Inquest held in student pool mishap

By Vera Paktor
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

An inquest is pending the drowning incident of an SIU student in the University School swimming pool. Harry A. Flynn, Jackson County Coroner, said Tuesday.

Harry W. Harrison, 19, was found at the bottom of the swimming pool at 12:45 p.m. Monday, according to University officials.

Harrison and several other students apparently had remained at the pool after the dismissal of a swimming class. An investigation into the drowning death is being held. Flynn said, because results of the autopsy will not be available for approximately 10 days.

Circumstances surrounding the drowning have not been clarified. Official said Monday that Harrison, who was in the shallow end of the pool, was not heard calling for help.

Irvine Spagle, associate professor of Instructional Materials, was reported as being at the pool when Harrison's body was removed.

Spagle declined to comment on the incident. He said he had given a statement to SIU security police.

Harrison of Kirkwood, Mo., was a pre-dental major and lived in Allen II dormitory, University Park.

Funeral arrangements for Harrison are being made at Edgar Handel and Son Funeral Home. 800 Natural Bridge Road, St. Louis.

Class boycott set for today

The Southern Illinois Peace Committee (SIPC) and the Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) are calling for a boycott of classes Wednesday in observance of a national moratorium on business-as-usual, according to Ricky Howard, an SIPC spokesman.

The moratorium is being held to remember those killed a year ago at Kent State University and Jackson State College, as well as a call for an end to the war in Southeast Asia. Howard said.

Wednesday's activities include a rally at noon between Pulliam and Woody Halls, according to Bill Moffett of the SMC. Moffett said that rally speakers will include Jerry Schwein of the Committee of Returned Volunteers, who has traveled in North Vietnam.

Also speaking will be Mark Selden, a faculty member at Washington University. Moffett said Schwein and Selden will speak on the implications of the killings at Kent State and Jackson State after a year has passed and a summary of the anti-war movement to date, he said.

Another moratorium activity Wednesday will be a candlelight parade, to form at 8 p.m. on the former Old Main site. Moffett said. He said that the parade is to go from the assembly site to University Park, then north on Illinois Avenue to Main Street and back to the assembly site along University Avenue. After the march, there will be a brief dedication service in memory of those killed at Kent State University and Jackson State College.

The march and the rally are being sponsored by SIPC, SMC, Black Students Union, Women's Liberation and the SIU Vietnam Veterans Against the War, Moffett said.

The SIPC will continue teach-ins Wednesday as alternatives to attending class, Howard said. The teach-ins, which began Monday, are being conducted on the lawn in front of Pulliam Hall and are dealing with topics as varied as environmental problems, the grading system and the Vietnam war.

Teach-in teachers Jerry Schwein (left), Mark Selden (right) and Dirk Bennett (background) take in some sunshine and SIU students thoughts about war and peace. Police disrupt 'quiet' antiwar rally

WASHINGTON (AP) - Police broke up an antwar rally outside the Justice Department Tuesday, arresting about 100 protesters who refused to comply quickly with orders to leave.

The exact figure was not known immediately, but 90 minutes after the arrests began 15 to 20 bobbies with 40 to 60 people each had been taken to the U.S. District Court lockup. It brought the day's arrests to nearly 1,500 and sent the two-day total well past 3,000.

The demonstrators generally went without resistance, singing to guitars and flutes and holding up two fingers in the peace sign.

The rally had lasted nearly two hours when a police sound truck announced: "A police line has been established. Leave this area immediately or be subject to arrest."

Policemen closed off both ends of 16th Street between Pennsylvania and Constitution avenues so quickly that many who wanted to leave had no chance to do so.

Some of the estimated 1,000 people in the block asked to see Chief O.W. Davis about leaving and were told: "Go up to the line and the men will put you on one of these buses. That's the only way you can leave."

A black away, at 11h and Pennsylvania, some policemen drove their motorcycles into the crowd, knocking several people down. Later, at least one consisted of tear gas was fired at that location.

