Pilots say no to Eastern bid

MIAMI (UPI) — In a twin setback for Eastern Airlines just two days before an expected strike, pilots rejected a company contract proposal Thursday and a judge refused to allow gunners to begin helping contractors to service grounded jets.

"You know the company's actions as a public relations gimmick, aimed at deceiving its pilots and other employees," said John J. Bavis, the chairman of the Association of Machinists. "In doing so, Eastern management is putting us closer to a catastrophic disruption of the nation's transportation system," Bavis said in a statement issued in Washington. "It appears that the IAM machinists union will have no choice but to call a strike."

In Miami, U.S. District Judge C. Clyde Atkins said he was "reluctant to disturb the status quo" at Eastern prior to the 12:01 a.m. EST Saturday strike showdowns between the company and the International Association of Machinists. The ruling does not limit Eastern's ability to subcontract work during a strike.

A walkout by machinists appeared certain Thursday, barring a last-minute contract agreement and an intervention by the White House.

Both sides held out little hope for a settlement in the 17-month-old dispute, although

Assault weapon sales rise at Benton store

"We have no further comment on the issues in this proceeding," Wallis said Thursday.

Eastern, which is looking for more than $1 million a day, opposes the delay. The airline placed full-page ads Thursday in The New York Times, The Washington Post and The Wall Street Journal urging Bush not to intervene.

President John C. Geyser gave his official seal of approval last week when he sent a letter to Sam McVay, health services director, giving him the go-ahead to set up a contract, Judy Jo Borgman, spokesperson for the health service, said.

Army specialist could have defected to East Germany

FRANKFURT, West Germany (UPI) — A 21-year-old army electronic warfare signal specialist who had access to classified documents is missing and may have defected to East Germany, a army spokesman said Thursday. The spokesman said Spec. Michael A. Peri of Laguna Niguel, Calif., has reported missing from his base in West Germany Feb. 21. Two days later his jeep was found about 1 mile from the East German border, near the town of Obsteltal.

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — President Carlos Andres Perez vowed Thursday to stay the course on peace and hospital officials confirmed the casualty toll from three days of rioting and looting far exceeded initial estimates.

Israelis shoot, kill Arab in stabbing incident

JERUSALEM (UPI) — An Israeli soldier shot and killed a Palestinian who tried to stab another soldier during a round of arrests early Thursday in a Gaza City neighborhood, the army said. In clashes elsewhere in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, Israeli troops wounded at least six Arabs, including a 50-year-old woman who lost her right eye after being hit by a rubber bullet, Palestinian sources said. The army was investigating the reports.

Senate Democrats urge rejection of Tower

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democrats, opening debate on Bob Dole's effort to run the Pentagon, urged his rejection Thursday on the grounds someone with a drinking problem does not belong in the nuclear chain of command. In a clash that held up many of the elements of a crucial, Republicans countered that the evidence against Tower is a "cobweb of fact, fiction and fantasy," from "unidentified flying witnesses."

31 illegal aliens arrested, total now 200

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Federal immigration agents arrested 31 illegal aliens at International Airport, bringing to more than 200 the number of people nabbed in a nationwide crackdown on high-altitude "people smuggling," authorities said Thursday. The mass arrest was the fourth this week.

Sec't airlift manager testifies against North

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An ex-site manager of Oliver North's secret airlift for Nicaraguan rebels testified Thursday that North reassured a jittery foreign official in 1986 that President Reagan "totally backed" the covert program. Rafael Quiñones, a veteran of the Bay of Pigs operation and until the late 1980s a CIA operative, said he was recruited for the clandestine operation with the assurance from a North associate that the operation was approved at the "highest (levels) of the White House."

Martin criticizes Simon over drug czar stand

WASHINGTON (UPD — Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., Thursday blasted Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., for criticizing President Bush's choice for drug czar — former Defense Secretary Caspar L. W. W. Bennett. Martin, who is rumored considering a challenge to Simon when he comes up for re-election in 1990, said she was "out of her head," during confirmation hearings, criticized Bennett for not hiring more minorities at the agencies he has headed.

Waste removal, alternatives topic of professor’s lecture

By Doug Toole

Our waste problems could be solved for under $1 per person, per day, G. Fred Lee, professor from the New Jersey Institute of Technology, said. Lee lectured to three dozen listeners on waste management in the Neckers Building Wednesday night as part of the American Chemical Society lecture series.

In his lecture, “Solid and Hazardous Waste Management: Problems With Current Approaches,” Lee said the future of waste management is “the largest engineering project ever undertaken,” because of the size and duration of the problem.

Lee began by defining solid waste as those wastes that cannot be discharged into the air or water. He said typically this material was hauled to the landfill where it was covered with dirt and forgotten. Now those landfills are reaching capacity. The cost of disposing of waste has risen from $16 per ton to $100 per ton.

Each person in the U.S. generates one ton of solid waste and one ton of hazardous waste per year.

In some areas because the waste must be transported to landfills where there is space.

In the past, Lee said, waste was disposed of in the least expensive way without regard for effectiveness. Landfills were cheap, so landfills were used.

Lee said each person in the United States generates one ton of solid and one ton of hazardous waste per year. At $100 per ton, each person would have to pay 60 cents to $1 a day to properly dispose of the waste.

Lee said each person in the United States generates one ton of solid and one ton of hazardous waste per year. At $100 per ton, each person would have to pay 60 cents to $1 a day to properly dispose of the waste.

Lee gave several ways to improve waste management. He said that landfills must be well to create an optimum environment for bacteria to break down degradable wastes. This also would separate hazardous wastes that would never break down naturally.

Hazardous wastes would be placed in burial pits, which would keep wastes from returning to the environment. These pits would have to be maintained until a method of identifying these materials could be discovered.

Lee said that nearly half of all wastes could be recycled if they were separated properly before pickup.

Incineration is still one of the most effective ways of disposing of wastes. When the burning is done on garbage ships in the ocean, almost all wastes are neutralized.

“We will have to burn. There is no question about it,” Lee said.

We are still trying to get by too cheaply, Lee said. More attention must be paid to these effective, long-range solutions to the waste problem.

Preliminary autopsy results indicate Kipper Smart, Physical education graduate student, died of natural causes, but further tests are being conducted, Don Ragsdale, Jackson County coroner, said.

Smart, 24, died Wednesday morning at the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale. He was brought to the hospital after passing out in the men’s locker room at the Recreation Center.

Smart had undergone two years of chemotherapy for cancer of the lymph nodes (Hodgkin’s disease). He was diagnosed as having the disease at 14. Smart had been in remission for three years.

Ragsdale said preliminary results indicate Smart died of cardio-respiratory arrest, causing insufficient blood flow to the organs of the body.

Ragsdale said toxicology tests using bodily fluids will be performed to determine if “outside influences,” such as drugs or steroids, were present.

Tests result are expected next week.

One down, one left: voters miss primary

DO YOU KNOW where your precinct's polling place is? Probably but it isn't a big deal. I suspect that only registered voters in Carbondale Township don't, or worse — don't care. This isn't a big deal because the primaries have been held and four candidates will move on to the general election while one has been eliminated. Of the more than 14,000 registered voters only 849 voted in the primary election Tuesday. The No. 1 vote getter, Clark, received 533 votes, only 3.7 percent of the registered voters.

In a community of over 26,000 with a student population of over 20,000, it is sad that only 6 percent of the registered voters took a few minutes to make a difference in their community.

PRECINCTS with heavy student populations averaged 2 percent of the total voters. Carl Flowers, a Dr. Pepper worker and incumbent Yow and Knaus supporters will run for the two council seats in the April 4 general election. The fifth candidate, Kyle Englehart, was eliminated from the race.

This area doesn't seem to much for minority and student groups who have complained about lack of representation on the court. Obviously they were not out in great numbers to help elect a minority or student member to the council.

These groups have only hurt themselves. If their candidates are not elected, their complaints will carry even less weight.

THE COST is another factor. It was estimated that each vote would have been, which is notable.

Clark Robert Harrell said the crime was not the expense but the expense of the main event, only the votes that were taken.

The bright side is that the voters will get another chance because the real election is yet to come.

Such a primary in April rolls around your precinct's polling place.

Creationist's arguments faulty, replaces science with dogma

I wish to address certain inaccuracies in a Feb. 16 review by Doug Toole. Who, by his terminology like the "Almighty" and "Unforgottably," has been mangling believing that evolution is the only scientific explanation for life on earth, revealed his personal bias.

"Unfortunately," he claims the creationists are "Somehow uncommon."

Toole stated that "Morris and Steiger's book ... scientific evidence and theory without reference to the Bible." While direct reference was made to that document, it is incorrect to claim any evidence, scientific or otherwise, was "united." Although allowed toDarwin, Dr. Morris primarily retracted to contradictions in evolution, the appeal, which under the rules of logic is not an argument. Rather than offering any new lines of reasoning, Dr. Morris would argue"on the opposition by supplying second-hand quotes from prominent sources. His continual use of the phrase "they are" keeping the theory made it quite apparent that he does not comprehend the concept of scientific investigation. Scientific is adjusting a systematic study which actively seeks new information and re-evaluation. Dogma rigidly adheres to a tenet regardless of the facts.

Dr. Frasierthelf acknowledged that the complex evolutionary theory is not fully understood nor does it define life's origins, only what life became. Dr. Morris's interpretation of the concept by suggesting that it is a contradiction in the current mainstream to form a table and could not have created man, therefore some consequences must have.

Dr. Frasierthelf documented evidence observed in the fossil record and interpretation which details mutation of forms over time. Dr. Morris professes large percentages of Americans believe in creation. This is not data, merely opinion polls. Does Morris concede the case to exist because surveys indicate people cannot correctly locate it geographically?

One asserted that evolution is a slow process of change to which the other retorted that even this has far been thus far observed. Not surprising, it requires millions of years to which operate and a few thousand.

Toole's contention that "Morris and..." because people considered the validity wrong. Predominately those accepting his proposal have already predisposed to a religious explanation. But, in all fairness, I must concede that the converse is equally true.

I must state pride in seeing the percentage of some billions old years of organic evolution. That I may have arose from "pont shuddle" is inapplicable, as the being I now am is a marvel of design and function. Those wishing to attach divine status to this free exist, I wonder if Dr. Morris, who claims to desire education, would oppose teaching evolution in our schools.

