Reiman pleads guilty, resigns from campus job

By Richard Goldstein and Laura Milbrath
Staff Writers

Dale Reiman, former assistant director of the Physical Plant, pleaded guilty to charges of kidnapping, unlawful restraint and aggravated criminal sexual abuse and was sentenced to one year in the Jackson County Jail.

Reiman also resigned his position at the Physical Plant.

Thursday, William Capie, executive director of personnel and labor relations said: "He has been separated from University employment," Capie said.

There certainly is a chance that he could return at some date in the future, but he would have to compete for any other position that may become vacant," Capie said.

President John C. Guyon said it is "most unlikely that Mr. Reiman will return" to University employment.

Reiman was originally accused of sexually assaulting a 19-year-old male student worker December 5 through 8, 1985.

He later was tried for alleged solicitation to commit murder. Specifically, for allegedly paying David Scott Polk, an inmate at the Shawnee Correctional Center in Johnson County, $750 to kill the student worker whom he is alleged sexually abused. The case ended in a mistrial.

Reiman's plea bargaining agreement reduced the solicitation to commit murder to a felony charge to commit kidnapping. State's Attorney John R. Clemens said.

Along with the one-year sentence which allows no time off for good behavior, Reiman was ordered by Judge David W. Watt to pay $5,500 in fines and court costs and $5,000 in restitution to the victim.

In the agreement, Reiman does not begin serving his jail sentence until Oct. 15.

A press release issued by the state's attorneys offices in Jacksonville and Jacksonville, said the victim in the case had "indicated his satisfaction and agreement with the disposition.

Presidential campaign hits Illinois

Train tour takes Duke to Belleville

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

BELLEVILLE - Massachusetts Gov Michael Dukakis began making tracks toward the White House Monday in Belleville when he began an Amtrak tour that will take his campaign through four states.

Dukakis described the train campaign as the "journey that will not take us only to Illinois, but Missouri, Arkansas and Texas over the next couple of days, but will take us all the way to the White House on Nov. 8." U.S. Sen. Alan Dixon, State Comptroller Roland Burris, State's Attorney Neil Hartigan, State Sen. Glen Poshard and U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, were on hand with about 2,000 spectators to welcome the Dukakis express to Illinois.

"Here be comes," said one spectator to her 2-year-old daughter as the Dukakis motorcade approached the site.

After expressing thanks to the crowd and the politicians and introducing his wife Kitty, Dukakis went straight to work attacking the Republicans, who finished their national convention Thursday night.

"This week in New Orleans the Republicans celebrated the past. And this week in Illinois we celebrate the present," Capie said.

State fair Bush's 1st solo stop

By Scott Perry

SPRINGFIELD - Vice President George Bush made a leisurely stop at the Illinois State Fair Sunday filling up on ethnic food and showing Illinois voters his hunger for a second presidency.

"I believe I'd be a good president," Bush said on the lawn of Agriculture director Larry A. Werries. The visit was the first solo stop for Bush since the end of the Republican national convention on Saturday.

A vibrant crowd greeted the Republican presidential nominee at the fairgrounds. Hundreds were waving including one that read "Bush kicks liberal butt."

Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana, Bush's controversial pick for running mate, was not present, having returned to Washington with Bush's campaign chairman James Baker to "get his act together;" a Newsweek poll has Bush's VP choice questioned.

Bush's visit came just three days after the wealthy son of Texas oilman Clayton Bush announced he would consider running for the Republican presidential nomination in 1992.

Bush led the line of Republican candidates in the polls for the position of running mate for Mr. Dukakis by nine percentage points. Bush made reference to the polls, which earlier in the campaign he felt were unimportant, saying "even these polls that have me kicked and kicked hard seem to be going in the right direction."

Republican presidential candidate George Bush and his wife, Barbara, arrive at Springfield's Capital Airport before staffing Illinois State Fair Sunday.

He defended his choice for a running mate, saying Quayle "will do well" and that he is a "good generation change."

"Dan Quayle," Bush said, "is a man who is 41-years-old and did serve in the National Guard with pride.

New engineering degrees accredited

The new civil and mechanical engineering major in the College of Engineering and Technology, said.

Official notification was received by the college Aug. 8 that both programs had been accredited by the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology, Inc.

Graduating from an accredited school allows engineering students to take the engineer in training exam in the senior year and the professional engineer exam after four years in the field, as opposed to a non-accredited program after which the engineer in training exam is taken in seven years.

The civil engineering major did pass in 1988 because the review board felt that the program needed more design courses. Tempelmeyer said.

He added that about $400,000 has been spent upgrading the college since then.

About 400 students are expected to enroll in mechanical engineering and civil engineering.

"We are limiting enrollment due to limited space," Tempelmeyer said. "This building (Technical Careers Building) was built in the late 1960s for about 1,000 students. We now have 2,000."

The electrical engineering, mining engineering and environmental engineering programs will face review by the accreditation board later this fall.

Earthquake in Nepal kills 600, injures thousands

BHAKTAPUR, Nepal (UPI) — A powerful earthquake shook the Himalayas along the Indian-Nepalese border Sunday, killing more than 600 people and injuring thousands in the region's worst quake in more than half a century, officials and news reports said. The quake, whose epicenter was about 100 miles northwest of the Nepalese capital of Kathmandu, was measured at 7.6 on the Richter scale by the U.S. Geological Survey, but the Nepalese Department of Mines and Minerals said it registered 7.8.

Iran-Iraq truce holds despite minor violations

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — Iran and Iraq exchanged charges Sunday of violating a truce that went into effect in the 5-year-old Persian Gulf war, but a U.N. official said the 6-month-old truce appeared to be holding. Gulf-based U.N. officials said U.N. troops monitoring the truce along the 750-mile frontier between Iran and Iraq were investigating the violation claims and U.N. troops on patrol said the truce Sunday appeared to be holding, with white flags up on both sides and soldiers walking around unarmed.

Soviet police quell Warsaw Pact invasion riot

MOSCOW (UPI) — Riot police and plainclothes KGB agents Sunday broke up a demonstration by more than 200 people protesting the Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia 20 years ago. Dissidents said 154 people were arrested and witnesses said some protesters were roughly handled. Witnesses said that up to 200 protesters gathered to protest the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact invasion to crush the "Prague Spring" liberal reform movement of Alexander Dubcek on Aug. 20, 1968.

Walesa threatens to call for shipyard strike

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — Solidarity founder Lech Walesa, backed financially by the government, said direct talks ignored, said Sunday he would call for a strike at the Lenin shipyard, famed birthplace of the now outlawed Solidarity union. Walesa earlier told a rally of 3,000 supporters outside St. Brigilda's Church in the Baltic seaport he would recommend a strike unless the government began talking with representatives of striking shipyard workers in southwestern coal mines and in the port city of Szczecin.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Marine Corps has carelessly exposed tens of thousands of secret military documents to possible compromise by regularly failing to safeguard classified information, an internal report says. The whereabouts of these papers is unknown.

Mechanics plug shuttle leak; problems remain

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Preliminary testing indicates mechanics successfully plugged a steaming rocket leak aboard the shuttle Discovery, officials said Sunday, but what to do about a different leak and two slow-closing valves remains unresolved. At the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, where Discovery stands mounted on launch pad 39B, engineers Sunday were checking the results of an unprecedented bit of shuttle surgery that required them to cut into the ship's left-side orbital maneuvering system rocket pad last week to reach a tiny fuel leak.
Students survive heat
Asbestos removal delays air conditioning turn-on; dorms didn’t cool off
By Kimberly Clarke
Staff Writer

All the students moving to SIU-C these past few days have had to contend with one major problem, the heat.

However, for the students on East Campus the heat was not only outside, but inside too.

