it is a problem that needs to be approved.

Eggemeyer admits she has little experience in politics. She unsuccessfully ran for election as a delegate to the Republican National Convention, but says raising a family and working as a clerk for the Illinois Veterans Commission has been adequate training for the office.

Many people have been very receptive during her campaigning, Eggemeyer said. "Their kindess will come back tenfold, as it says in the Bible."
Banning or limiting Halloween ludicrous

THE SUGGESTION by city administrators to limit Carbondale's Halloween celebration to just one night is a bad one. Even worse is the suggestion that the celebration be eliminated.

These suggestions were made because of the marked increase in violence compared to the past few years. We do not blame the increase that takes place on Halloween, but trying to limit or end the celebration may only increase the amount of violence.

THE ADMINISTRATORS' efforts to limit the celebration to a Saturday night probably will fail if futile. Labor unions will not cooperate with the city to eliminate an effective sysipn of partiers from South Illinois Avenue. This would force a crush on the Strip, placing thousands to flaire and idiocy to reign supreme.

THERE IS no way city administrators can stop people from congregating on the Strip for Halloween, unless they close the Strip and beat people away with billy clubs. This is an act of destruction. Carbondale would like being expect all college students to "just say no" to drugs. It just won't happen.

Koreans ask for an apology

Dear Mr. Meade and the management of the DE.

Your glowing comments on Korea shocked all of the international students and Korean students who read the Daily Egyptian. Your arguments, based on lack of knowledge and cross-cultural understanding, are summed down into a few sentences:

1. Every Korean has bad breath because of Kimchi.
2. 80 percent of Korean people smoke.
3. Korean hot dogs are made from real dogs, no matter if they are derdogs, no matter if they are real dogs.

It might be true that some Koreans have had bad breath and smoke, but they are not so far beyond the belief that every Korean has bad breath and that about 80 percent of Korean people smoke. Furthermore, the hot dog is not our food, but yours. The hot dog was introduced into Korea from the U.S. We have never imagined that there is any single hot dog made from real dogs, as you dreamed that American people enjoyed eating dogs. Your argument, by analogy, is naive. The cross-cultural differences mean cultural supremacy or inferiority.

Mr. Meade, ignorance is not always true. To our common sense, culture is historical, rather than natural. Therefore, every culture has its uniqueness which makes it different from others and possesses its own values which cannot be judged and underestimated by any criteria of any other culture. Like the same way that the symphony orchestra, the same way that the summing can make its beautiful sounds of world peace and prosperity, you can make a similar sound in harmony with others. Mr. Meade, our sympathies are with you, because we, as Americans, have experienced many more difficulties than you probably experienced during your ten-day stay in Korea. But we do not criticize this society in the same way that you choose to criticize Korea. Following your logic of evaluating a foreign culture, for example, we could reach a vastly generalized statement that all Americans are the same as you do about different foreign cultures. Do you not criticize the Brith, the French, the Soviets, as people of another culture, could eliminate cultural haleter and prejudice.

Later, we also strongly urge the Daily Egyptian to maintain its balance in printing articles related to the fairness and accuracy of its articles. Thus, it will preserve the trust of its readers as their enlightened friends and ears. We Korean students ask both of Mr. Meade and the editor of the DE to apologize to the Korean people and to the Republic of Korea for the article for which they are responsible. - The Korean Student Association.

Greeks remember World War II, salute those who fought like heroes

On Oct. 28, we, the members of the Hellenic Student Association, commemorated the entrance of our country, Greece, into World War II and the heroic fight of our people to preserve the ideals of freedom and self-determination.

It was not a matter of choice. The people had to respond to the ultimatum imposed by Benito Mussolini, and their chosen path was very difficult. They either had to accept occupation or commit themselves to an unequal war which nobody believed they could ever win. By the day Greek army was able not only to stop the Italian forces but they turn them back for the next seven months.

After the complete humiliation of Mussolini, the German army had to attack too, losing time from a tackling the Soviet Union, and only the concentrated forces of the Axis could bend the resistance of the Greek people.

Even after the eventual occupation of Greece by the Axis, the Greek people's resistance was one of the main factors influencing Hitler's plans in the war, leaving Hitler thousands of men and billions of marks. All these struggles made Winston Churchill say: 'That the Greeks were not fighting like heroes, but the heroes fought like Greeks. We know that all these, although they are historical facts, may sound nationalistic to some of the readers. Yes, we are proud for the accomplishments of our people, but the price we, as a nation, had to pay was more than the total cost of Greece lost its highest percentage of its population to that war than any other country involved. Ninety percent of the Greek population was lost in Hitler's concentration camps and hundreds of thousands of innocent people died from starvation and massive executions.

For every German soldier the Greek resistance forces killed, fifty men, women, or children were executed in retaliation. Hitler's army stripped the country of every resource and food supply, leaving 400,000 people to die from starvation in one single winter. The Greek population decreased by more than 25 years to beat the German army, but when there was not a V-day at the end of that tunnel. Their only V-day was at the beginning, when they dared to challenge the two biggest powers in Europe, but they were not big enough to keep it alive.

Isn't this the story of every little guy of every small country that carries the burden of the ambitions of the powerless governments of this planet? The first to pay the price are always the underdogs, no matter if they are Greeks or any other nationality, creed or color.

We are the ones who are not amused by Rambo-style movies, the ones who really pay attention to the relations of the superpowers, because we know that there is no such thing as a regional conflict between the two military (or should we say militaristic?) giants. However, if the time comes, as it happened 60 years ago, our people will be ready to fight again.

Since we could not enjoy the fruits of our victory, and our insurance did not prove enough to save our people from death and suffering, we will create another war so that our people can return to the path that they left. We owe it to them. — For the Hellenic Student Association, Nikos Nikolaidis, president and graduate student in mathematics.