Police blocked off busy Pennsylvania Avenue, often called the Avenue of Presidents, from 8th to 13th street, accomplishing what mass traffic-stopping

Bulk of Master Plan approved by IBHE

CHICAGO (AP) - The Illinois Board of Higher Education adopted the bulk of its revised Master Plan Phase III for higher education at its May meeting Tuesday.

The IBHE will consider the last two of the document's eight chapters at a second session Wednesday.

Among the areas to be considered by the IBHE include a call for a clarification of the role of SIU's Vocational-Technical Institute.

The original draft of MP III urged that VT1 be turned over to John A. Logan Junior College. The recommendation brought much criticism during a hearing on MP III conducted at SIU in March.

The board made only minor changes before adopting the second draft of the controversial plan which calls for the meshing of public and private universities into a collegiate common market.

The revised plan, which was made public Tuesday, contained a number of minor alterations from the original document. The changes were made as a result of nine public hearings held throughout the state.

He told the board many persons who testified against the plan reflected a preoccupation with their own special interests and clung to unrealistic principles. He said the public should not expect a university to afford all academic experiences for quality at the undergraduate level to be dependent on the range of graduate offerings.

Richman said that the sponsors of this legislation are trying to circumvent the recent Illinois Supreme Court decision and the resolution of Congress authorizing registration of 18-year-old voters.

He charged that proponents of the legislation are using scare tactics, including using Berkeley as an example of what could happen in Illinois if students voted in their college community.

"The fact is that even in Berkeley, a coalition of blacks and students got far less than a majority of votes in the recent city elections," he said. "It was the apathy and lack of coordination in the rest of the community which permitted the so-called radicals to capture the seats on the city council."

Richman cited recent city elections in Carbondale, in which three student candidates got "only about 100 votes out of several thousand cast." He added that Carbondale may have the highest ratio of students to townpeople of any city in the country.

According to Richman, students have been permitted to register in Jackson County, but the turnout has been "disappointing".

Richman argued against the bills on several grounds. He said that out of practicality many students choose to vote in their college community. In other instances, he said, many county clerks refuse to register students at the home of their parents.

He said the bills single out students.

Bill requiring payments of interest to tenants OK'd

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) - The Illinois House Tuesday passed a bill to require landlords to pay 4 percent interest on deposits required to protect the landlord against wear and tear.

The bill passed by a 10 to 44 over opponents arguing the interest charged would be passed on to tenants in the form of higher rent.

Rep. James Carter and Robert Mann, Chicago Democrats, said landlords of large and mostly apartment buildings obtain large sums of money from such deposits and many obtain interest rates from 6 to 10 percent for their use.

The House passed to the Senate a bill to equalize young males and females before the law in their power to bring a cause of action in court, saying that either has to be at least 21.

Bombers strike infiltration routes

SAIGON (AP) - U.S. B-52 bombers struck Tuesday at North Vietnamese infiltration routes that straddle the Laos border in the northeastern region of South Vietnam.

Three waves of heavy bombers pounded jungle trails and supply points in the northwest corner of South Vietnam. Other flights of B-52s dropped explosives across the border in Laos on the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

The bombing campaign is aimed at disrupting possible attempts by the North Vietnamese to ferry supplies down the trail and into South Vietnam and Cambodia before the monsoon rains reach full force.

The storms in southern Laos are just starting and are expected to reach monsoon strength during the coming weeks. During the coming season in southern and eastern Laos, North Vietnamese efforts to move supplies is usually slowed.

As the B-52 attack on major battle action was reported over most of South Vietnam.

Communist troops mounted a few small rocket and mortar attacks against U.S. and South Vietnamese military positions. Three of the shellings struck in the northeastern part of the country.

The most ground fighting was reported by South Korean forces, comprising the second largest component of the allied side after the Americans.

Korean headquarters had South Korean troops killed 16 enemy soldiers Monday in scattered actions along a 300-mile coastal sector in the central part of the country. The Korean losses were given as one killed and five wounded.