The air conditioning system was turned on only one day before the students came to school, Steve Kirk, assistant director of housing and residence life, said.

"It takes three to four days for the buildings to cool off, so when the students moved in it was a little warmer than we would have liked," Kirk said.

The air conditioners weren't turned on earlier because of asbestos removal in the mechanical equipment room in Trueblood.

Asbestos was found in the insulation, prompting the decision to do some work and remove the substance this summer, Kirk said.

Asbestos used to be used in insulation and fireproofing of buildings, and it was banned by the federal government ten years ago because of its cancer causing agents.

A private contractor, United Thermal Industries Inc., was hired by the University to remove the asbestos, and the projected date for the project to end was July 31, Kirk said.

However, it took longer than expected, and the project wasn't actually finished until early this past week, Kirk said.

After a check took place for asbestos fibers making sure everything was safe, the air conditioning could then be turned on.

Thus, Kirk said, was one of the main problems that occurred while over 3,000 students were moved in on Wednesday, August 17, one of the hottest days of the summer.

One desk worker at Mae Smith agreed.

The worker, who asked not to be identified, described the dorms by saying "it felt like the Chicago housing I lived in when I was little.

"It's not a good sight for the new students, when they walk into a hot building from the outside where it is 105 degrees," the worker, who also lives on the eighth floor of Mae Smith, said.

"It gives the new students a bad image of the administration, and how it works."

The dorms affected were Brush Towers and University Park, however, now the system is starting to cool off the rooms and with the aid of fans most of the students seem to be doing all right.

The air conditioning in the Triads wasn’t turned on until Thursday, Kirk said.

"It's not a good sight for the new students, when they walk into a hot building from the outside where it is 105 degrees. It gives the students a bad image of the administration and how it works."

—Mae Smith desk worker said.

Fortunately for some, the heat wasn’t really a problem.

"The heat didn’t really bother me because I was so excited about everything," Tammy True, freshman with an undecided major, said.

"It’s a resident of Nesty Hall.

Most of the complaints Kirk received displayed patience and understanding of the problem, he said.

or not Quayle used family influence to enter the National Guard, dodging the Vietnam draft.

Bush also fielded questions concerning Quayle’s education record. Bush tried to deflect the barrage of questions with off-the-cuff remarks and his own education record.

“Don’t look at my high school records,” he said.

During his speech Bush said he would deal with Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev “from strength not from.paucilous weakness.”

Bush said he used the word “pusillanimous,” which means cowardly, to show the press that he’s a “smart guy after all.”

Bush also took time to defend the Reagan administration’s economic policies. He said the Democrats are calling a “lame, a scenario.”

Bush looked that way to the three blind mice, but it doesn’t look that way to the American people,” he said.

Bush described the Democrats as being pessimistic and said he wanted to keep the good times going.

“America knows great progress is being made and hopefully they see me in a person that will continue the progress.”

when you think what’s going to happen to them in November, you can’t blame them,” he said.

Dukakis criticized the Reagan presidency and general candidate George Bush for looking back, and said he and the Democrats are looking to the future.

“We are looking to the future and on Jan. 20, 1989, we’re going to roll up our sleeves and go to work for the people of this country, and make the American dream come true for every citizen.”

Although he did not see Bush address the Republican convention Thursday evening, Dukakis said he had read through the speech.

Dukakis said it looked like a good speech, but said too that he “must have missed a page.”

“Theres no thing was there about the two biggest economic challenges we face in the country,” Dukakis said, referring to the nation’s budget and trade deficits.

“I don’t know how to deal with the deficits and they don’t know what to do with the deficit. That’s why we’ll have a Democratic president and a Democratic Congress.”

Dukakis attacked the past which Bush spoke so highly of in his acceptance speech claiming there was “not one word said by the Republican party about the pentagon scandal, the need of a homeless, health insurance and a just ice department that “doesn’t even know the meaning of the word justice.”

Education took the spotlight as Dukakis branded the Reagan administration with doing “everything it could to cut back on college grants and loans.”

“There is nothing more important for a youngster who wants to go to college and get a college education,” Dukakis said.

Reaction to the speech was generally favorable and many felt a Michael Dukakis-Lloyd Bentsen victory in November was assured.

Joe Lococo, of Edwardsville, said the speech was a good summary of all the important points.

“Besides that,” he said, “it’s nice to see him. It’s nice to see someone who might be president.”

Roland Burris said the message delivered by Dukakis to the people of Illinois is the same message he will deliver to the nation in the future.

“The message is,” he said, “that is the man who will make him the next president of the United States.”

Anti-abortionists protest Dukakis

By Scott Perry

BELLEVILLE — When Gov. Michael Dukakis arrived in Belleville Friday for the first leg of his train campaign, there was a little more waiting for him than a crowd of happy supporters waving Democratic campaign posters.

People bearing signs with such things as "Dukakis favors death for babies" and "Dukakis is for killing the unborn" written upon them, were also on hand protesting the man they see as "the most pro-abortion candidate ever to run for the U.S. presidency."

The protesters were representatives of the Missouri Citizens for Life. About 100 members came by car and bus to protest the Dukakis visit.

Peggy Bull, chapter chairman and a group member since 1973, drove from the Lake of the Ozarks to participate in the protest. Despite categorizing herself as a "far-to-the-left liberal," Bull said she will support Bush because of his anti-abortion stance.

"Dukakis wins the presidency," Bull said, "there will be no end to abortion for many years to come because justices are appointed for life."

Bull claims Dukakis is pro-abortion, based on his record in Massachusetts. But on the campaign trail, Dukakis has been saying he opposes abortion but believes women should decide.

Democrats, GOP question Bush's nomination of Quayle

By Scott Perry Special to the GAZETTE

Will he, or will he not? That is the question.

Then Quayle, a young, relatively unknown, conservative U.S. Senator from Indiana, hurt George Bush and the Republicans in their attempt to retain the White House?

Only time will tell.

From the moment he was named Bush's running mate, Quayle, who plays the scion of the media, the Democrats and even his own party.

At first the issue was that of age experience. But the tide has now turned to make it a question of ethics and whether or not he used his family's influence to enter into the Indiana National Guard and dodge the draft for active duty in Vietnam.

In an effort to maintain party unity, the Republicans appeared to support Bush's decision on the face of it, but the Republican National Convention, while the Democrats continue to look at the nomination of Quayle as a mistake in there favor.

"I think the negative publicity while the convention was going on kind of stopped the bounce a little," Dillard said. But he said he didn't think the long term effects would be damaging.

State Comptroller Roland Burris sees the race as being very close and warns the Democrats not to depend on the Quayle controversy to win the election.

"Certainly Bush has his problems with the Senator, and he's going to have to solve some problems. He said, "But we're not going to depend on that issue to win."

Dillard said that Nixon has done a good job through the years of belt tightening by the city and has made Carbondale a stable city government as a result of an ongoing program to make top city administrators better at what they do.

Projects Dixon cited as priorities at the beginning of his tenure, will remain in limbo with his deparure. Dillard says, saying the city got a good city administrator as a result of an ongoing program to make top city administrators better at what they do. Dillard said Dixon also helped personally when he took over the mayoral duties in early September.

"He (Dixon) helped me a lot when I was in the transition when Mayor (Helen) Westberg retired," Dillard said. Dillard said a search will be conducted for a new city manager and the City Council will decide the scope of the search and whether to name an acting city manager by the Tuesday meeting.

Dillard said there is a new sense of unity among the Democrats, something that wasn't present when Mondale and Dukakis were running for the presidency.

"The Republicans didn't beat us. We beat ourselves," he said.

BURRIS SAID the decision to name Quayle his running mate shows the insincerity of Bush.