A vote for Dukakis is a healthy one

Voting is a health issue. On November 8, American citizens will have the opportunity to take the first step toward securing health insurance for 40 million Americans. Presidential candidate Michael Dukakis believes that "health care is a right, not a privilege."

Who are the 40 million Americans without health insurance? They are not only the unemployed, but also the employed, the old, and the not so old. People paying back education and student loans don't have health insurance in many cases because they can't afford it.

Currently in our society, if you don't have health insurance and you're not on public aid, what happens? You "spend down," which means you pay till you're wiped out — then you go on public aid. Is this the American dream?

On Nov. 8, the American voting population will have the opportunity to vote for an individual who has not skirted the issue of universal health care. That individual is Michael Dukakis, a man who is standing up and making a statement about an issue that affects us all. Wes Kasulkie, senior, music.
It was the "issue-oriented" polls that alerted the Bush people to the power of the Willie Horton scare and the strength of the Pledge of Allegiance issue in the current campaign.

Former Doors’ keyboardist to play tunes, recite poetry

Ray Manzarek, former keyboardist for The Doors, will present an evening of Jim Morrison’s music and poetry at 8 p.m. Thursday in Student Center Ballrooms C and D. Free. For tickets, call 554-7000. Manzarek, friend and mentor to Morrison, will join Manzarek in discussing the late rock legend and the mystique of the Doors.

Manzarek started taking piano lessons at 5 and later developed an interest in blues and jazz. While pursuing other artistic ventures at UCLA film school, Manzarek casually met Morrison on a California beach. The two founded the band that later became known as the Doors.

Manzarek has since directed the musical documentary “The Doors: Live at the Hollywood Bowl” and produced a remake of the Doors song “People Are Strange” by Echo and the Bunnymen for the “Lost Boys” soundtrack.

McClure, a San Francisco poet best known in the 1960s as the author of “The Bear,” is an often censored play. He has received numerous Ohio awards for his plays and has achieved musical success by befriending Bob Dylan and writing the lyrics to Janis Joplin’s “Mercedes Benz.” McClure has written articles for “Rolling Stone” and “Vanity Fair” in addition to publishing his exploits as a member of Hell’s Angels. Although no two performances are the same, Manzarek and McClure carefully plan each of their shows in advance. Their two-hour presentation will begin with an opening talk given by both artists. This is followed by a mix of poetry and music. Readings will include poems written by McClure and Morrison. The music will be a collage of classic Doors hits, such as “Riders on the Storm,” and Manzarek’s personal compositions.

After fielding questions from the audience, Manzarek and McClure will conclude the show with a final set of music and poetry.

The Student Programming Council will conduct an autograph session for Manzarek and McClure Thursday afternoon on the first floor of the Student Center.

Tickets for Thursday night’s show are $6 for the general public, $3 for students.

John A. Logan College sets Alzheimer’s teleconference

“Meeting the Challenge of Alzheimer’s and Local Community” will be the subject of a teleconference from 11:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. Nov. 14 in the Batteau Room of John A. Logan College.

The seminar is designed to communicate a brief overview of symptomatology and life-style factors that may increase the risk of developing Alzheimer’s disease and to stimulate and mobilize local communities to assess the needs of their own citizens and create their own response strategies.

Scheduled speakers include Miriam K. Atkinson, faculty member of neurology and psychiatry at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine; Leslie Ambrose, developer of the Second Generation Program; Leonard Berg, faculty member of Clinical Neurology and director of the Alzheimer’s Research Center at the Washington University School of Medicine; and Carroll L. Estes, chair of the Department of Social and Behavioral Sciences in the School of Nursing at the University of California, Berkeley.

Admission to the teleconference is $7.50. For more information, contact Suzy Ward at 850-6384.

Dear Colleagues,

In about two weeks we will, for the first time, have an opportunity to become equal partners in the governance of SIUC. If we fail to act affirmatively on this opportunity, the Chancellor and Board of Trustees will have a free hand to continue their efforts to centralize decision making and expand the corporate-industrial management structure at SIUC.

As you reflect on these options, we ask you to consider the following:

SIUC IEA-NEA is a democratic, faculty-run association of your colleagues. During the past four years, we have created a broad-based, grass roots faculty organization. Our Executive Board consists of faculty members from twelve departments and seven colleges, with substantial and widespread support from faculty across the entire campus.

In four years SIUC IEA-NEA has:

* LED THE FIGHT TO REPEAL THE 2 PERCENT TAX
* EXPOSED THE ASBESTOS PROBLEM ON CAMPUS AND CAUSED THE ADMINISTRATION TO BEGIN A REMOVAL PROGRAM
* EXPOSED THE COSTS AND GROWTH OF THE ADMINISTRATIVE BUREAUCRACY
* LED THE FIGHT FOR SEPARATE FACULTY AND STAFF BARGAINING UNITS
* LED THE FIGHT FOR SEPARATE BARGAINING UNITS FOR EACH CAMPUS
* LED THE FIGHT FOR INCLUSION OF DEPARTMENT CHAIRS IN THE FACULTY BARGAINING UNIT
* ASSISTED MANY FACULTY MEMBERS WITH GRIEVANCES
* INFORMED THE CAMPUS ABOUT COLLECTIVE BARGAINING
* SUSTAINED THE MOMENTUM FOR COLLECTIVE BARGAINING IN SPITE OF 3 YEARS OF DELAY
* BROUGHT EFFECTIVE PRESSURE ON THE LABOR BOARD TO SCHEDULE THE ELECTIONS

Our parent organization, NEA, pioneered collective bargaining among four-year universities in 1969. The first four-year institution to bargain was an NEA affiliate at Central Michigan University. IEA wrote the Illinois collective bargaining law. Throughout the U.S., we represent over 200 colleges and universities (more than AAUP and AFT combined) - including such research universities as the University of Maine, the University of Massachusetts, the University of Hawaii, the University of Florida, the California State Universities, Detroit University and the Rhode Island School of Design.