Harvard Law School has a new dean — a specialist in the "multicultural" movement, which in itself has been eliminated. But the real loser of this primary election Tuesday. The No.1 vote getter, Clark, is a leading foe of the "multicultural" movement's strident activity, which society can cherish the rule of law should properly regulate, and we are living. These are controversial, if not to say absurd, enactments of scholasticism.

One of the points made over and over has been that this is a legal debate, such as the legal principle of "CLS's antipathy toward many major legal topics including the empirical techniques of economics and statistics.

What CLS disciples want, says Clark, is "a legal theory that is lots of participation by everyone in decision making of all sorts, and in which the distinction between 'public' spheres of activity, which society can properly regulate, and 'private' aspects of people's lives is acknowledged to be meaningless." "They have even suggested a legal "creator" and janitors should periodically exchange jobs."

The "victorious" argument against Robert Berk saw many leading lights in American law and politics opposing "CLS apart from the basis of solidarity with candidates..." They even question whether there is such a thing as the merits.

It is that last view that most clearly sets CLS apart from Page 46, by E. E. Gajmans, March 28, 1973.

Out of the cellar and onto the stage

Many area bar bands seeing brighter lights, better times

By Nora Benley and Theresa Livingston

Local bar and party bands can get many listeners slamming, jamming, moving or grooving.

There’s something for almost everyone in the Carbondale music scene. Every genre — thrash, dance, blues, Top 40 — is represented by local musicians, whether they perform at a hot, crowded, 2-buck-a-cup basement party, or at one of the bars that could strike terror in the hearts of many parents.

To cost-conscious college students, music still rates as one of the best values for the entertainment dollar. For one or two bucks, students can enjoy an entire evening of live music, as opposed to shelling out about $4.50 for a movie.

Members of various Carbondale bands often play together. Eddie Chapa, Jungle Dogs' bassist, said the musical friendships have prevented intense competition between groups.

In fact, music has become such an integral part of college's social aspect that many parties feature live bands to increase the number of people who attend.

In the last year, many new bands have been formed in Carbondale. Others, like Jungle Dogs, 138 and Modern Day Saints, have been together for a number of years. Some performers are in bands for the excitement. Others for a chance at something bigger than the Carbondale music scene, but most of the performers agree that their band's original music is where success begins.

Jungle Dogs, an offshoot of Love Rhino, a popular band during the early '80s, gained a following and a reputation for being a "party band." "We pride ourselves on audience participation," Eddie Chapa, group bassist, said.

"People are there to have a good time," said Jim Skinner, the band's drummer.

Jungle Dogs mostly does cover versions of songs by Fugitive, Bob Marley and the Wailers, James Brown and English Beat, music popular with the bulk of their audiences.

The eight-piece band, complete with horn sections, can grow to just about any size, on any given night, as friends and members from other bands join in the jam sessions.

By the end of the night, almost everyone in the house inclined to showing off will have the opportunity to get on stage.

Since members of various Carbondale bands often play together, Chapa views these musical friendships as having prevented intense competition between groups.

"I think like a lot of things, it goes up and down. It's better when there are a lot of bands around. There's a strong camaraderie," Chapa said.

Another band, 138, has been a mainstay of the scene. It has been around Carbondale in one form or another for about three and a half years.

The band mainly plays basement gigs. They can draw crowds and continue to gain recognition by playing venues such as Two Hearts, Inc. and 611 Pizza.

"We haven't played out of town in a while, but we want to lay out more and we're working on a tape to send out," Scott Furtwengler, guitar player for the group, said.

"I get into a lot of different things. It's like a pop-crunch 'and,' I guess you could say," Furtwengler said, describing the distorted guitar that marks their sound.

"Our biggest competition is with ourselves," he said.

About one-third of the songs 138 plays are original, but Furtwengler said they want to start doing more.

Despite the increase in alternative bands, Furtwengler said he doesn't view the bands as competition. Instead, it serves as motivation to work harder.

Although the Modern Day Saints spend a lot of time on the road, the band has remained a major force on the Carbondale band scene for almost four years.

The Saints is a unique group, having retained all of its original members. Because of this stability, they have been able to develop their own sound, Chris Obren, drummer and background vocalist, said.

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The owner of the Old Rock Cafe was cited Thursday for three violations of city ordinances because of a performance by a rock group at his club that authorities said was not only odd, but obscene.

City Prosecutor John Carter met with Jack Konschick, owner of the cafe, because of a performance Tuesday night by G. Allin and the Toilet Rockers.

In the suit, authorities said Kevin M. Allin, 32, of Milwaukee, allegedly defecated on the stage, drew his face into the audience and had a second member urinate in a glass and drink it. Allin was charged Wednesday with misdemeanor disorderly conduct and released on $500 bail.

Konschick said he cut the act short after he saw what was happening on stage. But Carter cited him on two counts of violating a performance owner's responsibility permitting certain conduct which is prohibited and one charge of an owner's responsibility for disorders committed in a Class B establishment.

He faces civil forfeitures of $1,000 to $2,000, plus two charges and up to $200 on the third charge.

R.E.M. shows commitment to environment, plants tree

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

Michael Stipe, lead singer for R.E.M., affirmed the group's commitment to the environment by planting a white pine tree Thursday afternoon in Evergreen Park. Cans were lined bumper to bumper along the Pleasant Hill Road and a crowd of cheering fans lined the fence as Stipe and members of R.E.M. pulled up.

Stipe, in town with the group as part of their Green World Tour, arrived as scheduled at 4:30 p.m.

Some of the more die-hard fans in the crowd had been waiting several minutes to catch a glimpse of the elusive Stipe.

"We've liked them since Chronic Town (the group's critically acclaimed breakthrough recording). We even followed them to Canada on their last tour," Janet Janes, senior in clothing and textile, said.

Taking off his jacket and his hat and pushing up his sleeves, Stipe focused on reoccuring ecological problems in the broader scope.

"I guess it's a really good thing that everyone came out here," Stipe said.

"We're in the middle of Shawnee National Forest and there's lots of fighting to keep people from strip mining and we need to get something together about that.

"Stipe said he feels recently people are beginning to care more about the environment.

"I think so. I think it's increasing concern about the environment. It's starting to peak up and it's going well," he said.

Along with the spirit of the event, University student Joe Stauffer passed out copies of a petition to ban clearcutting in the Shawnee National Forest.

Clearcutting, a highly-debated and controversial issue, involves the removal of trees from large tracts of land for commercial use.

The event was part of the Carbondale Clean and Green Project, a part of the Keep America Beautiful system designed to involve residents in an effort to reduce littering and promote recycling and conservation of natural resources.

"It was a highpoint in the event," Stauffer said.

Sandy Kirby is the owner of Reruns, a new clothing store at 100 E. Jackson. The store accepts used women’s clothing in current styles in exchange for cash or other clothes.

Clothing shop buys old attire

By Marc Blumer

A new clothing store in Carbondale is adding a new twist to shopping, allowing customers to sell their old wardrobe to pay for a new one. Reruns, located at 100 E. Jackson, buys contemporary women’s clothing in current styles. The store pays 50 percent of its retail price in cash for clothing and some accessories. Customers also can receive 60 percent of retail in trade.

If customers want to trade and cannot find an item in the store they want, they can receive a trade slip that is good for one year.

Sandy Kirby, owner of the store, said that a great deal of her customers come from the University. “I find that college kids bring in clothes before a weekend sometimes, trading them for a new outfit to wear.”

The store deals with most of the name brands in women’s fashions, including Forenza, Esprit and Calvin Klein.

Kirby insists that all clothing she buys is clean and in good condition, with no stains or tears. “I have been known to turn down clothing that I really like until the customer brings it back clean,” Kirby said.

The store deals with most of the name brands in women’s fashion, including Forenza, Esprit and Calvin Klein.

“We keep our stock seasonal,” Kirby added. Kirby has seen more people bring in clothes lately. “Kids are looking for some extra cash for spring break,” Kirby said.

Reruns only deals in women’s clothing, after a trial with men’s wear was unprofitable. Kirby said she had sold both men’s and women’s garments at first, but “men tend to wear their clothes for a long time and men’s styles tend to stay in fashion much longer than women’s.”

Kirby, originally from Sparta, got the idea for Reruns from a friend in Arizona. She flew to Tucson to see how Loose Change, a store owned by her friend, worked. Kirby said that she got a feeling for the business during her stay.

recently.

When the band (Saints) first started, there were a lot of clubs around providing more opportunity. There were a lot more bands in town and places to play, Obren said.

More original bands are coming out now, with the opening of 641 Pizza, a new proving ground for young bands, he said.

"Original music is finally being accepted," Obren said. "We've got a lot of new local bands that are really interesting." Like many other rock musicians in town, Obren seems optimistic among the Carbondale bands.

"We're really becoming a good little family," he said. Recording contracts attract interest in local bands, he said.

"Any band that gets signed makes it better for everyone because it will bring attention our way," Obren said.

Since November 1987, the band Fusebox has been making the rounds at parties, and Obren said it's been getting outside exposure.

"We've been rock 'n' roll, not heavy metal and not truly punk," Riley said.

"It's really difficult to work if you're not a cover band, the gigs are few and far between," Riley said.

However, other bands make the most of the spotlight and enjoy the attention.

Riley said.

Atlantic Records has shown interest in their work, he said. The Reform has been working in the studio trying to get a tape together.

"We're almost ready to record," Riley said.

Riley noted the local music scene, and the crowds it attracts have changed somewhat since the early 80's.

The transition of people has a lot to do with it. It's not a big hip scene concerned with original music," he said.

Riley said one reason for that is because bars have a tendency to hire cover bands.

USG senator impeached for absences, two others resign

By Marc Blumen

The Undergraduate Student Government senate impeached Thompson Point senator Eric Sorenson at USG's Wednesday night meeting.

Sorenson was impeached for missing three senate meetings without a proxy. Two additional nominations, Dan Toepfer of the West Side and Terrance Link of the College of Science, were on the agenda for impeachment proceedings. However, both senators resigned before the meeting.

The senate also passed two bills in preparation for the upcoming spring elections.

After a recommendation from the Committee of Internal Affairs, the senate approved the addition of seven members to the USG Election Commission and three members to the Student Trustee Election Commission.

Another related bill that allotted $500 to the Election Commission for poll watching, and was approved.