"He could not stand to have something like this going on," he said.

Burris contrasted Quayle with Dukakis' running mate Lloyd Bentsen.

"Bentsen has his own mind. Bentsen and Dukakis do not agree on the same issues. But if something's God forbid, would ever happen to Michael Dukakis, Bentsen can govern the country," he said.

City Manager Dixon resigns

By Richard Goldstein Special to the GAZETTE

City Manager William Dixon has announced his resignation, but Mayor Neil Dillard said the city would function smoothly until a replacement is found because Dixon has built a solid administration during his nearly five years at the post.

"He (Dixon) is leaving partly because he was running for carrying on the duties of the city government. Dillard said. "He doesn't know what the direct impact (of Dixon's leaving) will be."

Dixon will leave October 15 for a similar position in St. Louis, Park, Minnesota, and a $10,000 pay raise. The Aug. 17 Southern Illinoisan reported Dixon will receive $60,000 a year in his new position in the Minneapolis suburb which has a population of 43,000.

The City Council remains on schedule to decide on the controversial West Center Way controversy to make Main Street one-way westbound and a roundabout at Equality eastbound all the way through town, will be made before late September.

Dixon would not reveal his position on the people saying the city staff will make a roundabout at Equality in mid-September. The City Council is expected to make a decision on that project Sept. 27.

However, two other projects will be discussed at the meeting Dixon's exit. The railroad relocation project "Big Ditch," and the proposed downtown convention center, projects Dixon cited as priorities at the beginning of his tenure, will remain in limbo with his deparure. Dillard says, saying the city got a good city administrator as a result of an ongoing program to make top city administrators better at what they do. Financial aid director search narrowed to 3 candidates

A committee conducting an intensive search for a replacement for Joseph M. Capozzoli, administrative director of the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance, has narrowed the pool to three people.

Ken Drablin and Dan Mann, currently associate directors for the office, and Connie Shanahan, academic advisor for the College of Technical Careers, have been recommended and approved by Harvey Weich, vice president for the Office of Student, and George McCoy, chairman of the search committee, said interviews will begin this week.

Jean Paratore, assistant to the vice president, has been acting director since Aug. 15.

She said, “I have no interest

That was understood from the beginning.”

Camille left Aug. 12 for a job at the University of Missouri at Columbia after eight years at SIU-C.

Paratore said she goes to SWA every other day to go through the mail and talk to outside people.

“They know that area well, on a day-to-day basis, Paratore said. They are continuing to do what they usually do.

Paratore said she was probably picked for the position because she works with students who often have problems with financial assistance. She also works with student government, the student legal system and the Office of Intramural Recreational Sports.

Students’ addresses can be fixed this week

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Government will provide address correction cards for students to update their local addresses for the 1988-89 academic year.

A table will be set up on the first floor of the Student Center where students can obtain the cards between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., Hall said.

FORMER GSGI chief of staff Susan Hall said students must complete an address correction card to have their local addresses and phone numbers inserted in the student directory unless they have already done so at Admissions and Records in Woody Hall.

The USG will send the changes to Admission and Records, where they will be put on computer tape and sent to a publishing company in North Carolina.

This year, 3,000 directories, which are paid for by advertisers, will be distributed to students in the on-campus housing areas and in the Student Center for off-campus students in October.

Students also may fill out the cards at Admission and Records, Hall said, but must do so before the second week in September.

Dan Phillips has high goals set for the Marching Salukis.

Phillips, who has recently been hired to assist Mike Hanes with the band, said his first priorities are for the band to be entertaining and for the band members to have a good time.

“Within those parameters, I’d also like to have good quality music and marching,” he said.

Phillips describes the Marching Salukis as “a rowdy and fun-loving group of people.”

“They know when to party, which is good,” he said.

He said they also know when to work, which is a change from the group he worked with while teaching at Iowa State University.

Phillips completed his undergraduate work at Michigan State University and received his master’s degree from the University of Notre Dame.

He taught at Southeastern College in Warwick, Kan., for one year and has taught in Iowa for the last eight years.

“I like it here,” he said. “I’m along for the ride right now, trying to get to know the students.”

“There are very strong traditions here, and I don’t want to destroy any of these,” he said. “I’ll have to learn the traditions before I can even think of making any changes.”

Phillips said he has “much respect” for Hanes, who has been here for more than 20 years.

Phillips lives in the Carbondale area with his dog, Oopie, a beagle, and enjoys bicycling in his free time.

Federal aid studied for transit project

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

The quest for mass transit moved forward last Monday when student representatives met with officials from the City, the University, and the Illinois Department of Transportation to investigate how federal matching funds for the transit system could be tapped.

To do this, money collected from a proposed $15 student fee increase would be turned over to the City as a “gift.”

The city then would file for federal funds through IDOT, Undergraduate Student Government President Bill Hall said.

In a referendum last spring students approved the proposal for a $15 fee increase to be used for a mass transit system. However, the fee will not go into effect until a transit system has been approved by the administration and the Board of Trustees, Marlin Tanner of the USG mass transit board, said.

Tanner said he had hoped to present the Board of Trustees with a proposal by January, but has been running in Carbondale by fall of 1989.

If the USG and Graduate and Professional Student Councils pursue a federal grant, Tanner said mass transit would not be instituted before fall 1990.

Tanner summed up the feeling of the students who attended the meeting: “I feel the meeting was very productive and we don’t want to lose control of the transit system.”

If federal money were to be obtained, an advisory board would be established. GPSC President Trungy Hall said this would help students maintain control of the system.

“In our hands, 80 percent of the decision-making,” Hall said. “The advisory board should be students,” he said.

City Manager William C. Dixon said a $20,000 to $40,000 feasibility study must be contracted before the transit system can move forward.

The USG, GPSC, SIU-C administration and the City will be asked to help fund the study.

Hall and Hale said they would propose that money be appropriated from the USG and GPSC budgets respectively.

President John C. Guyon said, “I’m sure we’d be happy to participate in the cost of the study.”

Dixon said he doesn’t know if the City Council will give money for the study, he said, “I hope that the council would be receptive.”

Linda Gladson, a city planner, said another route through the Northeast section of town, because it is the poorest, probably would be necessary to receive federal money.

Physical examinations for all student-athletes will be held in Davis Training Room 203 during the first week of the semester, Sally Perkins and Ed Lentz, SIU-C head athletic trainers, said.

Interscholastic Athletics requires physicals prior to the first practice of each year. Students participating should come to the training room with their respective coaches before attending a physical.

All physicals will be held from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

said. He said it is common for a typical round player to lose six pounds in a day’s time, hence the need for a large amount of water.

Thompson said some early symptoms of heat exhaustion are headaches, stomach cramps, chest pain and muscle cramps. Football players are involved in this activity, and he said he has dealt with this as good as anyone in the past 10 years.

He said it is possible, though still gets as hard as possible.

but I think the experience last year was huge,” he said.

The Salukis will add 28 new players, 15 from junior colleges and 13 from the high school level. “We are looking forward to having them. They are a very eager group,” Rhoades said.

Rhoades said football is a tough road to travel, which is why he and his coaches need to push the team now. “It’s hard to get in the heat because day when it’s 100 degrees,” he said. “It’s not easy to see any improvement,” Rhoades said.

Searching for solidifying things,” Tompkins said. “Willie Davis and Earnest Mangham have done a great job in some of the spots.”

Davis, a junior, is the left corner and Mangham, a senior, is set at right corner.“Sophomore Ed Lentz and junior college players will fill in the rest,” Tompkins said.

Crouse said he feels part of the defense’s strength is its ability to come together, thanks in part to the severe heat of late. “As far as weakness is concerned, it’s hard to say until we get into a game,” he said.