The action was part of three large operations by the Koreans, who have thrown 20,000 men, half of their total force here, into the coastal sweeps.

Since the operations started 11 days ago, the Koreans have claimed killing 400 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese.

Housing ‘seal’ is goal of Chamber

By Pat Nilsen
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Establishing something similar to the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval for Carbondale housing is one of the eventual goals of the housing steering committee of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, according to Ray Lech, executive vice president.

The “seal” on a facility would certify that it was approved by the Chamber tenants group and the university, Lech said.

The committee was established early this year and is composed of 10 landlords, seven tenant groups and two representatives of the SIU office of off-campus housing.

Lech said the objective of the committee so far has been to draw up a model contract among the one compiled by the SIU off-campus housing office as a base. He said copies of the SIU contract have been sent to area landlords, tenant organizations and student groups for comment. These comments would then be reviewed and used to draft a document which would be acceptable to all parties.

No landlord was obligated to use the model contract, Lech said, but a proviso was new in the contract sets up a board with the power of binding arbitration. The board would be composed of two landlords, two tenants and one neutral party, possibly affiliated with the University.

Lech said he hopes the contract would be operational by fall, but he would probably set up an interim arbitration board until it is ready.

Future objectives for the committee, Lech said, include formation of a mutual code of ethics for landlords. They also hope to publish a pamphlet in which landlords subscribing to the code of ethics could be listed along with relevant data about their facilities.

Lech said he sees no severe complications arising from SIU lowering housing regulations in the fall, since most problems result from the extremes of bad landlords and bad student tenants. He said in most cases students are no problem, and some practices, such as charging deposit for security, are the result of a past bad experience.

The Chamber is sponsoring another student-oriented project—weekly sessions held on the campus at which students can air their grievances about local businesses or landlords—but the turnout has been light.

Lech said the Chamber had received an average of one written complaint per session since the program began at the beginning of March. Of them, he said, about 65 per cent have been legitimate and only two or three have not been resolved.

He said the main purpose of the sessions is to generate constructive criticism and improve consumer-business relationships. At them, Lech said, the chamber also operates more or less as a better business bureau, since it takes complaints whether or not the business is a chamber member.

Despite the poor turnout, Lech said he intends to continue the sessions in order to be accessible to students.

“Whether or not they use us is their business, but at least we’re there to solve any problems if we can,” he said.

IPIRG committee answers criticism

To the Daily Egyptian

In reply to the letter of Donald Mason and James Parsons on April 22, the Steiering Committee of Illinois Public Interest Research Group (IPIRG) -- Robert Peeve, John Peeve, Nancy Thomas, Ralph Goss, Walt Sarazanick, Linda Anderson, Bill Anderson, Grady Clark, John Peterson and Tom Prokler -- wishes to reply to the basic tenets of our organization. IPIRG is a nonprofit, nonsectarian, ethnically, racially and sexually nondiscriminatory student organization. We regret your misinterpretation of a segment of one of our advertisements, which was intended to exemplify our nondiscriminatory policy.

We request that you keep in mind the term "racially nondiscriminatory." It does not imply that we are "designed with black in mind." And it does not imply that blacks will be neglected. Our intention is to add the greatest number of students in their pursuit of justice, regardless of their "societal position." This goal will be achieved through the hiring of professional representatives (lawyers, designers, engineers, etc.) to serve the students. The refundable $1 charge is not a "membership fee." As you have stated, but rather a method of funding the proposed professional staff. Any student, whether or not he has explained his dollar, may enlist his aid and receive equal treatment.

Since we make no note of "societal distinctions" among our endorsers, we find your request (demand) to publish an "itemized roll-call" identifying and dignifying the social status of those who sign our petition to be in violation of IPIRG policy and illegal under federal law.

Thank you for your interest in IPIRG. Should you have any further questions, our office is located in the design department barracks and is open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. every school day.

