ATHLETICS WITHOUT ELIGIBILITY:

Such a radical proposal was made by Superintendent Student of the Stewards School system speaking before the recreation division at the national convention in Atlantic City, N. J., last week. Superintendent of the Stewards School is the head of the recreation division.

"I propose that we do away with eligibility rules in athletics," he said. "After all, athletics is a part of education. We don’t require a boy to run the 100 yard dash in 15 seconds before he can get into our Latin class, so why require him to pass scholastic tests to get the benefits of athletics?"

The proposal is very unusual, to say the least. It will not work unless there is a change in the aspect with which athletics are connected. The Stewards School is not connected with the public and it is the school students themselves.

The president of the Stewards School was a "coach’s friend," reported former coach who heard his speech. He made a strong point for athletic eligibility rules. Not everyone will agree with his idea of ending eligibility rules, however. It is our understanding that there are certain standards in other departments of many schools—that a student must maintain a certain grade standard in order to continue in band, speech, drama, and related contests. But Steward believes that "athletics should stand on their own educational value. Why penalize the school program when it is more important than athletics. Athletes should not be penalized any longer."

"I seem to be describing a gymnasium for a pretty boy with倒立和一个在女孩..."

"Yeh, but remember, I don’t have any sons..."

"I would like to see this man in gym who calls himself a coach..."

"Now I am smoking and covered by two children."

"Yeh, I saw this and I decided to tell you..."