While the Salukis lost 26 players last year, they gained only nine, 11 from junior colleges and 13 from the high school level. “We are looking forward to having them. They are a very eager group,” Rhoades said.

Gateway has three new coaches

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

It's been said that change is essential for improvement to take place.

Well, if that truism is applied to the Gateway Conference, then the league could expect to experience growing pains based on offseason moves.

Of the seven schools that have football teams, three have made head coaching changes.

The biggest surprise was at Northern Iowa. Fifth-year coach Darrell Mudra resigned after getting his 300th career victory and leading the Panthers to conference titles in 1987 and 1989.

Then came a bigger surprise. Earle Bruce, former coach at Ohio State before being fired Nov. 17 following a dispute with that school's administration, was named Northern Iowa's head coach.

That puts the defending champs, who advanced to the Division I-AA semifinals, again in an excellent position to claim the conference title.

At the other end of the league standing was Illinois State, which lost all six of its Gateway Conference games this season. Bob Otolski, the Redbirds' coach of seven years was fired to make room for new head coach Jim Heacock.

This also was a surprise.

Northern Iowa's head coach.

Heacock was the lane's assistant coach at SIU-C. Coach Ray Hart, winner who led the Salukis to a standing conference title.

Earle Bruce has Northern Iowa thinking about defending its title

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The Sporting News and Street & Smith's both picked Northern Iowa to repeat as Gateway Conference champs when the team didn't even have a head coach.

The former Ohio State coach Earl Bruce entered the picture in July, and the Panthers' already rock-solid stock soared higher than that month's temperatures.

Bruce, Sr., was successor to coaching legend Woody Hayes at Ohio State in 1979. In nine seasons he gave the Buckeyes an 81-26-1 record before being fired Nov. 17 in what turned out to be a public relations faux pas for the school's administration.

Now he's in Cedar Falls, reaping the benefits of Coach Darrell Mudra's resignation.

"I think the experience at Ohio State will make me a better football coach, a much better football coach," Bruce said. "The young men that play the game should have a head football coach that is interested in them as a person, as a student, as an athlete. Running around and dinging all that other junk is crazy."

"It's truly a tribute to Mudra's program of the past five years that Northern Iowa is still highly-regarded after the loss of three key players.

"Gone from last year's 10-4 team, which reached the Division I-AA semifinals, is starting quarterback Mike Smith, All-American halfback Carl Boyd and center Brian Baker.

"Before Mudra resigned, though, he left a strong receiving core intact. Sherrod Howard, a senior tight end, led Northern Iowa with eight touchdowns receptions last season. Senior split end Anthony Bruce, a junior tight end and sophomore Rory Fedderer, had 22 receptions for 408 yards.

"Five quarterbacks are in contention for the starting assignment.

The 29-year-old Sheehan will become sports information director at Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y.

Players find ways to beat the heat

By David Gallanelli
Staff Writer

Heat or no heat, the Salukis' practices are right on schedule. As far as first-year coach Rick Rhoades is concerned, that is exactly where they should be.

"As far as we are concerned you can go (heat) up a few more degrees. It is a fantastic motivator. We feel if we can get through it we'll be one up on everyone."

—Brad Crouse

I don't know when this will be."

Gibson rose to the occasion last season, going from third string to starter. The Benton High School graduate holds a .237 interception percentage, good for second on the Salukis' all-time list.

"Fred is still young and has much to learn," Rhoades said. "Once he reaches his maturity he will do very well."

Gibson reflects his coach's comments. "I'm still young,"

Tompkins molds defensive unit around senior

By David Gallanelli
Staff Writer

With a handful of returning seniors and more than a dozen new starters, Saluki defensive coordinator Jim Tompkins is counting on his leaders coming through.

Either that, or the youngsters are ready to go on fast.

Defensive lineman Brad Crouse will form a foundation for Tompkins to build on.

Crouse was a first team All-Gateway Conference member last season and a United Press International honorable mention all-American.

"He is the guy who is giving the good leadership," Tompkins said. "He does well in the preseason. He can handle the pressure with no problem."

Crouse said he understands his role. "I think I've had a fairly decent football career prior to this," he said. "As a leader, I just hope I can live up to it."

"There is a lot of competition on the outside," Tompkins said. "The linemen are very young and inexperienced, but I think they're all right."

Crouse said he has seen all the seniors.

Swimmer overcomes drugs, disability to play at Seoul

By Katharine Seligman
San Francisco Examiner

K-W Wright thought his life had ended one night 12 years ago when his speeding car smashed into a tree.

The Christmas Eve accident ended with both Wright and his brother permanently confined to wheelchairs. Wright's neck was broken, leaving him unable to speak or move and his arms nearly useless.

But this fall, Wright will travel to Seoul for the Paralympics, a co­twinned hold following the Summer Games.

Qualifying for the games, the ultimate honor for any disabled athlete, was a personal triumph for Wright — proof that a wheelchair today does not preclude a life of highest achievement.

Wright, 29, is a computer programmer at Stanford, is among 82 disabled U.S. swimmers going to Seoul.

The road to Seoul has been a difficult one. The Paralympics, started in 1960, have grown increasingly competitive. The 1995 U.S. trials at taking place this year had to qualify in a series of 13 regional races.

In the last of them, he will face 3,000 of the best hand­discapped athletes from more than 60 countries.

"I've gone from being a local league swimmer, on drugs, to representing the U.S. at the Paralympics," says Wright, sitting in his office, which is filled with the plaques and ribbons he has won in recent years. "I guess that's a long way to come."

Wright's physical rehabilitation began shortly after the accident, his psychological recovery took much longer, he said.

Wright, who is separated from his wife and has a son by a previous marriage, began by taking sociology classes at the University of California—Santa Cruz. He previously worked in a Los Angeles warehouse and had taken courses at a college where he "mostly chased girls," he said. The accident changed all that.

A computer class led him to a special training program that eventually placed him in his job with Stanford's Financial Information Systems Services, where he has been for five years.

He spent his first 11 years in a wheelchair as a chair smokar and drug abuser, he said. "A friend of mine said to me, 'Whatever do you do, you did 15 percent,'" Wright said. "He said, 'You were a profoundly handicapped guy. You did that 15 percent.'"

Wright has the $1,800 he needs to go to the games but is still trying to raise funds to cover his expenses. The athletes rely on a grant from San Francisco Examiner.
Phantom aviator continues to elude French authorities

By Robin Smyth
London Observer Service

PARIS — France's fearless aviator, who the French are now calling "the Black Baron," has set off a fresh wave of speculation over the identity of the phantom flyer.

Here, villain or nuisance, depending on which Parisian you talk to, this phantom aviator, who flies around Paris by night in a small aircraft, has been disrupting the sleep of Parisians since the end of July.

He is said to have made five or six flights into the capital's airspace, flying too low for radar to distinguish him from the parapets of high buildings.

Police helicopters buzzing after him have failed to keep up with him, while some 300 police train their binoculars on the skies.

Socialist Minister of the Interior Pierre Joxe has sworn to get Le Baron Noir and fix him — or them, if there are more than one — with such a stiff court sentence that imitators before him will think twice about taking to the night sky.

If the Black Baron is the reckless, romantic adventurer most people seem to imagine him to be, he is more likely to be a brave man than dissuaded by Joxe's massive counterattack.

Doughnut maker enjoys job

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

"Time to make the doughnuts," the Dunkin' Donut-maker mumbles, waking in the wee hours of the morning.

The Dunkin' Donut maker is a student on the TV commercial; Robert Hopper is not. Hopper, from Marion, begins making doughnut batter at 4 a.m. Monday through Friday in the Student Center bakery.