Student writes reply to the 'tuition bigot'

To the Daily Egyptian

After reading your pitiful attempt at writing a letter to the editor, Mr. May, I must say I was not surprised at your bigoted thinking. The assessment of the legislative action regarding tuition increases and their effect, I must say, does not show the rationality of a thinking man. Your comments on the hippies, yuppies and "Negroids," reflects ignorance, bigotry and seething racism.

In an effort to save your soul as well as your head, I am taking the time to respond to you. In responding, I must say your attempt at "literary genius" was rather time because, judging from your letter, you don't appear to possess control of your mental faculties. I also don't think you are qualified to judge the efforts of others on an educational institution because you obviously haven't benefited from one. If education of Negroes, as you call us, will put up nasty ideas in our heads and revolution is assured, then I say you had better hope your ignorance is reflected in Springfield because people like you will be the primary target of revolutionary bullets.

In conclusion, "man's" thinking is bigoted, racist and certainly not worth my anger, or that of any black man.

Raid criticism raises questions about media

To the Daily Egyptian

Chancellor Layar's criticism of the news media and of the IBI in regard to the recent raids raise an interesting question about the nature and role of the mass media. The raids can only be posed by giving another, more common, example.

On the front page of the Southern Illinoisan of April 27, "U.S. military analysts" are cited as saying that recent NLF attacks on U.S. bases are a "cheap offensive." That is, continuing with the article, "...they take practically no casualties. They set up rockets on two bamboo sticks and light a time fuse. By the time the rockets fall, i.e., positions, the enemy has been home in bed for five hours. This same 'cheap attack' theme is repeated in the Daily Egyptian of April 22. "Is there something crazy here?" Maybe these "military analysts" mean that the attack is "cheap" in comparison with the cost of the United States in credible B-52 raids, with its 15,000 ton bombs, etc. Bamboo sticks are certainly "cheaper" than B-52's.

But clearly, the term "cheap" is meant to have a moral connotation, to imply that there is something "unfair" and "unsporing" in these attacks and that somehow the B-52's, the "interdiction raids" the aspamers, etc., are "okay because like Dylan said, 'god's on our side.'

What does this say about the role of the mass media and their responsibility to the public? We think it points to the fact that in a society where certain people and social groups have more access to the media than others, it is no longer possible to speak about "objective" reporting. The reporters who quoted the "military analysts" without commenting on the truth or falsity of their statements and the TV cameras which recorded and transmitted to the nation the births of innocent people, both human and objective and, because of this very "objectivity," they told lies to the public.

The implications of this are enormous and need to be argued at length. For if these examples are typical (and we think they are), then we have to reevaluate our notion of the "free" press and its role.

We have to question the "objectivity" in which public opinion is made. In future letters, we of the Carbon- dale chapter of the New University Conference will continue to analyze by pointing to other examples, and we will begin a discussion which will, we hope, lead to an averting of public opinion and the eventual proposal of new forms for communication.

Journalism students ask sequence be kept

To the Daily Egyptian

At the beginning of winter quarter, 1971, the School of Journalism without notice to its students discontinued the radio- television sequence.

We, as concerned students in this sequence, have been frustrated by our inability to reach our previous goals.

The radio-television sequence has been replaced by a telecommunications sequence (cable TV). What we are asking is that the School of Journalism reinstates its radio-television sequence for those who were previously in it.

It should have been phased out slowly, allowing those of us in the sequence to finish.

We ask that all concerned students in the same predicament as we are to please contact your adviser and support our reinstatement plea.

May's letter shows narrow-mindedness

To the Daily Egyptian

I would just like to say that I regret the narrow-mindedness of such people as Jim May.

While a tuition increase may be necessary, the reasons Mr. May gave are ridiculous.

I wonder whether Mr. May realizes that "these demonical demonstrators, these long haired 'hippies' and 'yuppies' are found on campuses throughout the country. The lower tuition is not the factor that causes militancy on campus. I would like to know what makes an 'honest American, Mr. May.

As far as his thoughts on foreigners, we were all your relations here in America, Mr. May?"