In the midwest, NEA is the major representative of higher education faculties. NEA represents ten universities in Minnesota, five in Michigan, and three in South Dakota (including the University of South Dakota). NEA university affiliates also bargain in Ohio, Iowa, Kansas, and Nebraska. Throughout the midwest, the AFT represents only six four-year colleges in Illinois.

NEA today bargains for 77,664 faculty and staff members in institutions of higher education, including faculty at nine Category I Research universities and seventeen graduate degree granting institutions. 71,682 of them are dues paying NEA members. We think these statistics speak for themselves. We do not need to exaggerate them, nor try to diminish the numbers represented by other organizations.

IEA-NEA’s assistance to the SIUC faculty in this election reflects a long-term commitment by America’s oldest and most powerful association of educational employees. Its support comes from dues paid by our colleagues at NEA—represented institutions throughout the U.S. The 8,500 democratically-elected delegates to NEA’s National Representative Assembly voted to devote resources to campus organizing campaigns, including ours at SIUC.

Our friends in the UP criticize us for relying on staff support provided by IEA-NEA. We are proud of the quality, experience and knowledge of IEA-NEA staff who have worked with us at SIUC. They assist us in carrying out the policies that we, as elected leaders, define. How many of you, if offered additional support staff for your departments, would reject it on the grounds that you would prefer to work without assistance?

Lack of resources and support is not a virtue. UP’s inadequate resources reflect the IFT/AFT’s inadequate commitment to SIUC. Why has AFT drastically cut its support for our UP affiliate? Why did it withdraw its organizing staff from SIUC two years ago? If IFT/AFT is unwilling to support its local at SIUC now, what kind of support can we expect after the election?

IEA-NEA has demonstrated that it is willing and able to provide the kind of support we need now. We can count on IEA-NEA to continue to provide the kinds of support we are going to need after the election, when we enter into negotiations with the administration.

Our record deserves your support on November 16. VOTE SIUC IEA-NEA.

said he feels the outlook for the accreditation of both accounting degrees is good.

"Last time (1984) the master's in accounting did not receive accreditation because there was not enough productive faculty," Wu said. "The number of faculty was not there and the research was not there."

Wu said this and other problems since have been addressed. Both Gutteridge and Wu said the accreditation committee has stressed the need for more research at the doctoral level throughout the college. However, this does not have any impact on the decision to reaccredit the school, Gutteridge said.

"We said we feel the amount of research being done is not acceptable. Above the standards asked of a master's program, but slightly below that required of a doctoral program."

"The accounting school will hire one or two additional professors to raise research productivity," he said.

Wu said regardless of accreditation, accounting students need not worry because the program is a quality one and is recognized as such by the big eight, the top eight accounting firms in the United States.

Steinberg doctor suspected abuse

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jurors in the murder trial of Joel Steinberg Tuesday viewed pictures taken at the hospital of Lisa Steinberg’s bruise-covered body, and a doctor who examined the girl testified he ordered the photographs out of a strong suspicion of child abuse.

Dr. Mary Marron, a pediatrician, told the jury her suspicions were most aroused by bruises she saw on Lisa’s lower back, an area of the body she said would have been nearly impossible for the child to injure herself.

Steinberg, 47, a disbarred criminal lawyer, is charged with second-degree murder in the death of Lisa, a 6-year-old boy who he raised as his daughter from infancy without formally adopting her.

He is accused of severely beating Lisa in his trash-strewn Greenwich Village apartment on Nov. 1, 1987, then leaving the girl with his live-in girlfriend, Hedda Nussbaum, to go out for dinner.

Nuclear plant gets OK to operate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff recommended Tuesday the Long Island Lighting Co. be granted permission to operate its controversial Shoreham nuclear power plant at 25 percent power.

NRC staff officials told an Atomic Safety and Licensing Board that LILCO’s request for 25 percent power authorization should be approved because no parties participating in the Shoreham licensing proceeding opposed it.

Richard Bachmann, counsel for the NRC staff, noted the licensing board in September dismissed a request from the Shoreham proceeding state and local governments that had opposed the 25 percent power request. The governments were thrown out because the licensing board ruled they had not complied with requests for information.

Steinberg, who was convicted last year of murder and sentenced to life in prison, is currently serving at Clinton Correctional Facility in Dannemora, N.Y.

State and local government officials have opposed the operation of Shoreham on the grounds that it is impossible to devise a workable emergency evacuation plan to protect people living near the plant in case of a radiation accident.

million dollars has come from a citizens," he said.

Quinn said all of the $52,000 raised by proponents of the convention has come from small donations from citizens.

"Why did Illinois Power give $10,000 to our opponents? Why did CPS give $1,000?" Quinn asked. "Because they don’t want fundamental reform that helps the citizens."

Quinn said average Illinois citizens should not pay attention to the media blitz these groups have put together for this final week before the election and said they should instead be looking at the bills the elite have been placing on them.

"Look at your property tax bill. Look at your utility bill. Look at the schools. They are worse than they were 20 years ago."

Among the leading changes Quinn is pushing is the adding of an initiative amendment that would allow voters to bypass the legislative process and enact laws by petition or binding referendum.

Quinn said the present system would work if the Legislature worked in ways that would help the average Illinois citizen, but he said the Legislature has failed to act in such a manner.

Presently there are 22 states and 3,000 municipalities that have the initiative system.

David Kenney, an emeritus professor of political science and a member of the 1970 convention, said the belief that a convention would jeopardize the entire constitution is just a "scare tactic that has been sold to a number of groups."

Kenney said the 90 percent of the present constitution that is good would be saved and that only those parts that the entire electorate believe to be faulty will be tampered with.

"Losing what is good is always going to be an argument not to call a convention," Kenney said.

with 17 seats join with Likud as they have since 1977, Shamir and the other right-wing parties would have a majority of 65 seats, according to the results announced on state-run Israel Radio.