After one-and-a-half years of making doughnuts, Hopper said he still enjoys his job, but, just like the Dunkin Donut maker, he could do without the early working hours.

"I have to take the good with the bad," Hopper said, looking down the front of his apron, covered with grease. "I could also do without the mess."

During the semester, Hopper makes from 3,000 to 4,000 doughnuts, most of which are sold in The Bakery in the main hall of the Student Center. The doughnut menu consists of plain doughnuts, cream-filled doughnuts, long johns, biscuits and doughnut holes. "The chocolate cakes run out first because they are a novelty," Hopper said.

Special orders also are made for Hopper. "The special orders are a hit and off campus, usually to business meetings or special functions," he said.

Very few people have complained about the quality of his doughnuts, Hopper said. "But one time, I sent out a batch which wasn't fried pleasantly in the center. That could happen to anyone, though."

It takes Hopper four hours to fry a day's worth of doughnuts. "Four hours over the 400-degree fryer that he is 150 pounds of grease," he said.

The glazing, frosting and filling of the doughnuts also is done by Hopper, who works through six months of on-the-job training with Don Sibens, The Student Center's baker.

After being unemployed for three months, Hopper heard about the doughnut job through a friend.

"It's 11:23 a.m. "Robert! someone yells from behind a row of refrigerators. "We need three dozen cookies by noon."

Afghan refugee says communist regime threatened in Kabul

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — Newly granted refugee status in America, the brother of Afghanistan's President Najibullah says the communist regime in Kabul is doomed to collapse as Soviet troops complete their withdrawal.

In a news conference at the State Department, Sediqullah Rahi, 35, said Afghan guerrillas "are taking over the main cities and provincial capitals" from Afghan troops as Soviet units return home. Moscow has removed half its 100,000-plus troops and has pledged to leave the entire force by Feb. 15.

"One can only conclude that as soon as Soviet forces are withdrawn, the regime cannot last very long," Sediqullah said. "The Afghan people will try their utmost to save the regime from total collapse."

Najibullah, 41, a medical doctor, earned a reputation as the ruthless head of KHAD before being selected by the KGB May 1979 to head the Afghan Communist Party. Appointed to the so-called "national reconciliation," Najibullah and his fellow communists "will defend their survival as much as they can with the aid of the KGB, which will use their internal and external resources."

But the Afghan communist government, which has been perceived by the Soviet occupation army since December 1979, "has lost all its legitimacy," Rahi said.

"The Soviet Union has tried to break the regime up and the people of Afghanistan by bayonets," he said.

In the end, no later than next winter, Sediqullah said, the new Taliban militia and his allies can do is "get permission from the Soviets to take asylum in the Soviet Union or other socialist countries." He said that not only are the Afghan mujahedeen (Islamic holy warriors) being gaine on the battlefield but "large fleets of armament are being shipped to Afghanistan by Pakistan".

"One can only conclude that as soon as Soviet forces are withdrawn, the regime cannot last for very long."

Afghan refugee says communist regime threatened in Kabul

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — Newly granted refugee status in America, the brother of Afghanistan's President Najibullah says the communist regime in Kabul is doomed to collapse as Soviet troops complete their withdrawal.

In a news conference at the State Department, Sediqullah Rahi, 35, said Afghan guerrillas "are taking over the main cities and provincial capitals" from Afghan troops as Soviet units return home. Moscow has removed half its 100,000-plus troops and has pledged to leave the entire force by Feb. 15.

"One can only conclude that as soon as Soviet forces are withdrawn, the regime cannot last very long," Sediqullah said. "The Afghan people will try their utmost to save the regime from total collapse."

Church OKs funeral services, burial for fetuses

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The Catholic Diocese of Raleigh has granted a request from an anti-abortion activist to conduct funeral and burial services for 167 fetuses whose activist claims were aborted at clinics in Raleigh, North Carolina last month.

Anti-abortion activist Lucy O’Keefe of Chicago wants to conduct funeral and burial services for the fetuses on the racial pride of speech as moderator to the Church of Canada, and The Catholic Diocese of Raleigh. The activist claims that the fetuses were recovered from a dumpster in Chicago last month.

The group, the Pro-Life Action Group of Chicago, requested that O’Keefe conduct a funeral and burial service for the fetuses to receive what O’Keefe said would be “appropriate recognition.”

O’Keefe, who owned the Chicago pro-life group, also said the funeral service will be held on Tuesday morning at Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Raleigh.

Father Joseph Vetter, a spokesman for the Catholic Diocese of Raleigh, said the funeral mass will be celebrated Tuesday morning at Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Raleigh, according to a group spokesperson.

O’Keefe said he would file a motion for a new trial.

Church member upset by letter from Satan

QUINCY, Fla. (UPI) — A member of a Baptist church, upset because he received a letter from the church’s new pastor that included an “inactive Christian permit” signed by Satan, says he plans to file a complaint.

Velma Allday, a member of the Santa Clara Baptist Church, says the letters and the certificates were sent to church members who had not tithed regularly.

“I don’t think I’ll go back to that church,” Allday said after she received a letter and a “certificate” from the Rev. R.P. Tomberlin.

“I couldn’t believe it when I opened the letter,” she said in an interview published in Thursday’s editions of the Gadsden County Times.

Allday said she and her husband had not attended church in more than a year and had tithed regularly.

The letter from Tomberlin — sent to 17 church members — contained two certificates.

Allday said she and her husband had been members of the church since 1957 “and I don’t think there was anything like this even happened.”

Tomberlin says the letters and the certificates were sent “tongue-in-cheek” and that he only wanted to make sure people attended church. He also said the letters were not aimed at increasing donations to his church.

Retiring church moderator opposes exclusion of gays

By John Alleman
Toronto Globe and Mail

VICTORIA — The retiring moderator of the United Church of Canada has likened the exclusion of homosexuals and other minorities from the church to the racial pride of the Nazis.

Anne Squires, in her farewell speech as moderator to the largest Protestant church’s 32nd general council, asked, “In what church that draws a circle big enough to include everyone will we begin to narrow our horizons?”

She also listed children, refugees and native Canadians as groups liable to be excluded if a conservative course were taken.

Mrs. Squires, however, held back from officially approving a controversial report supporting the ordination of homosexuals in the United Church, a subject that currently is being debated by the assembly. Still, as outgoing moderator, she left no doubt about her feeling on the subject.

For six months homosexuality has been the hottest topic in the United Church, displacing free trade, teleevangelism and uranium exports in the debates of Canada’s most worldly and argumentative church.

Couple could get new trial on charges of animal neglect

CLAYTON, Mo. (UPI) — An attorney for two people found guilty of neglecting 56 horses by leaving them stranded in flood water said he would file a motion for a new trial.

Salukis, a former owner of Creve Coeur Stable and Horse Ranch in west St. Louis County, and Venezia were the stable managers.

Prosecutors accused the two of neglecting 56 horses in dry ground during a flood in October 1984.

The horses were rescued by volunteers and representatives of local agencies.

At the trial, a 13-minute video depicted the rescue filmed by a television news cameraman who was shown to the jury.

Witnesses testified they had seen the horses standing in water, which was up to the bellies of some of the animals, for up to five days before the rescue.

Defense attorney Harvey Feldman said he would file a motion for a new trial.

Cadets need time for studies, Indiana University prof says

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — West Point cadets could spend their time more profitably in the library than in marching and close order drill, says an Indiana University history professor.

Robert Ferrell, distinguished professor emeritus on the Bloomington campus, recently returned from a year of teaching at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

"It was just painful for me to see perhaps 2,000 young men and women standing out on the parade ground for 30 to 45 minutes every Saturday morning so the citizens could watch and get a thrill," Ferrell said.