The Finance Committee submitted a bill to computerize the USG office. The senate approved the bill, which called for $8,000 to purchase computers and work stations.

The terminals are scheduled to be installed during the remainder of spring semester, with work concluding during the summer term.

Bill Hall, USG president, addressed the senate on the proposed bill, pointing out that the majority of student governments in Illinois universities have access to computers.

Two senate vacancies were filled at the meeting. Alex Pike was approved as senator for the College of Engineering and Technology and Kimberly Wharton was seated as an East Side senator.

Two additional bills were passed that recognized the Badminton Club and the Spanish Club as registered student organizations.

A bill also was approved that allocated $1,800 to the Student Programming Council for a concert.

BELLEVILLE: (UPI) - G. Heileman Brewing Co. has been sued by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for polluting city sewage for nine years at its recently closed brewery.

"This behavior was irresponsible in the light of our belief that Heileman was aware of the problems its operations caused for the Belleville plant," said Randy Smith, vice president and general counsel for Heileman in LaCrosse, Wis., Thursday.

"Our position is that the government will not be able to prove there was prior knowledge on the part of Heileman," he said. "This company operates in an environmentally sensitive manner and recycles processed water where possible."

The company faces up to $5 million in fines if found guilty, although a spokesman for the EPA in Chicago said any eventual fine would be much less.

"In my two years here, I've never seen a fine over $2 million, and we're still working on that case," Dan O'Riordan, an EPA spokesman, said Thursday.

Heileman to meet EPA standards. Heileman would have had to repay the city's fine. Brauer said the fine could be as much as $125,000.

The 130-year-old brewery, believed to have been the last operating brewery in Illinois, was closed Sept. 1. The brewery had about 230 employees when it was closed.

Brauer said Heileman offered to build a $2.9 million treatment plant to allow Heileman to meet EPA standards. Heileman would have had to repay the city.

Brauer added. Heileman declined the offer and closed the brewery for what it said were "economic reasons."

The suit will be filed.

The suit filed Feb. 9 in federal court alleging that Heileman in LaCrosse, Wis., had violated pollution discharge limits since 1985.

Third license attempt for Chester man

By Jackie Splinter
Southwire

The Liquor Advisory Board voted 5-1 Thursday to send an complaint against the application of a Chester man for a liquor license to the Liquor Control Commission.

For the third time, James Schulte requested consideration of a Class A liquor license for Schulte Enterprises, Inc. as Jimmy Egyptian Polo Club, 315 S. Illinois Ave.

The Liquor Control Commission rejected the liquor license request Feb. 22 because of Schulte's two prior misdemeanor convictions and a report from Carbondale Police Department recommending denial of the license.

At the commission meeting, Commissioan John Milk said it would be setting a "dangerous trend" if the license was approved with a negative recommendation by the police.

The police sent no recommendation for denial or approval to the board Thursday.

Schulte said he was requesting a consideration of a license again because the police had not given a negative report for recommendation.

Board member Sue Eberhart, who cast the only vote for denial, said she still had a problem with the two misdemeanor convictions.

"Nuisance is not the same as 12," Eberhart said. "All of you are fully accountable for what you do."

She added that she did not see how Schulte's club was going to attract the business he wanted.

Schulte plans to turn the building, which housed T.J.'s Watering Hole until 1988, into a club "emphasizing the polo club and Egyptian theme."

He added that Jimmy Egyptian Polo Club would attract a crowd "way beyond the 21-year-old college student."

The club would feature a pro shop for polo players, a food service and dance club.

If Schulte's license is approved, the commission March 7, he will still be required to apply for renewal April 1.

Before the board considers renewal applications, Eberhart suggested that the board send a letter to Gaty's Bar & Billiards Parlor, 600 S. Illinois, to notify the bar of its increase in liquor violation arrests.

According to a police report, Gaty's had 10 violations in the liquor license period 1987-88 and increased to 42 during 1988-89.

The same report showed The American Tap, 518 S. Illinois, down four violations during 1986-87 with 24 liquor arrests.

Board member Jim Sniesta said Gaty's should be made aware that the board will be considering the increase in renewing its liquor license.

"We realize that what we had put together was not being received in the humorous parody that we had originally planned," Jurkowski said. "As soon as we started receiving complaints about the ad we recalled it."

Jurkowski would not disclose the amount of ad\

A CJC student who considered the ad to be in poor taste wrote a letter to the editor of the Daily Egyptian and expressed his discontent with the Miller Brewing advertisement.

"I looked at this and I thought, 'Goodness, they're going to have to lay down in Dayton, '" Johann Yasser, advertising instructor at the School of Journalism, said. "It's been blown out of proportion. (Miller) means no harm by it."

"The lesson to learn from this is the importance of the consumer. Consumers don't like it, Miller apologizes. At least they had the guts to admit it."

When a winner-the publicity (or everywhere," suburban jolted the act his homemade gastronomic history. The story could really help had no idea to speak Preacher, Swartz, - goldfish headfirst into his open mouth exactly 50 years ago he said. A Boston paper from Spring "It was a slow news period," joked Withington Jr. in a telephone interview from his home in Sanibel, Fla. "A new pope had (already) been elected and Hitler was quiet for the election." Withington swallowed the childhood creature on March 9, 1929, as part of a bet and a stunt organized by classmates to generate media publicity for his candidacy for the presidency. He lost the election, but the stunt was a slippery landside winner.

The news spread quickly and "it just became a local everywhere," said Withington, 72, a retired businessman, who lived for many years in suburban Plymouth, Mass. A Boston paper proclaimed the act the greatest feat since the whale swallowed Jonah newspaper round the world wrote about Withington, and Life Magazine even chronicled a fish story about the Ivy League student. "From them on every college threw a challenge," said Withington. "Some people crammed themselves into telephone booths. Someone chowed up a photograph record. It was a happy-go-lucky period." Withington said he developed a taste for goldfish as a way to know a nurse caring for his sister. "We were a family of nine and full of pranks," he said. "We liked to see her squirm when we brought in snakes and so forth."

As Withington tells it, one night he brought home an unannounced guest for dinner and was told the table was set for one. "That's all right," remembers Withington. "I'll have one of these," reaching into a fish bowl and downing a slimy, gilled delectable. Withington said many people who followed his collegiate act actually swallowed the fish whole. He preferred to chew them first. "I chewed them up so they wouldn't swim back. They were quite bitter tasting, really."

He said the publicity was a bit disconcerting, and to make matters worse, his father, Lothrop Withington Sr., a prominent attorney and Harvard graduate, "was not particularly impressed."

Withington, the son, did the slip-slimy stunt on television once, and "did it once in the Army for some charity, but I was not interested in getting into contests or being a freak."

So nowadays, he sticks to goldfish crackers. "We buy 'em quite often," he says.

Christians hold march in twilight

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

A coalition of seven local churches will sponsor a twilight march promoting Christian education. Rosetta O'Neal, chairperson of Concerned Christians for Unity, said.

The march, entitled "Lighting the Paths for Our Walks through Christian Education," will begin at 6:30 p.m. Saturday and will have a police escort.

"The marchers will walk with flashlights to symbolize the theme of the event. They will go from church to church, singing and picking up new participants along the way," O'Neal said.

Local ministers will lead the procession, which will begin at the Rock Hill Baptist Church, 219 E. Bronte, and continue on to the other churches in the group: Bethel AME Church, 215 E. Jackson; Hopewell Baptist Church, 402 E. Jackson; House of Prayer, 40 N. Marion; Freewill Baptist Church, adjacent to the House of Prayer; Monument of Hope Disciples Church, 215 E. Sycamore and New Zion Church, 801 N. Barnes.

The coalition began last year to break up different Christian groups, O'Neal said. "We extended an invitation to all churches. Flower churches, especially. We're trying to unify our churches to create a unity within the Christian community of Carbondale," O'Neal said.

College humorists compete for prizes

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

The Student Programming Council will award prizes to the University's best student comedians in the Second Annual U.S. College Comedy Competition at 8 p.m. Monday in the Student Center Ballrooms C and D. Admission is free.

The national competition gives students at 100 universities nationwide a chance to compete for an expense-paid trip to two New York shows, where the winner will perform at a major comedy "up.

This is the second year the University has participated in the event, Arnie Riech, SPC expressive arts chairperson, said.

Last year, 600 people attended the routines of 19 aspiring stand-up comedians. This year, nine participants have signed up so far, Riech said.

Students can sign up to compete until performances start Saturday.

Competitors' stand-up routines will be videotaped for judging by national judges, including nationally-known comedian Jerry Seinfeld.

Out of all the students who compete at the university, only four finalists will be chosen to perform in Daytona Beach, Fla., in March. Each finalist will receive an expense-paid trip to Daytona Beach, four days accommodations and a trip to Los Angeles to see the taping of Comic Relief III.

The winner of the Daytona Beach contest will be flown to New York to perform at a comedy club such as "Dangerfield's" or the "Comic Strip.

The first place prize will be announced until the week before spring break. "Last year, that was kind of a problem. The students who perform and then that was it," Riech said.

This year, SPC will offer its own Funny Dawg'Pone Award, as a reward for University comedians. SPC will judge the competitors on the basis of creativity, originality, audience response and appearance, Riech said.

"An example of appearance would be if the routine lends itself to dressing a certain way and the competitor does not," Riech said.

First place as a $50 cash prize with a plaque. Second and third place prizes will be awarded, but the prizes have not yet been determined, Riech said.

"We're going to try to limit it to 15 this year because last year it just went way too long," Riech said.

Single performers, not duos, will be allowed to perform. Each routine should last three minutes.

Certs mints and Doritos Cool Ranch Flavored tortilla chips are sponsoring the national competition.

Also, the university that collects the most Certs wrappers and Doritos bags will receive a free comedy performance by Seinfeld.
Rea plans work, new goals
Sees move to state Senate position as no major change

By Nora Bentley

Spokesman for coal

Washington, D.C. — James F. "Jim" Rea is stepping into his new job with a confidence that comes from years of political duty.

Economic improvements and tough tax increases are two issues Rea is ready to face.

Rea was appointed to replace U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard as state senator of the 15th District in Southern Illinois by Democratic Party officials.

"My family was involved in politics and I was active in school and the community. Politics was always an interest," Rea said of his beginnings in the area.

In Christopher, Rea started out as a member of the school board and city council and then became the director of Gov. Daniel Walker's office in Southern Illinois during the 1960s. In 1973, he was appointed to the Illinois General Assembly as a representative for the 11th District.