Labor and its left-wing allies had a total of 44 seats and at most 55 seats if the Arab parties joined their coalition.

Both Shamir and Peres planned to meet Wednesday with the leaders of the religious parties. Our religious party leader said he could join with the party that offered the best deal.

"We feel we have reached independence," said Avner Shale, head of the National Religious Party and a candidate. "We have certain conditions on the land of Israel, Jewish ezrah and Jewish identity. If we hear any change from Labor on this issue, we can negotiate."

Shamir, speaking to joyous supporters in Tel Aviv, said there was no need to analyze the totals, which were shifting slightly as the results came in.

"The time we look today and the way we marked the trees, if we see any problems," Schnieder said.

Cutting and trimming will begin after the plan receives the committee's final approval and Schnieder said the best time to begin the work will be during Thanksgiving break or between Fall and Spring semesters.

Designer contest open to students

Entries are now being accepted for the Fourth Annual Du Pont "Antron" Student Design Award competition. Students at accredited schools of interior design and architecture nationwide are eligible.

The competition offers student designers a chance to compete for recognition from the professional design community as well as a grand prize of $1,000 and category awards of $500 each, all with matching funds to the winners' schools.

Participants are required to design a commercial environment, providing the judges with drawings and a written rationale. The design must incorporate carpet of 100 percent Du Pont "Antron" nylon as an important design element, carpet and fabric samples must also be submitted.

Entries will be judged in the categories of offices, hospitality facilities, health care facilities, public spaces and retail spaces. The competition deadline is Feb. 15, 1989.

For more information on entering this year's competition and obtaining entry forms, please see your design professor, ASID student chapter president, or contact Abby Salaky at the Du Pont "Antron" Student Design Award Center, 2121 E. 4921.
Treacherous traces obscure Nevilles

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

The history of rock 'n' roll has been treacherous to the New Orleans family act the Neville Brothers.

For more than three decades, the Nevilles — Arthur, Aaron, Cyril and Charles — have been playing some of the most flavorful music to come from the Big Easy, yet they have been neglected by pop historians and ignored by a mainstream audience.

The collection, from the Los Angeles-based independent label, Rhino Records, spans the years 1955 to 1985 and includes rare, unreleased live recordings.

THE BAND'S obscurity is puzzling. The Nevilles have warmed up audiences for such mainstream legends as the Rolling Stones and Eric Clapton — at those artists' request. Recently, they completed a tour with the Grateful Dead, which only last year released its own 20-year-old clutch band mold.

National chart success for the Neville Brothers has been elusive because they have been censored as a rhythm and blues band. Their only pop hit — the ballad "Tell It Like It Is" (No. 3 in 1967) — "FELL IT LIKE IT IS" appears on the two-cd set as an impromptu 1980 live performance, featuring the smooth vocal talents of the second-oldest Neville, Aaron.

In their hometown, the Neville Brothers are legendary, having been an integral part of the New Orleans sound since the birth of rock 'n' roll in the early 1950s. The first cut on the set, "Mardi Gras Marcha," is a testament to their favorite son's status. Performed by the Hawkettes, a band founded by keyboardist-vocalist Arthur Neville while he was still in high school, the song is a New Orleans classic that became a polka sensation after subsequent re-releases each year during Mardi Gras.

THE COLLECTION'S strong suit is the ballads performed by Aaron Neville. Forget Sam Cooke or Otis Redding. While those long-dead legends made viable contributions of their own, Aaron Neville continues to contribute with his pure, clean falsetto. Many of the ballads — with such titles, ballad-sounding titles as "How Can I Help But Love You" and "Let's Live" — are penned by Toussaint, under the pseudonym Naomi Neville.

Although the brothers have been playing music together since they were teen-agers, they didn't actually get together as a family act until about 1976. The first cut on the set, "Meet the Neville Brothers," was composed and recorded in anticipation of the release of their first album, "Meet the Neville Brothers," which only lasted a year and a half.

Sorority sponsoring benefit craft show

A crafts show that will help sponsor a scholarship for a Carbondale Community High School student will be held on Saturday at the Church Entertainment School student will be the recipient of the charity scholarship.

"We wanted to follow through with it on a local level," she said. "We will be giving away scholarships to Carbondale Community High School students who want to attend college of their choice. Ritzel said.

She said in past years the money was given to other charitable organizations, such as the Women's Center or Special Olympics.

Ritzel said that the organization of Beta Sigma Phi has given out several scholarships over the last few years.

"We have to follow through with the fund raisers," she said. "We have only been able to raise $400 this year. We would like to raise $300 and will be giving away a Reds baseball fan, which is the band's main sound. We have been able to raise almost $400 to date.

"We have to have a little help," she said. "We are planning on looking at the Qualifications of Chuck Grace.

Talk on work and family
set at Logan

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Work and family
harmony is a tough
balance, the coordinator of services to business and indus-tury at John A.
Logan College said.

To help employers understand some of the problems
working parents go through, the college will be hosting a teleconference from noon to 2 p.m. on Thursday in the
Rattee Room,
Rebecca Borgsmiter, coordinator, said.

The teleconference
will include research information and discussions with employees facing problems related to working parents,
Borgsmiller said.

"We schedule conferences when we feel there is a community need for them," Borgsmiller said.

The conferences also provide an opportunity for work to call in and ask questions of the speakers, she said.

The program is jointly produced by
Ohio State University and Oklahoma State University. It will originate on both campuses.

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill. (UPI) — A man charged with torching an all-black church near Alton Oct. 18 said he set the fire because he erroneously believed it was used for devil worship,
Madison County Sheriff Bob
Churchich said Tuesday.

James Russell Calvin, 19,
Alton, was arrested Monday and charged with one count of seven in the fire at the New Bethel A.M.E. Church of Rocky Fork. He was being held on $190,000 bond at the Randall County Jail.