I don't always agree with the ways people protest, yet if we are to live in a free and open society, we (the people) must be allowed to express our opinions. Unfortunately, Mr. May will probably feel that I am part of the "riff-raff," If so, I will be honored. Maybe Mr. May should study his American history.

Viet Center continues to be target

Critics of government programs are being silenced. By Sue Rall
Daly City News Staff Writer

The dis-raised by the controversy surrounding the Vietnamese Studies Center at SIU is frequently deploring. The criticism and counter-critiques exchanged by the center's supporters and its opponents some time ago obscured the general issues which have made the center the main Midwest target for the May Day Committees. The free discussion of the Vietnam problem this week by the Southern Illinois Peace Committee and other groups.

Critics attack two areas

Criticism of the center focuses on the center's academic integrity and involvement in government programs.

Huynh Kim Khanh, assistant professor of political science at Western Ontario University, holds the view of many center opponents that the purpose for which the center was established is more important than the personalities or amount of aid funds involved.

Khanh spoke at this conference on "Scholarly Integrity and University Complexity" fall quarter at SIU in a lecture published in the December issue of the Bulletin of Concerned Asian Scholars, which was devoted entirely to the center at SIU.

The center, he said, is part of a scheme to continue the American presence in Vietnam by using the center as an instrument of American neo-colonialism in South Vietnam.

Center helps destroy culture

Khanh said the killing of the people and destruction of the countryside was one thing. "But when you decide that rather than one I see as the function of the Center for Vietnamese Studies here—when you train our young men here in the so-called American way of life, American way of thinking, and then send them back to Vietnam, this becomes a dangerous growth in our society, it destroys the Vietnamese way of life and the Vietnamese culture."

"And while you Americans can touch us in the field of technology, beyond this I don't know what you have to teach us. We have our own culture. When you decide to destroy the consciousness of a people, then you have destroyed everything."

Center's properly carved the technical assistance programs provided for in the center's present Agency for International Development (AID) grant. In these new programs, some classes have been replaced by a statement asserting that the center's programs are academic and cultural.

Center critics maintain that regardless of what the wording of the grant, the center cannot legally accept funds from the AID grant and provide services of some kind.

Reputation considered inferior

Beyond the grant, they maintain that even if the center was no longer funded through AID, the center has a reputation for academic inferiority in the area of Vietnamese studies and should be removed from SIU.

Center opponents maintain that knowledge of the language and experience with the people of Vietnam is greatly lacking among those who teach or are involved with the center.

They claim that this knowledge and experience is a prerequisite for understanding recent events in Vietnam, and that this interest in the people and culture of Vietnam should be shared with them, not toward the political interest of the U.S. government.

Regarding this issue, critics say that the academic integrity and counter-critiques surrounding the center have caused some true Vietnamese scholars to withdraw themselves from the center's activities, thereby aggravating its dwindling academic status.

Critics point to the unsuccessful attempt to recruit David G. Marr, professor of Vietnamese Studies at Cornell University, Marx rejected an invitation to join the center's Panel of External Consultants.

Critics also cite the exodus of scholars involved with the center's Southeast Asian Journal. For instance, David Swirfa, assistant professor of the University of Windsor; G. Condron, professor of Asian Studies at the University of Illinois; and Marry A. Jusan, director of Southeast Asian Programs at the University of Hull, England.

Administrators also criticized

Administrators of the center also are under fire. Critics question their competence as Vietnamese scholars and the system of complexity in suspect government programs.

J. B. Jacobini's qualifications as director of the center have been challenged. The center has concentrated on the Philippines and international law. Critics such as C. Harvey Ganong, resource professor of history, and Douglas M. Allen, philosophy director, say that it is an adequate basis for judging the competence of the director.

Wesley Pfeiff, consultant to the center and present editor of the center's anti-communist newsletter as of the Vietnamese Studies Center, has been critical of the center's involvement in government programs and the pacification effort in Vietnam.

Pfeiff was in the center to ensure that the Vietnamese people.