Rea attended SIU-C and earned both his bachelor's and master's degree in agricultural education and development. He also did postgraduate work in community development.

The need for development in community development may explain why his top priority for his district is economic development.

"A majority of the unemployed and unemployable in Southern Illinois is not a political issue," he said.

Rea's plan for economic development has been presented to the Illinois General Assembly and the Illinois Economic Development Administration.

"We will be working on some programs, but we need to develop what we are doing," Rea said.

Business and industrial development is a major part of Rea's plan for economic improvement.

"With economic improvements we won't be as hard hit as having a recessionary depression because I've worked with community development before," he said.

With most of his work in the last 10 years in the Illinois General Assembly, Rea has targeted four topics:

- Rea plans to continue as a spearhead on development and to create a coal desulfurization plant.
- The coal plant will create additional jobs in the area.
- Rea also plans to develop the waterfronts and provide more lodging on the waterfronts.
- Rea is working on a project he is working on in a Southern Illinois arts and crafts program.

"We need to do these things," Rea said.

"I hope we get a vote," Rea said. "I believe we have a majority of the membership present for this vote."

"I'm keeping an open mind on this," Rea said. "Veterans affairs and education also are concerns.

"I'm very supportive of elementary, secondary, and higher education. Revenues will be the biggest thing facing elementary and secondary education in the future," Rea said.

Jackson claims unbiased backing

Washington (SHNS) — Jesse Jackson said Thursday he will not back a black third-party candidate against Richard Daley, the white Democrat who is the mayor of Chicago, is based on local politics there — not race.

Jackson said his decision "has absolutely nothing" to do with the black coalition he is standing with long-time political allies against the Chicago mayor.

He did not explain, however, the specific kind of alliances and feuds divide along racial lines, both in terms of the political scene.

Jackson said Daley, son of the legendary Chicago mayor, failed to back Harold Washington a black, when Washington ran for mayor in 1982.

Jackson also backed white, third-party candidate, Thomas C. Sawyer.

Daley also opposed Jackson's two bids for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Jackson opposed the candidacy of someone who was the party's nomination in a previous election, but he is a major sin among traditional politicians and something unheard of among presidential candidates.

Jackson, who is expected to seek the Democratic presidential nomination again in 1988, who has experienced his decision might be used by his political opponents to a rationale for lining up against him during the presidential nomination.

For those who choose not to deal in truth, they will," Rea said.

But he said he doesn't expect the incident to hurt him politically in the future.

Jackson is supporting Illinois Democratic National Chairman Ron Brown, a former Jackson aide, endorsed Daley, saying, "It's not even a close call."

But Jackson said party officials should not forget the political rivalry Daley has exhibited in the past.

"Daley, a sitting Democratic official, endorsed a sitting Democratic official, endorsed a third party rather than endorse the incumbent Democratic mayor," Jackson said.

"And I endorsed him (previously for state's attorney), but he did not endorse me."

"Here's a guy who must himself bear the burden of a lack of receptivity," Jackson said. "Don't give a superficial analysis of what's happening in Chicago because it's not cut, because it's not clear-cut. The same people who are screaming 'Embrace the party, right or wrong' are the people who endorse a third party and not endorse Harold."

I have been avoiding opera because "it's stuffy," your fears will be happily negated by "The Gypsy Baron," a musical comedy in performance this weekend at McCleod Theater.

The Department of Theater, the School of Music, and the Marjorie Lawrence Opera Foundation have staged this large-scale comic operetta, composed in 1876 by Johann Strauss, the younger, and translated into English by Ruth and Thomas Martin.

That's right, no fat guys singing in Italian. And, for that matter, no prima donnas belting out 10-minute arias.

"The Gypsy Baron" offers a wealth of hitting Strauss melodies, beautifully conducted by maestro Michael Barta; three hours of unadulterated romance and slapstick, superbly enacted by cast; and an array of breathtaking sets and scenery.

SO MANY musicians, singers, stagehands, and theatrical craftsmen have hand in creating "Gypsy Baron" that there's anybody left to see it.

No less than 46 performers make up McCleod Theater. No other artists laboring behind the scenes have their type of play that can be slapped together in a month. For such a tremendous undertaking, a few flaws must be excused. But thankfully, the small joys of Richard Heist's musical and dramatic direction outweigh any of the operetta's tedious moments.

Somehow, in a loose context, I had a little trouble following the story.

For some reason, Strauss' relatively simple plot seemed thicker than it actually is.

EVEN OPERA enthusiasts may be frustrated while "trying" to follow the plot. If you're not familiar with the operetta's background, you're likely to lose interest and to feel that you're participating in an array of slapstick and scenery.

In the hands of the cast, the operetta is not "stuffy." The show's stars have made "Gypsy Baron" such an enjoyable experience that you can't help but appreciate the artistry and humor of the performers. Strauss' music is as engaging and memorable as ever, and the cast's interpretations are spot-on.

The operetta's version of "The Gypsy Baron" is a witty and entertaining production that will keep you laughing and humming along with the music. The cast's talent and energy make "The Gypsy Baron" a delightful experience that is sure to please audiences of all ages.

The art of timing and how to achieve maximum comedic effect through mugs and grannies. It's also an expert at serving up healthy portions of ham.

Stephen Young, in the title role of gypsy baron Barnabas, could take comedy lessons from his colleague and possibly learn some insights in sound projection.

In all fairness to Young, the musical lead and the beneficiary of the show's most notable scenes, this reviewer saw his performance early in the work, exactly the time when he might have been holding back, saving his voice for the long haul ahead this weekend.

It's a simple fact, David Morgan said. Being awed by the plight of the homeless isn't enough.

The Johnston City songwriter put that message to music with a song, "What Do You Call It?" for distribution at Southern Illinois radio stations. Proceeds from the $3 donation for the tape will go to local homeless agencies.

"Growing up in a fundamentalist church, I was taught that blasphemy was making fun or cursing God," Morgan explained. "It is blasphemy to turn our backs on people who are freezing to death from the cold."

In the last line of the song, Morgan asks, "What do you call it?"

Morgan said it is important for people to ask themselves what they can do to help. "If they don't know what to do, here's an opportunity to do something," he said.

The tape is available at Carbondale's Eric Jockey Records in the University Mall. "People also can request the "ado station to play the song," Morgan said.

The Williamson County special education teacher said he first became aware of the homeless situation after reading the cover story about the homeless in a Parade supplement of the Southern Illinoisan in January 1988. After reading the story Morgan said he went running and realized he could return home to escape the cold. The homeless can't escape from the cold.

Before writing the song, which was produced last month, Morgan said he thought all homeless people were "skid row bums.

Washington exploits similar to television's risque soaps

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Inquiring minds who want to know need only watch network news or read their daily newspaper. Following the long-running Capitol Hill soap opera that spotlights boozing, brawling and bribery, Life at Washington does seem to imitate the soaps that pass for popular art.

It is necessary to watch trash television or read superfluous tabloids to follow the sassy saga, which always has been fodder for the mainstream media.

Our First Amendment permits the red-herring tune to run in to the private lives of our leaders, including their sexual proclivities.

Only in America could we watch a fantasized, as Defense Secretary designate John Tower, branded a boomer and a womanizer, takes the pledge from ineffective laws.

"As far as strict laws are concerned, it wouldn't bother me in the least bit," Bozic said. "But the first law (proposes) a plea bargain away is the gun law.

Bozic said he heard of proposed legislation to make possession of an assault rifle in public punishable by five years and possession of an assault rifle in a school yard punishable by seven years.

"It's preposterous," Bozic said. "If you've got crime on your mind, a law like that is not going to bother you.

Castellano agrees with Bozic that the attention placed on assault rifles is basically a "knock-jeck reaction" to the incident in California. He cited past examples, including the assassinations of Robert Kennedy and John Lennon, in which citizens and politicians railed for gun control laws only after the incident had been.

"It's a shame, but political forces only seem to become mobilized after such incidents," Castellano said. "But that's the way the political machine works."

Washington exploits similar to television's risque soaps.

News Analysis

on national television in a last ditch effort to get the Pentagon's top.

William Bennett, a 20-year veteran of public life, publicly swears off cigarettes to nail the new drug czar post. Next thing we know, columnist Charles Krauthammer says Dr. William, you're the Secretary of Health and Human Services will be recruited to take a shot at Wall Street.

So, a faux druggie on Capitol Hill occasionally can be good for a chuckle, but more often it prompts outright outrage.

Rep. Donald Lukens, the Ohio Repubilican, was indicted last week for having an affair with a 16-year-old girl. Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., recently denied accusations he sexually abused the 16-year-old daughter of longtime family friends.

These cases have never been lodged against a member of Congress for sexual misconduct involving another adult.

After an investigation of drug trafficking and sexual favors in the House Pages, two congressmen were censured in this year's wrongdoing.

If the media doesn't know, then the heavy media coverage of the foibles of our public officials is a good thing or not. But it does demonstrate that they, like all of us, are flawed.

"Guns are inanimate objects," he said. "Until someone gets behind them, they don't do anything."

Castellano disagrees with Bozic's theory and believes the widespread prevalence of firearms is strongly associated with the high number of homicides in the U.S.

"Obviously, if you don't have any people around, there wouldn't be homicides," he said. "If you reduce access to guns, hopefully you would reduce the number of violent crimes. I mean, you're not going to rob hands with a knife."

Bozic said shortly after the incident in California, a man walked into his store to purchase a gun. As Bozic was showing the same man firearms, the man said he believed assault rifles were too dangerous and that it gave some people "the overwhelming desire to kill."

The man was holding a rifle at the time and was unaware it was an assault weapon.

Bozic took advantage of the opportunity, he asked him, "Now that you've handled it, do you have an overwhelming desire to go out and shoot someone?"

Despite some young players on her hands, softball head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said she likes her team's ability to play ball.

The first game of the season will be played at Carthage, Tenn., as the Governors of Austin Peay will host the Salukis.

Salukis expected to have considerable depth but little experience, the Salukis' pitchers as well as other teammates are getting the job done, Brechtelsbauer said.

"Any of our four pitchers can get the job done on a given day, but at least one needs to step forward in a big way if we are to contend for a conference championship," Brechtelsbauer said.

The team hasn't had much time to really get back into the feel of playing as Wednesday was the first game this season to practice outside.