The arson was the second in six months at the church. As April 16 fire, which also destroyed the church, still is under investigation, Churchich said. Russell, who is white, is not believed to have been involved in the first fire.

In his confession, Russell said he had set out with friends on the night of Oct. 17.

"They'd had a few beers and and the conversation turned to devil worship and cults," Churchich said. "Somehow they got around to believing that New Bethel was a cult of some kind."

Russell, who said he away without leave from the Navy, told authorities he borrowed a friend's car and burglarized and burned the church early on the morning of Oct. 18.

"I can't make this look like it was racially motivated because that had nothing to do with his story," Churchich said. "We have no reason not to believe his story."

The Rev. Steven Jackson, pastor of the church, was skeptical about the story but said he was relieved someone had been arrested.

Evaluating public on epilepsy is Foundation manager’s goal

By Phyllis Coon

The Illinois counties further south about epilepsy is a goal of the Epilepsy Foundation of southern Illinois during National Epilepsy Month, a case manager at the Mount Vernon office said.

"We need to reach as many people in Southern Illinois as we can," Connie Hogue, case manager, said. "Our problem is that we are located in Mount Vernon. We are striving to reach people in Carbondale and further south in the state."

The Mount Vernon office is the only office in Southern Illinois, Hogue said. The office, which opened in 1978, serves 27 counties, she said.

"A lot of people are not aware of epilepsy," Hogue said. "People drive past our office every day and don’t even notice us."

The Mount Vernon office is staffed by only three workers, she said.

"We don’t have enough people to get out and work in the other counties," Hogue said.

To promote public awareness during November in Mount Vernon, the foundation is advertising on billboards, she said. To reach people in the rest of Southern Illinois, public service announcements were sent to newspapers, she said.

"Many people can see a newspaper and know we are here," Hogue said.

The office, which is funded through the Department of Mental Health, the Department of Public Aid and the United Way, provides service including public and professional information, individual and family counseling and a children’s clinic, Hogue said.

The children’s clinic has 300 clients, she said. It is offered once a month.

"That’s what the percentage is in the area. There’s nothing abnormal happening in the number of people with epilepsy in the area," she said.

Of the four professionals, one is from Mount Vernon, one is from Springfield and two are from the Carbondale area.

Dr. Theodore Flynn is the director of the Alcohol and Substance Abuse Treatment Facility at Good Samaritan Hospital in Mount Vernon. Basanta said Flynn works with substance abusers and a majority of the people the office deals with are lawyers and doctors.

William Maran is a senior staff attorney with the Registration and Disciplinary Commission in Springfield. The commission has the power to revoke or suspend Illinois lawyers and physicians, she said. A majority of the cases are lawyers, she said.

The speakers are concerned about substance abuse among lawyers and physicians and how the problem is dealt with in terms of counseling and disciplinary actions, Basanta said.

There are about 100,000 new epilepsy cases each year, Hogue said. A majority of the cases are children, she said.

"Some children can outgrow the disorder if it is properly diagnosed and treated," Hogue said.

The No. 1 cause of epilepsy in adults is head injury, according to a press release from the Foundation. Seventy percent of the people with epilepsy can control their seizures with proper treatment and medication, the press release said.

Hogue manages 300 registered client’s cases, she said. Part of her job includes home visits of clients.

"If a person calls in I can go to their home and see what kind of help they need," Hogue said. "If they just need someone to talk to about their disorder, I can.

"We have brochures and presentations," she said. "We go to schools and nursing homes. If someone wants to learn more about epilepsy, we will be there for them."

Counselors to talk on drug abuse

By Mark Barnett

Legal, medical and substance abuse counseling professionals will discuss substance abuse in the legal and medical professions at 6:30 tonight in Room 102, Lesar Law Building.

Gene Basanta, faculty adviser for the Law and Medicine Association, said the guest speakers will look at substance abuse in the professions and the methods used to deal with the problem.

Pianist highlights Beethoven concert

The Beethoven Society for Pianists is giving a free concert Thursday night. Korean pianist Sooyeon Park performs at 8 p.m. in the Law School Auditorium.

The recital will include classical compositions by Bech, Haydn, Bartok, and Chopin.

Park, born in Busan, Korea in 1962, received her bachelor’s degree in music at the Seoul National University in 1985.

After coming to America, she earned her master’s degree and performer’s certificate at the Eastman School of Music in 1987.

Most recently, Park studied at the St. Louis Conservatory of Music pursuing her artist certificate.

Earlier this year, she appeared at the University as a guest pianist for the Beethoven Society’s Spring Festival.

Law and the Arts will co-sponsor the recital and help bring famous pianist Konrad Weib to campus Nov. 18 for an all-Beethoven concert.

Donald Beattie, School of Music professor, founded the Beethoven Society for Pianists in 1983.

Lowery campaigns for apprentice seat

By Jackie Spinner

Staff Writer

Republican Judge Donald Lowery said the 5th District Appellate Court is becoming a mecca for all the product liability lawsuits in St. Clair County.

"The domination of these suits in the court system has resulted in a tremendous workload on the county tax payers," he said.

The Pope County circuit judge is running against Democrat Philip Lowery for an additional judgeship B in the 5th Judicial District.

Lowery said the trend in the past has been to expand the court and let the law clerks run the court, but it is up to the legislature to make the laws and the judicial branch must simply interpret the law.

With the increasing overflow of cases in the judicial system, many of the less important cases such as filing papers and typing court opinion have been left to the law clerks.

"Law is ever-changing and the judiciary has to be a changing system, too," he said.

Lowery was elected Pope County circuit judge in 1960. He has worked as a public defender in Saline County and as a state's attorney in Massac County, and had a general practice.

"I wouldn't call myself a conservative or liberal," Lowery said. "I would say I am somewhere in the middle."

The judge earned his bachelor's degree in economics at SIU-C and was in the first graduating class at SIU School of Law in 1970.

