The eyes of the world will be focused on SAN FRANCISCO where the United Nations will meet as April 25 to draft a charter for a General Assembly to ensure future peace. The DUMBARTON OAKS BASES OF FUTURE WORLD PEACE.

Perhaps the most striking man in the nation over the Presi- dent's retirement and international conference is Harry S. Truman. Within two and one-half hours notice, he was hurriedly referred to one of the most prominent positions in the world. As he packed his bags, "the weight of the moon and stars fell on me this afternoon."

At the most, this was an understatement.

If the President's second of retirement was deep enough to have a conception of the magnitude of the duties he had to perform, he made the fact known to the American people in a most efficient job for quite some time, and it is not at all likely that these men, mostly military leaders, would be replaced. But a few men, Harry S. Truman, and Helmar Brunn, are undoubtedly, had yet to be completely oriented in their new positions in the world. In a burst of enthusiasm, President Truman declared that no sweeping changes in the policies of personnel would be made—just now. But before the war end, new leaders, new policies were being developed.

The keynote of the new President was and always would be expected to favor the peace of the world.

The main bodies within which the objectives would be accomplished are: a GENERAL ASSEMBLY, composed of representatives of all nations, in which each state would have one vote; a SECURITY COUNCIL, composed of representatives of 11 member states. The United States, Great Britain, Russia, and China, especially Russia, would have permanent seats, while six states would be elected to five-year terms by the General Assembly. An INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE, a SECRETARIAT, an ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL, composed of representatives of member states, would be a permanent body. An INTERPOL, a network of police, and a CENTRALIZED PLANNING BOARD, would be a permanent body.

This Assembly, on the other hand, would be a permanent body, which would be composed of representatives of all states in the world, and which would be elected by the General Assembly. The Security Council, on the other hand, would be a permanent body, which would be elected by the General Assembly. The Secretary-General, on the other hand, would be a permanent body, which would be elected by the General Assembly. The Secretary-General, on the other hand, would be a permanent body, which would be elected by the General Assembly. The Secretary-General, on the other hand, would be a permanent body, which would be elected by the General Assembly. The Secretary-General, on the other hand, would be a permanent body, which would be elected by the General Assembly.

As the principal judicial body of the United Nations, it would be responsible for the conduct of judicial proceedings, the application of international law, and the rendering of judgments. The Court would have jurisdiction over disputes arising out of the interpretation or application of international law, or in connection with the conduct of international relations.

The Court would have jurisdiction over disputes arising out of the interpretation or application of international law, or in connection with the conduct of international relations.