"What we've learned inside the salukis face Austin Peay, Brechtelsbauer said. "We're going to see if that transfer information works outside. We really need to get back into the feel of outside conditions."

Junior Shelly Gibbs and sophomore Mary Jo Pirshach are expected to be the top defensive players when the salukis face Austin Peay.

Last season the team was 30-20 overall.

"Coming off a 30-win season with a predominantly fresh-senior class, this year's team could be ready to make a serious run for the conference championship. We provided our young players have gained the maturity to play with more consistency throughout the season," Brechtelsbauer said.

National powers, regional rivals mark baseball, softball schedules

By Troy Taylor

It won't be long before the sounds of bouncing balls will be replaced by the crack of softball and baseball bats.

The softball team opens its season Saturday against regional rival Austin Peay while the baseball team gets started March 10 against Jacksonville as part of its 11-game stay in Miami, Fla.

All games during the salukis in Miami will be at Mark Light Stadium. Twice during the spring trip they will play the Miami Hurricanes, who qualified for last year's College World Series.

The first home game of the season will be March 25 in a doubleheader against McKendree College at the Martin Field. An impressive 11-game homestand starts March 1 against Southern Illinois.

Softball

The softball team, which is coming off a record 30-win season, embarks on a spring trip of their own beginning March 12. They will have doubleheaders against Missouri and College World Series qualifier Northern Illinois in Tallahassee, Fla., before laying in the Seminole Invitational.

Redbirds hold a 29-15 series advantage, winning in the last three meetings. In their last appearance at the Arena, Redbirds won 79-69.

"We can't want to make it four in a row," said Saluki senior guard Tonda Seals, the Gateway Player of the Year.

The Salukis are coming off one of their best offensive showings of the season, beating Indiana State 73-58 at the strength of 67.7 percent shooting from the field.

A pressure guard for the emergence of the Salukis offense is the recovery of the last break into the game plan.

"We're trying to get it up and down the floor," said Fitzgerald, who is leading the team in steals is often the impetus to the transition attack.

"If it's there against Illinois State, we'll take it. But if it's not, we'll slow it down."

In the half-court game, the Salukis rely on 6'4" guard center Cathy Kwamper, who leads the team in scoring at 14.1 points per game. Adding assistance on the post is 6'2" sophomore Amy Rakers, whose 9.5 rebounds per game is high.

But Rakers suffered a slight sprain to her right ankle against Indiana State. Although Rakers is listed as a probable starter, 6'1" sophomore reserve Cyd Mitchell proved by her team-high 15 points and 7 rebounds in Wednesday's game that she could step in.

The abundance of Salukis height up the middle has disturbances concerned. "We know that Southern's concern," he said. "we played them a couple months ago. We respect that. So basically we're going to test our three post players in and out," said Hutchinson, who hopes to wear down Kwamper and Rakers with constant defensive pressure against Illinois State.

"Illinois State has at its disposal an able, athletic, front line. Expect 6'0" sophomore Cindy Kaufmann (14.4 ppg) and 6'4" junior Leslie Farrell (20.0 ppg) to start at center, with 5'9" Cher Gowan (11.0 ppg) and 5'9" LuAnn Robinson (11.4 ppg) in the forward slots for the Redbirds.

Indiana track meet will test women against NCAA times

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's track team will bring six of its best performers to Friday's Hoosier Hills Invitational in Indianapolis, Ind.

The goal for this meet is unlike the goals for other meets the Salukis have had this year, coach DeNoon said.

"The only reason we are going is to give some of our girls another chance to qualify for the NCAA indoor championships," DeNoon said.

Kathy Raske, Christissa Philippou, Danielle Sciano, Angie Nunn, Dora Kyracou, and Rianne Vincens will all make the trip to Indianapolis.

Raske is the only Saluki to have qualified thus far. She beat the NCAA 16th hurdles time of 7.90 with a 7.79 performance at last week's MVC championships.

For the other Saluki runners this is their chance to join Raske at the NCAA championships March 10 and 11 in Indianapolis.

Dora Kyracou and Angie Nunn will attempt to qualify in the 400-meter. Last week at the conference championships, Nunn and Kyracou finished first and second in the event. They will have to beat the NCAA time of 54.88 seconds.

Christiana Philippou, winner of both the long jump and the triple jump at the conference championships, will try to qualify in both events on Friday. The NCAA distances are 23-foot-3 in the long jump and 40-41/2 in the triple jump.

Philippou's NCAA marks of 6-5 and 40-11 hold, respectively.

Rianne Vincent will try to beat the NCAA 400-meter qualifying time of 2.00.38. Vincent ran the 600-meters at the conference championships winning the event.

The Saluki 4 x 400-meter team of Vincent, Nunn, Kyracou, and Danielle Sciano won the conference title last week. The time for it to be at Indianapolis is 3:43.75.

Coach DeNoon said that a late location change is a plus for the Saluki runners.

"The meet was supposed to be at Bloomington, but was changed to Indianapolis," DeNoon said. "That is great for two reasons. First the Indianapolis track is just about the best facility in the world for running and it will give the girls who qualify a chance to get used to the track that the NCAA championships will be held.

"The girls are ready to go. They know this is their last chance, they know what to do."

MVC track champs given last shot to qualify for NCAA indoor finals

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

Missouri Valley Conference champions Erick Pegues and Mike Michels, and the 4 x 800 relay team, will get one final opportunity to qualify for the NCAA Indoor Championships this weekend at the Florida Times Invitational.

Pegues, who set a new conference record for the 400-meters last weekend, will be looking to go under the NCAA qualifying standard of 47.16. His MVC record-setting time was 47.87. The Junior won his third MVC 400-meter title with the record-setting effort.

"I think it's just a matter of Pegues getting in the right race," coach Bill Corse said. "The 400 in Gainesville, Fla., could be hot. He has run under the NCAA standard before, so I think he has got a good chance."

Michels captured the pole vault title at the MVC championships with a height of 16-11. He vaulted a career high 16-6 two weeks ago. To qualify Michels will need a vault of 17-3/4 feet.

"Mike goes over 17 feet in practice so I think he deserves a shot at the NCAA," Corse said.

Cornell will also take his 4 x 400-meter relay squad of Paul Burkinshaw, Craig Steele, Paul Glennville and David Beachem as they too can qualify or at least get a shot at the school record of 3:31.87. Their best is 3:34.88.

The Florida Invitational is a non-scored meet that will serve as a tune-up for the Saluki men.

Swimmers to compete in Windy City meet

By Tricia Jording

The men's swimming team will compete at the Midwest Independent Championships in Chicago for the first time this weekend. The women's swimming team will compete at the NCAA championships in Indianapolis March 30-April 1.

Looking to qualify will be Lee Carry in the 100-meter breaststroke, Jeff Goetz and Daryl Luebner in the 50 and 100 freestyle, Tim Kelly in the 200 individual medley, and Todd Edison in the 200 freestyle.

The competition is open to anyone and awards will be given in specific categories. The public race will be at noon, followed by the licensed United States Cycling Federation race at 1 p.m.

The categories are defined by racing skill. Category 1 riders are the best riders in the nation, followed by Category 2 riders. These riders, as well as No. 1 riders, are eligible to compete in the national tournament, Rowe said. They also can qualify for the Olympic teams from this grouping.

Category 3 riders are "district level" riders. Rowe said. They can also qualify for nationals but are usually upgraded to Category 2 before the national meet.

Category 4 riders are entry-level riders.

"Riders usually stay in four for about two years," Rowe said.

All categories deal with licensed United States Cycling Federation riders. Riders that are not licensed will be broken down into their own categories.

SIU-C gives the team some partial funding and Phoenix also helps with cost.

Strawberry leaves camp after outburst

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. (UPI) — New York Mets outfielder Darryl Strawberry, angered by criticism of his contract demand, Thursday shoved teammate Keith Hernandez and later left camp.

Hernandez said Strawberry also grabbed his right cheek with his gloved hand. The team has decided on fines but Mets Manager Buck Showalter said there probably would be some. Hernandez said he and Strawberry later met in the clubhouse and shook hands.

"Everybody is straightening out now," Hernandez said. "I won't go into details. It is unfortunate ... we will be fine. I don't think he really wanted to hit me. I've had a very good relationship with Darryl over the years and I don't see why that won't continue."

The incident occurred at approximately 9:15 a.m. at the Mets training base while the club was assembling for a team picture. Strawberry approached Hernandez and a quarrel ensued.

The Phoenix Cycle-SIU bike team is sponsoring a mountain bike race at the Trail of Tears State Park Saturday.

The Trail of Tears bike race is a fund raiser for the group, which is sponsored by the University of Illinois and Phoenix Cycles.

Although the team usually races in criterium competitions, racing on city streets, the mountain bike competition arose from the sport's popularity.

"It's growing in popularity incredibly" Joe Rowe, team member and promotions director said.

Rowe said he expects cyclists from St. Louis, Kentucky and Indiana to ride in the race.

The competition is open to anyone and awards will be given in specific categories. The public race will be at noon, followed by the licensed United States Cycling Federation race at 1 p.m.

The categories are defined by racing skill. Category 1 riders are the best riders in the nation, followed by Category 2 riders. These riders, as well as No. 1 riders, are eligible to compete in the national tournament, Rowe said. They also can qualify for the Olympic teams from this grouping.

Category 3 riders are "district level" riders. Rowe said. They can also qualify for nationals but are usually upgraded to Category 2 before the national meet.

Category 4 riders are entry-level riders.

Jones finished fifth in the conference in rebounding with 8.3 per game while scoring 10.1 points. McWain posted a 16.1 point per game average, tied for first in the league with Noorlander and Coleman.

Nurnberger led the league in free throw percentage, making 110 of 122 shots for 90.1 percent.

Saluki coach Rich Herrin said the awards received by his players were well deserved.

"It is a real honor any time you receive an award," Herrin said. "Rai was on second team last season and very deserving of first team this season. He has been kind of left out of a few tournament teams especially out in Wisconsin."

"I think it shows we have a good team and gives us some recognition," Manuel said. "I did not think I would get as many mentions."

"I had a few big games early, and it just carried on." The coaches began to run stuff for me. I did not think about it (winning) until I started bringing my name up."