The Fraternal Order of Police Lodges, Carbondale Police Department and Southern Illinois University Police have given Lowery their political endorsement.

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 415 also endorsed him.

Flute, organ recitals planned

Music lovers can enjoy two nights of music entertainment this weekend with flute and organ recitals sponsored by the School of Music.

The Graduate Recital, to be held at 8 p.m. Friday at the Old Baptist Foundation Recital Hall, will feature Patricia K. Duzenbery on the flute.

The Artist Subscriptions Recital will feature James Ribbens performing on the organ with selections from Bach, Alain and Reger. It will be held at 8 p.m. Saturday at Shroyer Hall, the College of Music.

Rarick vies for 5th District Appellate Court judgeship

By Jackie Spinner

Staff Writer

Democrat Philip Rarick has been involved in public service all of his professional life and said his 13-year commitment to public service more than qualifies him for appellate court judge.

Rarick is running against Republica Judge Donald Lowery for additional appellate court judge B in the 5th Judicial District.

As chief judge of the 3rd Judicial Court, Rarick instituted a policy that places judges on a 24-hour, seven-day-a-week call to handle domestic violence cases.

Long runs for judicial bench spot

By Jackie Spinner

Staff Writer

Republican candidate Tom Long said his experience as a lawyer gives him a special qualification for appellate court judge.

"There's a need for someone who is coming from representing real people on a day-to-day basis," he said. "I can take those concerns to the appellate court."

The Godfrey lawyer is running against Democrat Richard P. Goldenhersh for appellate judge A in the 5th Judicial District.

Long said he won't condone lengthy trials at the expense of the taxpayer.

Long, who calls himself a moderate conservative, supports capital punishment, tough sentencing for criminals, the rights of crime victims, enforcement of child support and strict interpretation of laws, obedience to the law, family values, and the right of Americans to bear arms.

The 38-year-old Kaskaskia native practices law at Farrell & Long, which focuses on business transactions. Long also holds licenses as a real estate broker, insurance broker, and certified public accountant.

He served as assistant state's attorney in Madison County from 1960 to 1964 and as a tax specialist from 1971 to 1978 for the firm Cooper's and Lybrand in St. Louis.

Long earned his law degree from Southern Methodist University School of Law in 1976, and his bachelor of science in business and accounting at Eastern Illinois University in 1972.

He and his wife, Ginny, have two children, Maggie and Erin.

Illinois voters to make call on over 400 issues Tuesday

Education funding, home equity, waste storage on ballot

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) - Voters in 250 Illinois communities will consider local referendums in the Nov. 8 election, with more than half of the issues involving local tax and bond referendums.

The 480 local referendums on the ballot, 223 will address tax and bond issues, and about 227 will ask voters to approve more tax money on education in local school districts, according to the State Board of Elections.

Other local issues include consolidation of five communities in the Quad Cities area, home equity programs in Chicago neighborhoods, locating a major airport in Kankakee County and the siting of a low-level nuclear waste storage facility in Clark and Wayne counties.

EDUCATION AND TAX ISSUES - 47 school tax issues and 22 school bond issues will be voted on Tuesday, according to the Illinois Association of School Boards.

"This is reflective of a number of things. First, in the rural areas is the idea of a local tax base is eroding dramatically because of the condition of the farm economy," said Jerry Glaub of the Illinois Association of School Boards.

"The other side is that the state has in no way held up its fair share of funding," said Doug Whitely of the Illinois Teachers Federation.

"I think there are a lot of school districts, especially in the downtown rural areas, that have little choice but to go forward with these proposals."

SEVEN COMMUNITIES will consider local referendums to be voted on in 19 downtown school districts, Glaub said.

"We are making a choice. Either they'll have no competent people left to pay a premium to keep their schools," he said. "There is a third alternative - do nothing and have bad schools."

In other proposals before voters, the state could help the way to having a few larger districts. Voters in five of the eight communities in the Illinois Quad Cities area — East Moline, Moline, Rock Island, Coal City and Hampton will be asked whether they want to merge into a Super City.

"We disagree with a number of George Bush's approaches to national problems. We believe he is an intelligent and competent man who will work diligently on the nation's most vital interests."

"The Oregonian: Bush "is exceptionally practiced at bringing people of differing outlooks under one umbrella. His leadership style would incline to cooperation, reasoned discourse and high ethical tone."

"The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer: "Michael Dukakis may not be the guy you'd most like to go fishing with. America doesn't need a fishing buddy — it needs a skilled, intelligent leader. Michael Dukakis is the candidate best suited to meet challenges our next president will face."

"The Denver Post: "African-Americans are forced between two good men running two bad campaigns." After whipping away the mud from both candidates, the Post believes George Bush is the better choice."

PROPONENTS of the plan say it would consolidate the town's economic development and leadership resources for the benefit of the region. Opponents of the plan fear higher taxes and say they are not happy with their local governments as they are for the plan to take place, a majority of voters in each of the three largest towns — Moline, East Moline and Rock Island — would have to agree to the plan. If the referendum fails in any of those three cities, the merger plan fails. Coal City and Hampton join the Super City only if their three neighbors agree to merge.

VOTERS in 613 precincts in 13 wards of Chicago will decide whether to establish home equity programs to insure homeowners against failing property values under a program approved last spring by the General Assembly.

Voters will decide whether to pay higher real estate taxes estimated to generate $4 million annually, from which homeowners would be reimbursed if property values have declined when they attempt to sell their homes.

The referendum will be on the ballot in predominantly white neighborhoods. Mayor Eugene Sawyer vetoed a city

EDUCATION DISTRICTS - The Miami Herald: Bush is "a seasoned leader with growth potential while Mr. Dukakis is over the earnest technocrat. The nation doesn't need an ill-defined iceman; it needs a president."

