MOULTON ADVISES GREATER SPREAD IN WAGES, PRICE
By John Rogers
A labor leader and former union organizer, John Rogers, has called for a broader and more equitable distribution of wages and prices. He argues that the current system of wage and price setting is unfair and that it leads to inequality and hardship for many workers. Rogers proposes a system of wages and prices that is based on the cost of living and the productivity of workers. This system would ensure that workers are paid fairly and that prices reflect the true value of goods and services. Rogers' proposals are designed to create a more just and equitable society, and he is calling on policymakers to consider these ideas.

Quotable Quotes

[By Associated College Press]

There's a new wave afoot, the sort that engenders a quantum increase of some kind of work, in stalemate, seemingly, and in the stillness of surrounding conditions. In his new home in a quiet town, the editor is the one whose peace-loving inclinations are under attack. The victim: the editor of the over-worked student whom the world has gotten ready to make a model student. He, like the editor of the over-worked student, finds himself a victim of his own success. For every time a student has a chance to win a prize, he points out. In the stillness of the workaday world, the victim is the editor of the over-worked student who finds himself a victim of his own success.

UNIVERSITY HIGH SCHOOL HOLDS PARTY

It was fittingly complimentary when the University High School held its Annual Choral and Drama party in the auditorium of the school on Wednesday evening. The party was well attended by both students and faculty, creating a festive atmosphere that complemented the school's cultural and artistic endeavors.

Dr. D. M. Stoddart, principal of the school, welcomed everyone to the event, acknowledging the contributions of all involved. The program featured a diverse range of performances, including choral renditions, dramatic readings, and visual art displays, all of which were excellently executed by the students.

The evening concluded with refreshments served in the school's gymnasium, providing an opportunity for attendees to socialize and discuss the evening's events. The party not only served as a celebration of the school's artistic achievements but also fostered a sense of community and pride among its members.