Manuel is the fourth straight Bradley player to receive the honor. Hersey Hawkins took the award the previous two seasons, while Jim Les won the title in 1986. Thurman dude a late scoring spurt to finish second in the league in scoring with 18.9 points per game. The transfer from Southeast Iowa pulled down 6.1 rebounds for 9.8 and shot 50 percent from the floor.

"The reason I had solid play was when the team was losing. I am not one of those guys who came back really wanted to play," Thurman said. "It was hard for me to adjust. I think it was the physical part of the game and I am not used to close scoring like we have here."

"I feel pretty honored that they looked at me," Harvey said. "At the beginning of the year, I knew they gave me the award and I wanted to receive it, but I didn't know if I was capable. Midway through the season I did not think it was in my grasp.

Harvey said he was surprised he received the award, and the distance between he and Houston.

Creighton vs. Indiana State

The rivalry has served Creighton and this season. Even though the Bluejays were picked seventh in the preseason, the outstanding play of sophomore Bob Hawthod and Chad Eigilber has given Coach Tony Harstad's team the top seed for the Tournament.

On the other hand, Indiana State is struggling to finish its season in a respectable fashion. Head coach Ron Greene, who has 328 career victories, will reach at least one of a season that has seen the Sycamores capture only a win on the season and one loss.

This season, Creighton beat Indiana State 76-69 Jan. 14 and 91-80 Feb. 18.

Bradley vs. Drake

Even without Hersey Hawkins coming the Bradley offense, the Braves are still the most explosive team in the Valley, averaging 81.5 ppg. Coach Stan Peterson has the team on the cusp of scoring 1,000 points this season. As guard Anthony Rarone's who averages 8.7 ppg-.........

On the other hand, this season Bradley defeated Drake 75-61 Feb. 11 and 76-75 Feb. 18.

Wichita State vs. Illinois State

The importance of Wichita State's home court advantage can't be over stated. The Shockers are 11-2 at home this season, in addition to leading this conference in attendance. They have averaged crowds of 10,170 at Allen Arena, which holds 10,575.

Defensive remains the domain of Illinois State coach Bob Geneved. His team gives up fewer points than anyone else, allowing opponents to 65.6 per game this season.

Women's game anticipates Gateway title clash

By Troy Taylor Staff Writer

Following an 18-point loss at Eastern Illinois two days ago, the Illinois State women's basketball team can be counted on for at least one Illinois State victory coasting to a win at the Arena for tonight's 7:35 Gateway Conference regular season finale in mid-SIUC and, "They'll be fired up," Saluki coach Richard Herrin said, "Salukis are obviously a program with a great deal of pride. They'll bounce back."

Scott and her Salukis already have a sour taste of Illinois State's pace of vengeance. Nurturing their wounds following an 81-72 defeat at Bowling Green, the Redbirds beat up SIUC-76-53 Jan. 2 in Normal and then embarked on a 16-game winning streak that lasted until the 75-67 fall to Eastern on Wednesday."

"We were very loose," said senior forward Dana Fitzpatrick, the Salukis' top defensive player. "They embarrassed us. We're looking forward to playing them twice.

Fitzpatrick's mention of "twice" is a reference to the Gateway Conference tournament, which starts Monday in a semifinal round. Regardless of tonight's outcome, Illinois State will be the No. 1 seed and SIUC the No. 2 seed, setting up a possible clash in Thursday's championship.

"The season alone will inspire Illinois State," Normal coach J.D. Hutchinson said, "We don't want to give anyone momentum to build on against this year's conference." (7-9, 14-3) has a long list of grievances against Illinois State (24-1, 16-1), starting at the fact that the Tony Harvey was named Outstanding Freshman in the Missouri Valley, and was joined by Freddie Male and Jerry Jones on the all-Conference team announced Thursday by the MVC.

Harvey won the award going away, picking up 23 votes, with Bradley's Xanthus Houston coming in second with six votes.

Overall, Bradley players stole the show. Senior Anthony Manu was named Player of the Year, while senior Jon Thomassen was named Coach of the Year honors.

The Salukis three were joined by Tulsa's Lamont Romond to round out the newcomer squad.

Saluki senior Kai Nurnberger, coach Michael Scott and media first team all-conference, Manuel Creighton's James and Bob Harald and Wichita State's Lamont Romond rounded out both group's first team. Manu was a unanimous pick by the media. Scott was unanimously an unanimous among the coaches.

Second team picks differed somewhat. The media selected R.A. Creighton's Chad Gallagher, Brakel and C.J. Harstad and Creighton Illinois State's Jarod Coehn. The coaches agreed with Randle Colonial, Gallagher, but had Wichita State's Dwight Praylow and Roark tied with Tulsa's Kenny Winters.

Tulsa's Michael Scott and the Shockers' Dwayne Praylow tied for second place in the Year honors. The pair were joined by Illinois State's Randy Blair, Harald and SIU-C's John Shrader.

Gymnastics team gets in the swing for Oklahoma

By Tricia Jording Staff Writer

Bill Meade should write a novel about the Salukis' gymnastics coach. He would have somewhere to put it.

"It's really ironic," Meade said. "That my first year here we started 0-8, ended 1-8 and in my last year we start 8-0. That's a set of workings.

"Just like all things, the difference in the skill and the talent level of zero-and-eight and one-and-eight can't be compared. This year's team is much more talented and really has the ability to improve and get better each week."

The Salukis will host Oklahoma in a meet at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the Arena.

The team has improved considerably although they are still facing a losing streak Meade said.

Last weekend, Meade said the Salukis proved to themselves and him that they are improving. Despite suffering three losses on the road to Michigan State, Kent State and Penn State, SIU-C improved a nearly every category and on nearly every routine.

SIU-C's all-rounders performed up to the customed scales as Brent Reed scored 54.40 points, Rick Strong scored 55.5 and Jones 56.10.

Erik Hanson scored a personal-best of 9.25 on the still rings, Scott Beilager scored 9.2 on the high bar, and Greg Zediers and Marcus Hubbard improved in almost every event.

"I expect us the team to be 14 after Saturday's meet," Meade said.

Although the team's record isn't the best, a tough schedule has to be taken into account Meade said.

"Our schedule is so strong that we're just challenging ourselves over right now," Meade said.

WATCH FOR OUR SPRING CATALOG
Spring in Carbondale can be uncertain, but for those looking for the latest in outerwear fashions, anything from denim to rayon is in.

Long and boisterous denim and denim jackets with colored leather strips have been popular items this year at Foxmoor in University Mall, Jane Tow, assistant manager, said.

People really start to buy during the first of February and the beginning of March, Tow said. Suede jackets in purple and black also are part of the spring shipment, she said.

Jan McGrann, area manager of Meier's, said jacket dresses and soft, rayon jackets are going to be big this year.

Windbreakers and sweatshirts have been selling well at J.C. Penney, Leslie Howe, salesperson, said. At Lane Bryant, long, lightweight and short water-repellent jackets are the main items it's received this season, according to the manager, Terry Sweet.

Jacinta McBride, assistant manager of Learners also said denim with leather patches is popular, as are rayon and linen dress jackets for the more business-oriented people.

At The Closet, Denise Shane, manager, said a short-sleeved denim jacket with bows down the back has been the best seller. "We've sold a whole shipment," she said. Long and short jackets in pastel colors also have been popular, she said.

For men, rayon jackets at His Place are what's in for spring, manager Pam Turner said. "The jackets have lots of pockets and detail," she said.
Old accessories return to spring fashion scene

Chokers, scarves, wooden jewelry back in ‘89

By Kathleen Debo

Everything old is new again — sort of. The trends in accessories this spring are colorful, high-priced and not for men and a return to choker-length necklaces reminiscent of the 1960s for women.

This spring, the fashion-conscious will also wear a lot of sunglasses, neon and wooden jewelry, paper mache earrings and snakeskin belts. The colors to look for are fuchsia, army green and brown.

Beth Clavin, manager of Hecht’s at the University Mall, said link chains and quilted handbags are also in for fashion this spring.

“Wells also be seeing some artsy-type things — water color earrings made of paper mache or laminated paper,” she said.

Nation said scarves are still popular, but they have geometric and big floral designs, not small prints.

Denise Murphy, manager of The Casuals, said scarves with bright colors and quilted handbags are popular. “They’ve trended down. There are fewer。” she said.

Anderer said snakeskin belts are in.

“Belt’s in navy and white, for the casual wear, McPhail said.

“Belt’s in color with metal tips and buckles, and the numerals are important for men this season, she said.

Anderer said said colored wood mixed with gold is a good combination for jewelry. “It’s kind of chunky and gauzy,” she said.

Denise Murphy, manager of The Casuals, said navy and white, for the casual wear, McPhail said.

“Belt’s in color with metal tips and buckles, and the numerals are important for men this season, she said.

Deborah Mack, store manager of J.C. Penny’s in Daily Egyptian, said scarves with bright colors and quilted handbags are popular. “They’ve trended down. There are fewer。” she said.

Anderer said snakeskin belts are in.

“The Casuals, said silk ties are still holding down.”

Business
Male fashions include wider ties, women select 'livelier' suits
By Joanna Bickler
Staff Writer
The news in business fashions for women is flatter shoes, and for men it's pleated pants, according to local merchants.
The biggest statement in shoes is flatter with a lower heel and a more simple design, Rita Nation, manager of Heck's in University Mall, said. Women still are working in suits, she said, but small changes are making them livelier.
Suits are worn with jackets of all lengths, from the cropped jacket to the long double-breasted, Nation said. Now we have asymmetrical lapels, sometimes with contrasting lapel colors, Nation said. The skirt this year has a right-angled cut that flares out, called a peplum.
Excessive jewelry is never appropriate in the workplace, she said. Many businesswomen are choosing Chanel's very tailored gold jewelry to accent their look this year.
Scarves allow for subtle wardrobe changes, Nation said.
Business women are opting for natural colored stockings over the bright patterned type. Off black and light gray have been very popular, she said.
Dan Hines, manager of Sohn's in University Mall, said the bulk of Sohn's sales is in the dark suits in the neutral color, but the more natural fibers are replacing the synthetic fabrics.
"This year we are seeing a move to 100 percent wool fabrics," Hines said.
Ninety to 95 percent of the suits have silk and cotton, very suitable for cold weather, Lee said.
Winter clothes are made of light fabrics, with special padding in sleeves and skirt trails that make the movement of the wearer very gentle. The curves symbolize the Korean philosophy of harmony with nature, Lee said.
He said that as in many other cultures, Korean dress specializes for certain occasions. Marriage is an especially symbolic ceremony for the Korean.
Lee said Koreans think a happy marriage can only be achieved by the harmony of man and woman, the union of the two energies represented by the couple.
"Red, a color representing positive energy, is also the color that represents the man," Lee said. "The groom wears a red dress suit to the wedding, representing the hope that the groom will pass the civil science examination to bring glory to his country and his family."
"The richly dressed bride wears blue: a color representing woman and negative energy."

