Southern Foundation Develops Into Powerful Organization Of Campus Service

By Bill Hicks

The students of SIU had a dream to make the university a truly wonderful place. They wanted something more than just a place to study. It was 1949 and the Southern Foundation was born. It was a group of students who wanted to make the campus a better place to live and learn. They wanted to create a strong sense of community and to foster a spirit of cooperation and service.

The Southern Foundation was a group of students who wanted to make the campus a better place to live and learn. They wanted to create a strong sense of community and to foster a spirit of cooperation and service. They were determined to make their mark on the university and to leave a legacy that would endure for generations to come.

The Southern Foundation accomplished this through a variety of initiatives. They established a student government to represent the interests of the students and to ensure that their voices were heard in the decision-making process. They created a fund to support scholarships for students who were in need, and they established a library to provide students with access to the latest research and to encourage them to pursue their academic goals.

The Southern Foundation was a model of what a student organization should be. It was a group of students who were committed to making a difference in the world around them. They were dedicated to serving their community and to making their university a place where students could thrive.

In the end, the Southern Foundation was a true success. It demonstrated to the world what a group of dedicated students could accomplish when they work together towards a common goal. It set an example for future generations of students who were looking to make a difference in the world.

Viva Speaks At Meeting For Research

Dr. Joseph P. Vava, associate professor in SIU's School of Agriculture, plant industries division, will speak at the Agricultural Research Conference to be held in Madras, July 15-17. The conference is sponsored by the Indian National Research Foundation.

Vava, whose address is "Soil, Man, and Malaria," will give his address on the subject of "The Effect of Soil on Man." He will also discuss the influence of soil on the health of the people of India.

New Program Adopted By SIU

SIU will adopt a new training program for this fall, according to Charles Nielson, SIU director of teacher training. Due to the lack of training in modern methods—over 600 are enrolled in a fall training program—SIU will no longer offer training in these methods.

In the future, graduate teaching in the field of education will be continued at the University of Illinois. The University of Illinois plans to offer courses in agriculture, home economics, and business administration.

The new program will be offered in the University of Illinois, College of Education, and the University of Illinois, College of Business Administration.