"Whenever there was a visiting dignitary, they would get the cadets out and march them around the parade grounds," he said. "They should do like the Pentagon and have a marching unit just for parades and formal occasions."

Ferrell, author of more than 20 books on American history, U.S. presidents and other historical subjects, called close order drill "an enormous anachronism" and said "it went out of style in the 19th century with Gen. Braddock's defeat."

Ferrell called his own drill experience in World War II with considerable distaste.

"The four classes of plebes (freshmen) that I taught in the first semester knew no more American history than the average student entering IU. In the second semester I taught cows and foxes -- this is what they call juniors and seniors," he said. "They were a little better, but I think our military educational system is in trouble."

Ferrell was one of 15 civilian faculty members at West Point. They expressed their concern over the educational system in a 50-page report that they gave to the superintendent of the academy.

"They asked me to read this, and I would consider the report, and called its authors "a little idealistic," Ferrell said.

The superintendent, Ferrell recalled, compared the academy's functions to a three-legged stool, with the legs representing academic studies, military studies and athletics. Each of these activities was described as being of equal importance.

Weather pattern to change; cooler temperatures ahead

Scott Howard News Service

There are hopeful signs that the summer of 1988’s broiling weather pattern is changing. There’s a good chance the East and Midwest will get several bursts of cool Canadian air during the next few weeks.

Now, that doesn’t mean the eastern half of the country’s hot, dry weather is over. It means temperatures will still be alternately warm and cool, an indication that autumn is just around the corner.

Three weather factors caused our exciting summer: an errant jet stream, a huge chunk of immobile air over the Midwest, and an invasion of hot, sticky air that normally resides over the Atlantic Ocean. Together they produced a stagnant weather pattern that remained locked in place from May through mid-August.

Hot food, dull talk failed to jazz up GOP Convention

By Lance Gay

NEW ORLEANS — Filled with fine food and medocure rhetoric after a week of courting in America’s car capital of jazz, Republicans went here this weekend to begin the job of electing George Bush — a task that looks easier before the convention than after.

This GOP convention may be remembered more for its technical glitches and flubbed performances than the smooth, orchestrated, made-for-TV affairs the Republicans traditionally stage in their quadrennial political rites.

To the delight of Republican image-makers, Bush’s week in the sun was darkened by lingering questions about the choice of his running mate: Sen. Danforth Quayle of Indiana, an obscure, unlisted strawberry bl0ld by a light legislative record who was picked for his potentially telelegenic appeal to baby-boomer voters.

As the GOP reared up for the full presidential campaign, Quayle, 41, is still being scrutinized over how he was able to enlist in the Indiana National Guard at the height of the Vietnam war. Quayle, the beer-pubishing farmer, may face some embarrassment as the wealthiest of the four millionaire candidates when he makes his finances public as he has promised.

Sen. John McCain of Arizona, who spent almost seven years in the “Hanoi Hilton” as a Vietnam prisoner-of-war, said the questions about Quayle detracted from the image the GOP sought to portray in its prime time party marking the departure of Reagan.

“It clearly has. We would be here talking about George Bush’s speech or what he was doing. It was a posting to the National Guard in 1969 that would have had only a political impact if it turns out he neglected his status as a Vietnam prisoner-of-war,” said McCain. “It was almost inevitable about any baby boomer who was alive in the Vietnam era that was not a real issue.”

“George Bush ‘will appeal to women, just like Tom Selleck,’” said McCain.

Bush outlined to the voters the successes of the last eight years under Reagan:

— Eight years ago, I stood here with Ronald Reagan and we promised to break with the past and return America to greatness. Eight years later, look at where the American people have produced — the highest level of economic growth in our entire history, and the lowest level of world tensions in more than 30 years.

The candidate also tore into the management abilities of Massachusetts Gov. Dukakis:

“This election isn’t only about competence, for competence is a narrow ideal. Competence makes the trains run on time, but it doesn’t know where they’re going. Competence is the creed of a technician who makes the gears mesh but doesn’t for a second understand the magic of the machine.”

The symbolic importance of the convention was a transfer of the party’s leadership.

“We’ve accomplished the transition from the Reagan to the Bush era,” said Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming. “Now it’s George Bush’s turn to take over. This is a man creating his own personal agenda, pursuing his own ideas as he seeks the presidency of the United States.”

Haley Barbour, a former Reagan White House aide, predicted a spirited presidential race.

“I can’t wait for the debates: There will be Dukakis and Bush eyeball to eyeball,” he said.

“You are going to see that George Bush will carry on the Reagan tradition,” said Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois.

This GOP convention may be remembered more for its technical glitches and flubbed performances than the smooth, orchestrated, made-for-TV affairs the Republicans traditionally stage in their quadrennial political rites. Texas, Bush campaign aides are sketching out major campaign battles in Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Missouri and New Jersey. Republican media consultant Peter Rennard and Bush chose Quayle “for his potential national appeal rather than for any particular Mid-west clot, although his Indiana roots help because of the region’s importance to the GOP’.”

The handsome Quayle “will appeal to women, just like Tom Selleck,” said McCain.

The convention sketched out the themes of this fall’s GOP campaign. Republicans associated Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis as a tax-and-spend liberal heir in the mold of George McGovern. Jimmy Carter, Walter Mondale and Teddy Kennedy. Bush outlined to the voters the successes of the last eight years under Reagan:

— Eight years ago, I stood here with Ronald Reagan and we promised to break with the past and return America to greatness. Eight years later, look at where the American people have produced — the highest level of economic growth in our entire history, and the lowest level of world tensions in more than 30 years.

Kingsley is brightest feature of tragedy, 'Pascali's Island'

There's always an element of beauty in tragedy, and in "Pascali's Island," Ben Kingsley does his best to find it. In probably his most pointed big-screen performance since " Gandhi" (1982), Kingsley plays Basil Pascali, a man who turned away from the island of Nisi and spies for the Turkish sultan. The year: 1908.

Pascali isn't an ordinary spy. He's a man of letters who's able to use his informative letters to his sultan. These letters are as much a plea for recognition as a report on conditions in Nisi, where the Turks seem to be whispering ancient secrets. Pascali's letters are eloquent but sad. In the 20 years that he's been writing, not a single reply has come from Constantinople. Pascali is like a man praying fervently to a snoozing D.Kingless' portrayal of Pascali rips with tension and internal divisons. Kingsley has a face that's ordinary and extraordinary at the same time. His Pascali is grim, yet he has a feverish, unrelenting quality.

Pascali fits into an island that's not far from where he's headed: Nisi still runs by the Turks, but Greek rebels are buying arms. The current order is disintegrating, but Pascali is more of an outsider than he ever was. As he has to get off guard. At first, it seems as if Pascali is going to keep the plot moving. By the end, the tables have turned and Pascali is being humiliated by events beyond his control. In trying to outsmart everyone, Pascali is instrumental in bringing about the film's tragic finale, which Dearden presents in a somewhat harry fashion.

Film Review

For one thing, Brian Wilson, the founding singer-songwriter and record producer of the 18-year-old group, spoke of his desire to make another album with the band.

With participation in Beach Boys albums and tours has been sporadic at best since the late 1960s. Under the guidance of psychologist Eugene D. Landy, Wilson appears to be steadily recovering from many years of crippling mental instability. Because the chief Beach Boy released his first solo album, on which Landy is listed as executive producer, Williams has been criticized by Beach Boys members.

``We've outlived our popularity at times and then we kept on living our popularity came back," Landy explained.

But Love was careful to emphasize the invaluable foundation laid by Wilson, the original falsetto singer of the group, who invented and nurtured its exuberant music and tenor-voice sound. He also did " Kokomo" from the film "Cocktail," "keep the group in the public eye," he said.