"The Minneapolis Star Tribune also endorsed Dukakis, but Bush received backing from, among others, The Miami Herald, San Antonio Light and The Seattle Post-Intelligencer."

Here are excerpts from selected newspaper endorsements:

The Times: "On the eve of struggle over which Americans must sacrifice to reduce the deficit, Mr. Bush argues, needlessly and recklessly, to give away billions to the rich. Far from putting out the fire, Mr. Bush would pour on gasoline. Getting America out of lock is, by far, the next president's most urgent job. Is he likely to do it better? The answer tips a closely balanced scale — to Michael Dukakis."

Blackjack dealer's intuition leads him to support Bush

Vegas man wishes top candidates would stop games

By Patrick E. Gauvin
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Editor's note: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently sent its reporters around the country to gather interviews with ordinary voters who will help choose the next president. This one was from Las Vegas.

LAS VEGAS -- Paul L. Goode works as an assembly line of sorts, laying down dimes and quarters, treads and tents, hitting on 16 and standing on in the line of the Golden Nugget Hotel.

His game of blackjack is so practiced that occasionally he loses his grip on the tiny, three-faced dolly he uses to deal and has to halt for a moment to recoup his hand. He's had even three deals in a row before noticing that a player was his mother.

The American voters are gamblers, a lot more on the presidential election than on the table games that are all over every gambler on blackjack.

THAT'S WHY Goode is disappointed that the dealers in Las Vegas may not be able to gamble in the November 8 election, if allowing them to gamble at the polls is ever considered.

In Wayne and Clark counties and eastern counties, voters will voice their opinions on whether to build a low-level nuclear waste storage facility.

In Kankakee County, voters will participate in an advisory referendum on whether a third major airport for the Chicago area should be built in the southern portion of the county. State and regional officials are considering a new airport to relieve congestion at O'Hare International Airport.

In Pekin, a referendum will be conducted on whether citizens want to proceed with efforts to become the site of one of a federal prison for minimum and medium security inmates.

For a president, he said, "I look for calmness, someone who will not overreact in a situation. Bush seems calmer than Dukakis, he said."

In fact, Goode explained, "I am generally more comfortable with George Bush. A lot of people are saying a lot of bad things about Dan Quayle, but I feel relatively comfortable with him, too. I'm not overreacting with him, but I don't feel overreacting."

Goode said he had turned more conservative since he had been voted for a Democrat for president, Jimmy Carter in 1976.

He said he felt sorry for people who made up their minds to vote for just more at stake in the election than he and his family.

"YOU REALLY take a chance when you vote for someone for president," said the man who knows the business of taking chances.

"If I were to make a bet on it, I'd conclude the odds against Dukakis, " he said.

Leonard charges boxer with not promoting fight

By Dave Hafso
UNLV Sports
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Ray Leonard, who expects Donny Lalonde to cooperate in the ring Monday night, charges the lightweight champ failed to cooperate in promoting their double title bout.

Lalonde's World Boxing Council light heavyweight and the new World Boxing Association light heavyweight championships will be at stake Monday night if Leonard wins, he will become the first boxer to win world championships in five divisions.

Leonard and Lalonde will divide the money generated by the bout, with the book coming in at $15 million. With no guarantees, the boxers have been willing to do media appearances and make public appearances, but Leonard says Lalonde has not done his fair share.

"I don't think he's hurt the promotion, but he hasn't done it justice either," Leonard said of his opponent. "He should be doing more to promote the fight."

If Leonard wins, he wants a piece of the pie, he should do his part.

Lalonde says he has cooperated with all the groups running the promotion. They include Caesar's Palace, where the fight will take place; Titan Sports, which runs the pay TV operation; and Coors, the beer company which has a long-term deal with Leonard and kicked in $4.5 to sponsor the bout.

"I've done everything asked of me," said Lalonde, a Canadian who was little known as a world super middleweight title holder.

Leonard also accuses Lalonde of forgetting who is the star of the show.

"When Leonard first agreed to end his retirement to fight Lalonde, the two seemed friendly. They would use the pre-fight buildup to bring attention to the cause (Lalonde's cause) and anti-apartheid (Leonard's). But once their media tour began in late August, all cooperation went out the window.

"The two or three weeks on the press tour were hell," Leonard said. "I flew on the same plane as him, and Lalonde and his people were rushing to get on the plane first and put their luggage on last. Then we did a commercial or Coors and he was uncooperative.

"I felt like I just started out in my professional career, like he was the star. I thought, 'If he thinks he's the big star now, how's he going to feel Nov. 17? He must think he's going to knock me out.'"

Leonard said Lalonde's charges were unfounded.

"I think the days of playing who gets the best seat are over. I stopped playing that when I was about 10 years old," said Lalonde, who's 22.

Leonard, a 28-year-old former lightweight champion, tried to get inside Marvis Frazier's head, didn't work. He tried to plant suble seeds inside my head about his confidence.

"I don't get into psychological games. Once the weight is in, it's just part and I'll do it," Leonard said.

Leonard, a 5-foot-7, 154-pounder from Potomac, Md., is a 91 favorite over Lalonde. Leonard won an upset 12-round decision over middleweight champion Marvin Hagler April 6, 1987 in his last bout. The victory ran his record to 24-1 with 24 knockouts and gave world titles in the light heavyweight, junior middleweight and middleweight divisions.

Lalonde, 31-7 with 26 knockouts, went the 175-pound title with a second-round knockout of Eddie Davis last November and defended it by stopping Leslie Stivel in five rounds May 29.

New boxing organization sanctions Friday's bout

LAL VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — In a perfect boxing marriage, the new World Boxing Organization has sanctioned the Friday night, October 31 bout between the Hears-James Kinchen fight as an official super middleweight title bout.

The WBO hopes its sanction will give credibility to the practices, regulations and restrictions and hunting areas within the organization.

The division will divide the money generated by the bout, with the book coming in at $15 million. With no guarantees, the boxers have been willing to do media appearances and make public appearances, but Leonard says Lalonde has not done his fair share.