Korean clothing represents country's tradition, history
By Fernando Felli-Moggi
Staff Writer
When behind every piece of clothing there's a legend, fashion becomes a symbol of culture.
Many countries that perceive fashion as a cultural tradition were represented at the University's 1989 International Festival. fashion show last month.
Of the countries that participated in the event, Korea presented a great example of cultural, traditional fashion.
According to Jae-hong Lee, a University student from Korea, Koreans have dressed alike for 5,000 years.
"For the Korean, every garment is an important symbol. Fashion is part of the tradition that leads the spirit of national unity and solidarity," Lee said.

夏季 clothes are designed in many contrasting colors and usually are handpainted with floral representations.

Women's dresses are called "chima cheogori," meaning skirt and vest, while men wear "patch cheogori," or pants and vest, Lee said. A high standard of artisanship is very marked in Korea and clothes are adapted to different climates, the typical Korean dress called "hanbok," is always chosen, loose for comfort, style and maneuverability, Lee said.
Summer clothes are made of light fibers. Silk, gauze, ramie fabric and half-cho are favorites for the warm seasons. Lee said.
He said summer clothes are designed to

CAPE TOWN (UPI) — The 1990s long-and-laud skirted suits and trousers hid legs in the Paris spring-summer high fashion collections but knee-baring styles still held their own.
Twenty-one makers of Paris custom-made haute couture, forever made by hand in this machine age, during five days of shows let women have their choice of burning lots of leg or none.
The new long look drifts back in history, but a 1960s cock tail hat over bobbed hair, Louis Feraud's floating layered skirt and long belted top, Chanel's above-ankle coots over long pleated skirts and Nina Ricci's floating back-cut skirts recalled the seaside boardwalks in Deauville a half century ago.
Christian Lacroix's woman looked like an English colonialist off to Cairo and Carthage in a chiffon midnight, loose-waisted dress or trousers. But he used even more short lengths such as his perfectly cut, simple side-fastened suit that ended above the knee. Yves Saint Laurent not only chum to his favorite knee-loving hemlines but playfully slit every skirt up the side to show every pore of the entire leg.
Trousers and jumpsuits came back in force, from Saint Laurent's soft, tucked above-ankle pants to wide pleated evening pajamas at Lacroix. Thus Paris still respects the right of liberated women to wear any hemline they choose.
Women also had a choice of shoulders, from Lacroix completely natural shoulder to Saint Laurent's and Givenchy's traditional padding.
The 1930 F. Scott Fitzgerald look in the shows staged for private clients and store buyers means piles of pleats, not only vertical but also horizontal.

If You Knew What They Felt Like, You'd Be Wearing Them Now.
Students want shoe comfort, protection

By Theresa Livingston

Carbondale, like most other midwestern college towns, is walker-oriented.

For many people here, walking is not just considered an excellent source of exercise. It’s a way of life.

Pedestrians have the right-of-way crossing the street and at any given hour of the day in all kind of weather they can be seen walking to and from class, work, shops, the laundromat, or wherever they need to go.

Since only upperclassmen are allowed porting stickers, many students find themselves relying on their feel for transportation.

Across campus, all types of pedestrians and their shoes can be seen. The type of shoe an individual wears is indicative of their personality, from high-laced leather boots to skinny stiletto fashion statements to the most faithful pair of beaten-up tennis shoes.

SINCE WALKING is such a major form of transport, what, then, do Silo students look for in their shoes?

To the most frequent response to this question was related to comfort.

“Wear tennis shoes and sometimes bowling shoes in the spring because they’re comfortable,” John Boyer, sophomore in history, said.

With the frigid temperatures and unpredictable weather that winter often brings, many opt for boots or other forms of protection from the elements.

“Dress fashion boots are big,” Susan Taylor, manager at Worths, said. “Shorts shoes are selling well, Jane Tow, assistant manager at Foxmoor, said.

“Since we’re gearing up for Easter, we’re selling a lot of pastels. Also, bright colors for pumps are very popular,” Susan Nance, manager of Payless Shoe Store, said.

Pumps and other women’s dress shoes are one type of style that is popular all year.

“Pumps are always the number one shoe here. We sell pumps with all different sizes of heels in just about every color. Strong colors are particularly popular this year,” Russell Breeding, manager of Breeding’s Shoe Store, said.

WITH THE UPCOMING warm weather, styles will change as people put their boots and gloves in the closet and reach for warmer-weather fashions.

“The spring styles are tending towards gladiator and hurache sandals, and the white slip-on kind is always popular,” Greg Hicks, manager of the Shoe Carnival, said.

“There is a definite trend towards flats with a military look, with metalloids and chains on them as well as canvas shoes and sandals with blocks of bright colors on them,” Nance said.

Since the average student walks about two miles a day, students agree that comfort and easy wear are major factors in their shoe purchases.

“THERE ARE three major factors behind shoe purchasing.

“I never wear leather shoes because I think it’s a crime to wear the skins of animals. I mainly wear comfortable shoes because I have to walk from my car and do a lot of walking around on campus,” Kelly Blume, senior in advertising, said.

TO SOME, ecological and humane concerns are the main factors behind shoe purchasing.

“Fabric will be natural-looking, even if not made entirely from natural materials. Cellulose, made from wood pulp, is processed with synthetic fibers such as rayon to form natural-looking fabrics, May-Phumlee said.

DuPont, the makers of Spandex, and DuPont, the makers of Spandex, and the use of cotton, have developed a new blend of cotton and Spandex. The blend is softer and more absorbent, May-Phumlee said.

Swimsuits sport higher waist, price

By Jackie White
The Kansas City Star

Sometimes they were chopped out in the midsection as if chewed by a giant reptile.

Multiple layers of wraps and complex straps were enough to confound a trained dresser in the dressing room. And in the splash-and-dash departments were splattering of glitter and high-tech discyling graphics.

They were the swimsuits of yesterday, but times change and the styles moving onto the stores now reflect new waves.

The entry of more designers into the mainstream has added subtle styling detailing such as shirrings and drapes. And even more noteworthy: The realization that the perfectly made suit is not necessarily a good suit.

Indeed, for most women, a skimpy piece of fabric stretched broadly across their bulges and bumps is not necessarily a good time at the beach.

As for silhouette, one-piece maillots remain far and away the bestsellers, but bikini sales are surging, Mitchell said.

Today's versions are more sophisticated, often using softening touches of draping, ruffles or shirring and less fabric than in the past. In the arrest resort season, colors tend to bright and jewel-toned, all the better to flatten pale winter skin.

As for swimwear at Sunnyside Country Club, the suits this year are more conservative than last year. The waists of the bikinis are higher and they cover the belly button.

The price of swimwear also has skyrocketed, the price has gone up approximately $15 since last year.

The price of our bikinis range from $46 to $60," Hicks said. "Our one-piece suits, which are as popular, cost $25 to $40. Swimsuits with buttons, rippers and Velcro straps also are in this season."

"Body Gloves seem to be the most popular this year," Kristi Dutton, junior assistant manager of Ups and Downs, said. "The Body Gloves are designed to fit your body because of the adjustable Velcro straps, rippers and buttons. They mainly come in neon colors— oranges, greens and pinks."

Besides the popular neon colors, shimmery colors and material are in style.

"There is definitely more shine on the suits this year," Marjorie Parsell, assistant manager of the store, said. "Sunbather, which is a glossy material, is a big seller also."

For the men, neon are in style along with baggy bottoms and shorter legs.

"Men's style haven't changed that much since last year," Sean Clark, employee of Sears, said.

Fickle fashion trends documented by science

By Richard Goldstein

But never fear, science is here to qualify and quantify this bewildering phenomenon we call fashion.

True to the scientific spirit, stalwart social scientists have constructed a graph from the data collected by analyzing 30 years worth of American and Western European paintings and fashion magazines.

The graph measures the fluctuations of average neckline, waistline and skirtlength of women's dresses.

Using this graph, my favorite biologist, Edward W. Wilson, came to the conclusion that women's fashion fluctuates over 100 year cycles. He even derived a formula that is supposed to represent the universal trends of women's fashion:

\[ P(n,t) = N \prod_{i=1}^{n-1} (1-\frac{t}{n})^{n} \]

But I notice that Wilson doesn't attempt to reckon men's fashion trends. It would seem harder to understand, though less changeable than its feminine counterpart.

After all, how do you account for those things we tie in knots around our necks? Future archaeologists, no doubt, will dig the ruins of civilization and wonder at the brutality of the torture devices we call ties.

Being healthy is important in keeping a fashion image

By Lisa Warns

You, too, can be beautiful this spring by wearing the latest styles: rosy cheeks, muscular bodies and bright, shiny eyes.

Yes, good health is in fashion. To obtain that healthy glow, exercising, eating properly and getting enough sleep are basics for this wardrobe. Accessories, such as not smoking, cutting down on alcohol and avoiding tight pants that bruise the tailbone, can add to the wonderful sight of you.

Not only will you feel better wearing this new line, you will smile more, making others happy, too.

Your pocketbook will enjoy the fashion because the cost is a bargain.

You can't find this look for sale. You must create it yourself by moving the body. It can't be obtained by lugging on the sofa and lifting, a leg.

Students learn design for average consumer

By Phyllia Coon
Features Editor

When many people think fashion, they picture the runways of Paris Milan, New York and Los Angeles. But there are models who wear the progressive styles.

But in the University's department of clothing and textiles, students learn about fashion on the concrete runways and worn by the average consumer.

Traci May-Flumee, an apparel design lecturer, said, "We are training our students to work for the mass market." May-Flumee said, 'These are the companies that produce clothing for every suit, like J.C. Penney or Macy's.

The program teaches skills that everyone in the fashion industry needs, including research and retailing, she said.

"The fashion industry works at least a year ahead," May-Flumee said, "so the students have to see what researchers have said about design and colors."