``He's a fantastic singer, but it's not like he's going to keep the group going," Love explained.

Love said he had to deal with about Brian's mental problems with Landy. He said Wilson is now "probably as healthy as anyone in the group, maybe healthier than most. (He's) strong, very optimistic about his future."

``Everybody has had, when it comes to Brian Wilson, a problem with Landy," Love said.

John Denver asks Soviets for launch to space station

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Singer John Denver has asked the Soviet Union to launch him to the Mir space station, a joint Russian-U.S. space project, they said would cost $30 million. The request was made in a space magazine reported Friday.

Under the headline "Ural Launch Special - Week & Space Technology magazine" (August 22-28 edition that Denver, an ardent supporter of the U.S. space program, turned to the Soviets after years of self-imposed isolation from NASA to "take off aboard a space shuttle.

"The Soviets responded with a two-sentence letter, "the station welded. "They told Denver they would charge him $10 million for the ride and that they had to get permission from the U.S. government to let him go."

"The State Department took no position on the matter."

Austin returns from Aussie

Gary F. Austin, director of SIU-C’s Rehabilitation Institute, recently returned from Sydney, Australia, where he spoke at an international conference of health care professionals.

Austin’s presentation dealt with using clinical services programs efficiently in teaching.

Sponsored by Sydney’s Cumberland College of Health Sciences, the conference was held in early July. It served as a forum for exchanging professional knowledge and experience.

More than 150 participants from Southeast Asia, the United Kingdom, Canada and the United States attended the conference. Speakers included representatives from the World Health Organization and Harvard University.

Austin said his invitation to the conference grew out of a long association with Australia.

Group says spread of AIDS is underestimated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government estimates of the AIDS epidemic may reflect only half the Americans infected with the AIDS virus and could create dangerous complacency among heterosexuals, a public policy group said Friday.

A mathematical study conducted by the Hudson Institute concluded, "A best guess at the range of total infections as of year-end 1987 was from 1.9 million to 3 million persons, with the likeliest range between 2.2 million and 2.6 million people."

That is about twice as high as the 900,000 to 1.4 million Americans that Centers for Disease Control estimates are infected with the Human Immunodeficiency Virus, which causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

CDC officials in Atlanta refused to comment on the Hudson estimates. "We don't want fear and alarm for fear and alarm's sake. But we want constructive concern," said Kevin Hopkins, director of the study and a former science consultant to the Reagan administration.

Of particular concern are calculations that show a surprising amount of HIV infection in heterosexuals who did not use intravenous drugs.

"The number of infections among non-drug-using heterosexuals is far from minor — a minimum of some 200,000 ... to as many as 500,000 or more," the report states. "A middle range guess would lie in the vicinity of 330,000."

The CDC estimates only about 60,000 to 160,000 non-drug-using heterosexuals are carrying the AIDS virus — figures the Hudson report says may underestimate the level of heterosexual infection by as much as two-thirds.

"A breakout of the disease into the non-monogamous heterosexual population is more than a theoretical possibility. It is almost unavoidable unless dramatic behavioral change or medical progress takes place soon."

American teens discuss problems of future in essays

By United Press International

In the eyes of American teens, the problems confronting the nation in the next century are many, ranging from the high cost of health care and political apathy to peace threats, homelessness, garbage disposal and AIDS.

Some 184 cream of the crop teens, all in the high school class of 1988, identified the problems in essays written for the Century III Leaders scholarship competition administered by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

Now headed for college, the high school leaders, two from each state and the District of Columbia, also proposed solutions.

In her essay titled "The Future of the United States Space Program," Lisa A. Brackenbury of Omaha, Neb., contends that "if the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) doesn't do something positive toward the improvement of its organization, the United States will forever be in the Soviet Union's shadow."

"Congress has to accept the fact that they can't have the fantasy type 'Buck Rogers' program within the near future. NASA's administration needs to be carefully reviewed and revised, selecting leaders who deal with reality and not fantasy," Brackenbury wrote.

"The commercialization of politics" worries Deena A. Bartolo of Las Vegas, Nev. She wrote:

"The television commercial has become a popular tool for the promotion of political candidates however, the cost of this technology discriminates against those candidates who cannot accumulate the large sum of money required to purchase air space."

"The result is a nation where democracy is reduced to a 30-second time slot, a nation where only the well-funded and not necessarily the well-qualified are taken seriously."

Bartolo suggests giving all candidates free, but limited, network time.

Small enough to hide from larger linemen

By Jimmy Burch, Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Arkansas linebacker Odia Lloyd is not at ease to belittle the size of his style — especially as it relates to the biggest and most powerful world of college football.

That is why the 5-foot-4 Lloyd has been scratching his new power-sharing role, and trying to look less like the fourth defensive back. Instead, he has become perhaps the smallest pass rusher in the NCAA Division football.

"I had thought," said the 198-pound Lloyd, "I thought I was a pass rusher. Going up against 340-pound tackles. I couldn't see it."

Arkansas coaches and linebears coach Regge Hinshaw said Lloyd "had a lot of reservations" at first, but he was accepted. He's always coming from the outside, and can get past the big linemen before they can get back to pick him up.

"I called the buzzing game the best game," Lloyd said.

"We think we can sneak Odia in there before those big fellows notice him," Hinshaw said. "He's small enough to hide out there."

And if he gets to the quarterback?

"Everyone will give him low five," Hinshaw said. "You can't give Odia a high five. He can't reach that high."

Lloyd has been plenty of height honor at Arkansas. He has frequently reminded linemen to keep a low center of gravity, "except Odia. You don't have to worry. Your rump's already dragging on ground.

Lloyd laughed as he told the story. Arkansas coaches have been chuckling about rival recruiters who "excuse the expression — overlooked the all-state Lloyd."

At Arkansas, Lloyd has started 16 of 17 games for teams that have g.a. 10-2, 9-3 and 9-4.

"My height has not hindered me one bit, in my opinion," Lloyd said. "I've always believed size is immaterial. The important thing is what's in it."

How much you want it in your mind. How much you want it will determine how much you succeed and how much the team succeeds."

Lloyd made 59 tackles last season, most of any returning Razorback. He is a key ingredient in a revamped defense which Arkansas coaches have "the real key to our defense.

"With the new schemes, where the (outside) linemen can rush or drop off with a variety of disguised fronts, the performances of our linebackers will be critical."

They have to make the right calls based on what they see and execute them properly.

Inside linebackers LaSalle Harper and Reggie Hall will make the calls. It is up to Lloyd and Kerry Owens to rush the quarterback or drop into pass coverage at the proper time.

"We're trying to create pressure," said Lloyd. "In this new scheme, we'll always have some one coming (on the blitz).

"Last year, we rushed three linemen and dropped four. This year, we've got four, five sometimes seven people coming. We're trying to create something where their quarterback has to think instead of just sitting back there and picking us apart."

Lloyd's job is to make quarterbacks think preferably, while getting up.

Lloyd said all-Southwest Conference tackle Wayne Martin (6-foot-4, 280 pounds) has made his new assignment easier. Lloyd lined up off Martin's shoulder and, when Martin draws the inevitable blocking assignments, "Lloyd has the chance to beat my man outside."

I can use my speed (4.8 seconds) and avoid getting tied up inside."

Hinshaw said Lloyd has made great strides as a pass rusher — something the outside tackles are the shortest on the team."

Odia has come a long way," Hinshaw said. "Good football player."

Lloyd said all-Southwest Conference tackle Wayne Martin (6-foot-4, 210 pounds) has made his new assignment easier. Lloyd lined up off Martin's shoulder and, when Martin draws the inevitable blocking assignments, "Lloyd has the chance to beat my man outside."