Noble is a key factor in 3-match win streak

By Lisa Warns

Aggressive, serious and confident are all words that can describe Teri Noble's volleyball performance this season. The senior outside hitter is stepping forward aggressively as the team leader in digs (202) and is second in aces (28) and second in total kills (218). Noble has led in kills and digs in seven matches so far. "I don't understand how I've been kill leader," Noble said. "Lori (Simpson) and Nina (Brackins) are so powerful that I wonder why I'm kill leader. My kills come from roll shots or off blocks. They are not kills that hit the floor." Noble had 27 kills and a .285 hitting percentage in the Salukis two victories over Bradley and Western this weekend. Brackins and Noble are required to do 64 kills everyday at practice in order to be in proportion with their opponents. "I'm not afraid when we're ahead. We need to be aggressive," Noble said. When her team is in the midst of a streak, the senior setter says she has to be coachable because if she doesn't, she said, she will be left on the bench. "I'm kill leader. My kills come hard, work hard, win still have fun," Noble said. "We demonstrated that in a 3-match win streak." Noble's confidence comes from being a three-year starter. "I know I can do it," Noble said. "I take one practice at a time." "I want my experience to come through on the court." Noble said. "I don't want to sit back. I like to feel I'm needed, if I don't, I close up." The team's communication is improving, Noble said. "As a whole we are more of a team. We give feedback on our mistakes and we are not afraid to criticize," Noble said. "We believe the team must improve on defense in preparation for future matches." Noble is battling a cold but she said when she has a cold it makes her work harder.

That public display wasn't lost on the players, it seems. The team went on to win three straight conference matches for a 6-1 league record. But above all, the players started talking to each other. Chief among the talkers now is senior setter Sue Sinclair, whose job it is to call plays and make switches in the defensive alignment as the need arises. Though she says communication on the court is not constant, it is improving. Western Illinois went the distance against the Salukis in the first game, losing 10-13. Hunter had called a time out when an individual player goes on her own," Hunter said. "It still goes haywire when an individual player goes on her own," Hunter said. "It still goes haywire when an individual player goes on her own," Hunter said. "We need to work harder. We need to be the ones who are the leaders."

The women's basketball team may have suffered an early season setback Tuesday at the arena, as senior center Cathy Kampwerth twisted her knee and went down hard in practice. Diagnosis as to the extent of her injury was still in doubt late Tuesday night.

Sally Perkins, women's athletic trainer, said that Kampwerth would see a physician today. Coach Scott could not be reached for comment.

Last season Kampwerth led the Salukis in field goal percentage (39.8) and free throw percentage (.771). She was also the second player of the evening to go out of practice.

Senior point guard Deanna Sanders, sat on the sidelines most of practice with ice on her injured shoulder. According to assistant coaches the extent of her injury was not serious.

"Deanna just needs a couple days rest at this point," Julie Beck, assistant and recruiting coordinator said.

Also on the sidelines was freshman Grace Johnson who suffered earlier in the week.

Beck said that Johnson will probably return Thursday.

George Hubelt, assistant and recruiting coordinator said, that minor injuries had been prevalent thus far in the season.

"The kids are in good shape for early season," Hubelt said. "But we've had several minor injuries where kids will be out for only one or two days."

Beck said the athletes had kept themselves in good shape during the preseason and that this had probably prevented any serious injuries so far.

"We start out really quick at the beginning of the season," Beck said.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Twenty three years have passed and no one has scored six touchdowns in an NFL game.

Gale Sayers, at 46 and despite six knee operations, looks only slightly less in shape than the 1965 rookie who was the most recent of the three NFL players to score six times in a game.

The former Chicago Bear, an early riser when he was the roommate of Brian Piccolo, wakes up at 4:30 every morning — "because that's what time my body wakes up, I'm on the golf course by six" — and is up until midnight. Four hours of inactivity per day is still enough.

Sayers was in Philadelphia Monday night when Eric Dickerson, in Indianapolis, went on a nationally televised tear for four touchdowns by Sayers' visits to NFL cities is in conjunction with his position as the sponsor's spokesman for the NFL-sanctioned Rookie of the Year program. Each of the 28 teams denied him when the Hall of Famer and former Southern Illinois University at Carbondale athletics director with a masters in administration applied.

"Infuriated? No, no," he said. "I prepared myself, I applied and they said no. They don't owe me anything. I've been long since forgotten trying to figure it out."

He was asked if he'd expected football to follow baseball with increased hiring of blacks in management since the infamous Al Campanis incident.

"I would have thought it would but it hasn't," he said. He also looked into owning a team, and was asked if that's the only way for a black to get into NFL management.

"I don't think owning a professional franchise is as good as it was. There are a lot of drugs, salaries are out of sight."

Sayers was told his no second-hance, no steroids stand might make for a bad team and he said "real bad."

"When Brian died at 36, that's young, and it made me realize I was very selfish. Three things were important to me: football, football and football."

Now, there is so much else that Sayers claims he'd be unavailable to enter an NFL office from now on — a goal all 28 teams denied him when the Hall of Famer and former Southern Illinois University at Carbondale athletics director with a masters in administration applied.

ALL-MISSOURI VALLEY CONFERENCE

Basketball’s Busch wants to earn spot

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

For 6-foot-10 center David Busch of the men’s basketball team, the war on the floor has begun. He is nowhere near ready to surrender.

The sophomore was all set to start in the middle for SIU last season and was elated it’s his turn to get down on himself and slam the ball on the floor. The next 15 or 15 minutes following that incident he will play poorly.” Busch said his tendency to get frustrated is something he has to overcome.

“If things go your way, your confidence builds up,” Busch said. "When you get balanced was just a precaution.”

Hardee suffered an injury to his knee and though some extent of the damage will not be known until more extensive tests are conducted.