Students collect most of their research from the pages of fashion magazines, Laurie Connor, senior in fashion design, said. "The trade magazines predict colors and styles," Connor said. "The magazines are something we have to take advantage of for research because they are the eyes of the industry." The magazines also help research for retailing, Michelle Perrino, senior in fashion retail, said.

"We have to be able to plan ahead," Perrino said. "Businesses buy ahead, and they can't buy something that's already had its peak.

But even after all the research, the industry ultimately depends on the consumer, Perrino said.

"Consumers are the most important," Perrino said. "You have to have the merchandise the consumer wants. They won't wear something if they are not comfortable in, or that they don't think they look good in.

"Many people think designers are the minor force behind style, but Perrino said designers "don't dictate style, but as much as the trend setters, who predict the styles.

"Trend setters will predict if the 1960's styles are going to come back," she said.

"Many designers select what's available in fashions for a particular market, and not the saleable," Connor said.

"Designers put out a lot of wild things, and not everyone is meant to wear that garment," Connor said. "The average person isn't going to look nice in a mini skirt to fabric."

Through her research, Connor predicts a look this spring that is "unstructured, loose, soft fashions and full skirts and full pants.

Trends include bell-bottoms, cotton

Convenience and comfort are the major words in fashion trends this spring. And whether it is long or short, it has to be cool.

Gail Mieling, owner and consultant for Masterworks in Makanda, said people can expect spring trends to be less than prescribed than ever before, yet more of the same.

"I see two trends," Mieling said. "One starts in Paris and is dictated to us, and we choose it. The other is that people choose for themselves. People want to individualize."

THE MOST popular fabric among Para designers and local consultants alike is cotton. Unlike a cotton, a wash-and-wear, durable fabric. Scrutinizing trends from Paris has emerged to match the lifestyles and morals of the consumer, Mieling said.

"I think our tastes are changing," she said. "It's less formal. You see less china and silver on tables, and you see women wanting to be more feminine; it's coming from the more liberal freeing of women and social morals.

Colors tend to be toned down this spring: emerald, periwinkle, peach and true white are popular dress colors.

"As FOR men," Mieling says their fashions aren’t apt to change as fast as women’s.

"The biggest thing they've been able to do in men's fashion in the past five years is to mix textures — more of a soft look to a different texture than the past."

"Trend that has people's heads turning — one that reached its height of popularity during the '60s and '70s — is bell-bottoms."

"They're wearing them in California right now," Pam Turner, manager of His Place in Carbondale, said. "It's probably a fad, though, as acid-washed pants.

COLORS TEND to be toned down: this spring: emerald, periwinkle, peach and true white are popular dress colors. Earth tones, including peach and sand, have been slated for active wear.

Turner said neon colors — bright yellow, hot pink and teal blue — remain the most popular color choices for men. True blues and reds and plenty of reverse, or black and white combined, also score high among color choices for men.

On the other side of the spectrum, Mr. Turocy manager Joyce Hens said formal wear trends have remained consistent during the past several years. Formal wear guidelines are more stringent than casual or active wear, Hens said, leaving less room for change.

FORMAL WEAR designers for men have been able to add pleats to pants and introduce tuxedos to men.

Nedean Sparks, owner of Libra II in Carbondale, contends that the political realm may have more to do with fashion than people might think.

With the Reagan administration in the public eye for eight years, the "Nancy Reagan look" became popular among professionals. "The Barbara Bush blue," says Sparks, "It's probably a fad, through acid-washed pants.

ZWICK'S BRIDAL GOWN PRICES SLASHED!

CARBONDALE AND HERKIMER: February rates have had a drastic effect on shopping patterns creating an enormous oversupply at Zwick's Concept Two.

Maxine Zwick, owner, stated today, "We have been forced to slash prices on virtually all bridal and prom gowns! All merchandise must be sold now at steep discounting.

"The sale includes selected in stock wedding gowns valued at $500.

"At a cost of only $99.88. Gowns that value to $200 are only $199.88 to $299.84 and said Zwick.

"We have an incredible stock of over 500 gowns in select from all sizes. No one comes close to offering the selections of Zwick's Concept Two.

Zwick's rounds out their bridal and prom lines by offering tuxedo rental.

"During this sale, customers may take advantage of renting any of the best quality tuxes in Southern Illinois for the upmarket of prices of $79.99 and $49.99. Go for it now — get your choice!" says Zwick.

For additional sale lists from March 9th through the 15th only. Don't miss out on the best bridal and prom sale in Southern Illinois this year!
Many college students wake up in the morning with the dreaded question of what to wear. Casual wear and sportswear are the biggest-selling items for Ups & Downs at the mall and Ruthie's on the strip.

Lisa Loughmiller, acting manager of Ups & Downs, said their denim is still coming in, but their best selling items have been the cotton trousers.

Ruthie's popular items have been their collection of Esprit wear, the manager, Ruthie Altemose, said.

In a survey of 50 people in Schneider Hall, during the week the most popular clothing styles to wear are sporty, but comfortable, outfits.

A big fashion in the area of sweat suits are those with "SIU" and Greek letters sewn on them.

"You want to look good and still feel comfortable walking around campus," said Amy Taylor, sophomore in advertising.

A big fashion in the area of sweat suits are those with "SIU" and Greek letters sewn on patterns of plaid, stripes, paisley, bears, hearts, solids and many others.

For nighttime, sportswear is popular since most strip-goers walk to the strip and to the theaters.

"Comfort is the key to cramming, watching TV, snoozing and having fun with friends in the dorm," said Paul Parent, residence adviser of the 6th floor of Schneider Hall, said.

Los Angeles (SHNS) — The color is purple, the fit is relaxed and the look is shorts. That’s the word coming out of the Men’s Fashion Association’s spring press preview recently.

Menswear is turning up the heat. Designers are doing it with a sizzling color palette and by elevating shorts to new fashion status.

The man who wants to update his warm-weather wardrobe needs to buy three things — something in the color purple, a pair of walking shorts and a pair of Keds.

"Kids are going for Keds with shorts," says MFA fashion director Chip Tolbert. "And one of the reasons is that they look fabulous with or without socks."

Pampering is fashion’s new priority

By Jackie White
The Kansas City Star

You’re out shopping for your mother-in-law’s birthday gift and pop into a back room for a facial, say, or a shoulder massage. On a business trip, your cosmetics bag is lighter, because fewer creams perform more functions. And when you want to know what the creams actually do for you, ideally the salesclerk will know.

You wear more sunscreen and get more protection in general from the evils of the environment.

And in the really good news department, you’re overwhelmed less in the elevator by overly strong perfumes.

That’s the plan for 1989 and beyond, according to some members of the beauty industry. Pampering, protection and practical packaging are among the cosmetic industry’s priorities in the skin-care arena. A gentler approach is on the slate for fragrance as well as cosmetics.

With the age of the so-called “hope in a jar” fading away, today’s cosmetics are moving to woo a customer’s fast-moving, busy, growing older and stressed out. She is, at the same time, inquisitive and cautious about the way she spends money on beauty products.

Well-trained salespeople behind the counters will be musts for the beauty industry.

Silky, sexy and very little fabric means money in the cashbox for some area retailers of women’s sleepwear.

Lace, lace and more lace seem to be the trend in the summer months, as the temperature rises and more women get married. Lisa Knight, manager of Lerner in University Mall, said she sells a lot of lace and satin in the winter months also.

“Other than lacy negligees, we don’t sell a whole lot of sleepwear,” Knight said.

Jan McGrann, Meis area manager, said this year marks a “return to the classics” with a tailored, simple look in women’s sleepwear.

“They are back!” McGrann said.

“THE NEW marketing trend is called ‘Down the Garden Path,’” with floral patterns appearing on not only sleepwear fabrics but dresses and blouses also,” McGrann said.

This spring’s sleepwear colors will remain the traditional pinks and blues, though peach and aqua also will make an appearance toward summer, she said.

Buyers should see more 100-percent cotton and poly-satin fabrics.

On the men’s sleepwear line, it appears to be just them and the sheets.

Men's clothing reflects fashion of earlier eras

By Jackie White

Los Angeles (SHNS) - Welcome back, men, to the era of everything old is new again.

Nostalgia is a new, big wave sweeping the menswear industry, which has found something to like about the 1930s, 40s and even the tumultuous 60s.

Make way for drapey suit shoes with broad sloping shoulders and rummy trousers, a la Cary Grant and Adolphe Menjou.

Look for rock-age colors of acid green and purple as well as smiley face and peace symbol patterns reminiscent of you know what era.

Eclectic as it sounds, much was the fare at the Men's Fashion Association press preview held recently in Los Angeles.

"Never before have so many eras combined in the components of business and contemporary dress," Chip Tolbert, the association's fashion director, said. "Today's generation is reaching into their past to find their expression for a current mode of dress."

The "history repeats itself" philosophy seems to prevail because it's all new to the members of a maturing generation who are developing ideas that would have been intimidating not so long ago, industry observers report.

Furthermore, they apparently are buying clothes. Although women's clothing sales slumped significantly last year, menswear business remained relatively steady. Through November 1988, menswear business increased 3.1 percent, topping the inflation rate of 3.9 percent, according to Edward Johnson of Johnson's Redbook Service.

As women have moved into the workplace, the effect on men's fashion status has been significant. Because women have less free time, men are shopping more for themselves. And because they tend to be more judicious with money, observers agree, they tend to look for justification for spending money on new clothes.

Perhaps they are attracted to a new color, a funky art deco tie or any number of subtle details that set the clothes apart.

Make way for touches of embroidery on a woven cotton shirt, for instance, or crests, appliques and, as Bill Robinson does it, an embroidered ribbon trim on a sweater.

"Overall, it's a statement made with a samll voice. The best clothes remain uncluttered and uncontrived. Men want individuality but they don't want to look conspicuous," designer Ronaldin Shamask said. "If you look like you thought too much about yourself, then you appear alai."

"Retailers have told us: 'The more subtle the detail, the easier the sale,'" said Tom Julian, associate fashion director of the Men's Fashion Association.

Color is a major attraction. On the business scene, men should spruce up a basic wardrobe with a light-colored (khaki) suit, advised Jim Moore, senior fashion editor of Gentlemen's Quarterly. He believes the basics remain: anything other than powr gray and blue have blurdled.

The right shoes are important. "He'll get more respect if he wears dark accessories and a dark ground tie," Moore added.