"Odia has come a long way," Hinshaw said. "Good football player."

"You can put a little more pressure on that A gap (outside)," Lloyd said.

"We're not going to tell him what we're thinking. Our schemes, they're the free-ticket to the league."

"I think we can use Odia more in our system this year."

Lloyd said he is more comfortable in his second year. His optimism, along with that of many other Arkansas freshmen, has brought "a lot of excitement" to spring practice.

"Next year, we've got four seniors graduating. We've got a lot of guys back."

Remember that?"

Beefer defense may lift Bills into playoffs

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — (UP) Quarterback Jim Kelly might have to live with the headlines in Buffalo this year with a top-notch Bills defense.

That is fine with Kelly, because it is the improved defense which could lift the Bills to their first winning and playoff season since 1981.

The defense — with end Bruce Smith, strong linebackers Shane Conlan and Cornelius Bennett and rookie cornerback Nate Odell — helped Buffalo make a charge for the playoffs last year. The Bills finished 9-4-1.

The major defense is under new leadership, with current Bills coach Marv Levy said. "Getting two outstanding young players like Conlan and Bennett really helped and the addition of Scott Badro from San Diego should help."

"We can use their size, strength and speed to our advantage," Kelly said.

"Their skills are going to be key."

"We've done a good job with our defense," Kelly said.

"The Bills would like to have a fleet wide receiver for Kelly to fire at, but will have to settle for Andre Reed and Tom Kolen."

"I'm mighty anxious about two exhibition games, but played down the injuries and progress last season was good."

The running game is also a concern. Veteran Rod Riddick was having an outstanding season when he suffered a broken collarbone in the eighth game of 1987, and the ground attack wilted shortly thereafter. Riddick, suspended for 36 days for drug use, will be back when the season starts again. Instead, rookie second-round draft pick Thurman Thomas will be a given a chance to contribute.

Despite the questions marks, most of those connected with the Bills — from the office to the gridiron — believe Riddick, suspended for 36 days for drug use, will be back when the season starts again. Instead, rookie second-round draft pick Thurman Thomas will be given a chance to contribute.

English tavern tradition ends

After 73 years afternoon drinking permitted in pubs

LONDON (UPI) — Now that World War I is over and the munitions industry is safe, you're at last allowed to drink in an English pub at 4 p.m. without taking arrest.

Starting Monday, the "afternoon gap," the 5-4 p.m. period when, by law, pubs in England and Wales had to close, Mondays through Saturdays between the battlefront of trench lines and the fury of locusts — is over.

Pubs open any time at 11 a.m. and 11 p.m. — it's the most dramatic change in English drinking laws since what they still call the "Great War," and it's only been 73 years going.

In 1915, Prime Minister Herbert Asquith decided the war effort was in jeopardy from munitions workers taking lunch hour in the pubs and failing to return. He decreed no drinking "afternoon gap" across Britain.

Beer was reduced in strength and increased in price. King George V himself took a pledge of total abstinence for the remainder of the war.

Once done, things are difficult to undo in Britain. Countless efforts to close the afternoon gap failed. The law in Ireland, Scotland was changed in 1976 and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher this year railroaded similar legislation through Parliament for England and Wales.

Even now, the idea of all-day drinking is not universally popular.

The Temperance Society in trade, the British Medical Association says drinking hours should be stricter, not relaxed, and even small pub owners fear the need to hire more staff because the longer hours could ruin them financially.

Ron Jones, who runs the Robin Hood and Little John public house in Hatfield Woodhouse, Yorkshire, with his wife Sheila and several part-time bar staff, says, "I shall have to take on more if I'm going to compete with other pubs in the area.

Citizens of Brazil leaving country to escape inflation, unemployment

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — Brazilians are so disillusioned with their 1,500 percent inflation, corruption and lack of job opportunities that thousands are changing their new life as illegal immigrants in the United States.

Let's start with the Immigration Service agents in Philadelphia, acting on a tip, plugged 46 Brazilians from the fields of the Oliva, an ocean freighter carrying coffee and cacao to American tables.

Nine escaped, 22 remained in custody and 15 were flown back to Brazil. It was the biggest single group of Brazilians yet - "thought trying to enter the United States. In April, 46 Brazilian "tourists" were barred at Mexico City airport with one-way, round-trip flights to United States. "If I can," said Elsa Pereira, 30, arriving at Rio de Janeiro airport from the latest group, "We did what lots of Brazilians want to do, which they don't have the courage."

Pereira worked as a domestic servant and baby sitter for around $60 a month. "I'd rather wash plates (in Brazil) than earn a decent living," she said. "In Brazil you have to be dishonest to make any money.

Another thwarted immigrant, Jose Ferreira, a 31-year-old father of two, was earning the equivalent of $100 a month as a veterinary assistant, specializing in artificial insemination. He said one year in the United States would be worth a decade of soil at home.

Ferreira, Ferreira and their companions each paid $2,000-to $2,800 to brokers for their passage.

This was apparently split with some of the Oliva's crewmen, seven of whom were detained in Philadelphia and accused of harboring the stowaways.

Reaction to snake sparks rumors of coup in Uganda

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — A deadly snake that slithered into the state-run radio studio prompted coup rumors in the jittery capital by scaring a newcomer from the air with just an exclamation of "Oh my God!"

Officials in Uganda, which has had four coups since the 1962 revolution, are aware that the rumors that the government of the East African country had been, "the basis were false — caused only by the wayward reptile.

The rumor spread rapidly through Kampala Wednesday night after a newscaster on Uganda's state-run radio exclaimed, "Oh my God!" in a trembling voice.

Officials of the broadcasting station said Friday the newscaster had noticed a deadly snake slithering toward his microphone atop hallway into the daily newscast.

NBC proposes consumer and business station

NEW YORK (UPI) — The president of Financial News Network expressed confidence Thursday that FNN can handle the competition from NBC's planned cable TV Consumer News and Business Channel.

FNN chief David L. Meister, addressing a meeting of the New York Television Academy, was asked about the challenge from CNBC, scheduled to begin early next year.

"Clearly, we are the leader," Meister said, noting that FNN reaches 30 million of the country's 45 million cable subscribers.

Recognizing that NBC was a major entity, he added that FNN had "an awfully large lead" and it was up to NBC to provide a service the cable industry really wants.

NBC's CNBC will consist of 24-hour consumer business news on weekdays and 24-hour sports on weekends. Programming details are still being worked out.

Deals already completed with cable companies give CNBC approximately 10 million subscribers. NBC hopes to begin the new channel around Feb. 1, 1989.

Car's image survives founder's death

LONDON (SHNS) — What changes will the demise of the autocratic, dictatorial, latterly semi-reclusive Enzo Ferrari bring to the car firm bearing his name? Probably very few. Fears that the magic of the cars with the famous prancing horse symbol on their hoods might now risk serious dilution of character or image are likely to be unfounded — largely because of the way in which the unerringly astute Enzo had paved the road ahead for his 31-year-old car manufacturing business.

It is, in fact, almost 20 years since Ferrari himself held the controlling interest in the company. He sold 50 percent to the giant Fiat corporation in 1969. Then a few years ago, with Fiat's consent, Ferrari further reduced his own holding by handing over a 10 percent share to the man he acknowledged as his illegitimate son, Piero.

With Enzo's death, his remaining 40 percent interest in the company can only go to Fiat under the terms of the 1969 deal.

Deals already completed with cable companies give CNBC approximately 10 million subscribers. NBC hopes to begin the new channel around Feb. 1, 1989.

The outfit that began by transmitting data in the vertical blanking interval today has a 24-hour cable television schedule that includes business programs throughout the day, a sports service called "FNN: Score" in the evening and a midnight to 6 a.m. video shopping service.