There is a scarcity of persons with this experience outside of the government and on through government auspices of some sort.

Staff contains 'taken critics'

On the question of academic integrity, Nina Adams, a staff member of the center history at Yale, said in a speech published in the CCAS bulletin that one of the center's two opponents of U.S. policy directed the center's efforts toward a one-sided staff.

"If certain basic assumptions are accepted—that it is in the American national interest to stay in Asia, to wage, and win a war in Vietnam, and to direct the life of the Vietnamese, Indonesian, Thai and other peoples, then the Center for Vietnamese Studies can also afford one or two dissenters.

"This is not academic freedom: there has been no question of, or would be censored by, the center's freedom of speech or of the press."

The type of Vietnamese student attracted to the center and the nature of the education he receives are other objectives raised.

In a letter to the Chairperson of the Center for Vietnamese Studies, a student of Vietnamese studies was incriminated in the center's internal activities, and said that most Vietnamese students at the center have been in the Vietnamese army and are spit by the South Vietnamese government.

They have no academic freedom here whatever and they don't have anything to offer you because they can't speak up.

"Whereas Vietnamese students in the United States are relatively quiet, creative talents in Vietnam are being imprisoned and tortured because of their anti-colonial activities."

On the issue of the relationship between the With the university and society, David Marr said at the fall conference at SIU that the training program in America is succeeding in using us more than we are using them, that America is trying to make its products more valuable strategies fast or else leave the university.

Marr said only if the university community succeeds in this it can participate in forcing change in the university, nation and the world. "Only then can we be considered something more than a part of the problem," he said.

Another side of the academic integrity question is the view advanced by center critics of the pro-government orientation of the center and its staff. The case of Cindy Frederick is a center as an example of center criticism.

According to a letter printed in the CCAS bulletin, Miss Frederick was asked to consider working as a researcher-instructor at the center. She said when she told I. Milton Sacks, visiting professor of history who teaches at the center, that she would like to research a project on the battle of the NLF won in 1966. Sacks told her such a project would never be approved by the board.

Foreign control is the issue

Center critics stress that although certain members of the center's leadership support tactics used in the war, they are not opposed to foreign control of the Vietnamese and other Southeast Asian peoples and freedom from their critics.

Center critics are symptomatic of an over-all dissatisfaction with U.S. government programs and foreign intervention.

A few years ago aid to underdeveloped countries was in keeping with the big brother policy of the United States, and they were called big. Now, in Asia, too often big brother turned out to be Big Brother. Thus, if foreign aid is "academic or otherwise," it totally unacceptable.

Support of Alternative '71 urged by Keene and Layer

By Cally Speck
Daily Egyptian, Champaign, Ill.

Letters supporting and urging participation in Alternative '71 have been written by Chancellor Robert G. Layen and David Keene, former mayor of Carbondale, whose term in office expired May 1.

Alternative '71 is headed by its steering committee as a celebration and exploration of the potentialities of the University and community. The series of cultural, social, and academic events will be held May 13-19 and will include seminars, workshops, concerts, art shows and lectures.

Layer said in his letter to SIU faculty that: "Alternative '71 will serve as a framework for activities previously scheduled and others specifically developed by departments and groups for this occasion.

Layer encouraged University participation, saying that the spirit of the program is to join people from the community to emphasize the University and the community as a cultural entity.

"I strongly urge the faculty to study the program carefully and make the participation of their classes. The seminars, speeches, exhibits, discussions and other special events not only deserve support but are rich resources and should be beneficial to all who can participate," Layer said.

Keene said in his letter to Carbondale citizens that: "Alternative '71 will celebrate the resources and alternative future of Southern Illinois and the University community.

The program will explore alteratives in communication, religion, politics, education and all parts of our contemporary living. Keene said, "In other words, the festival will present the alternatives available for all parts of our present style of living."

Keene encouraged Carbondale organizations to participate in the event, "to contribute whatever skills and ideas that you might have that would help insure the success of Alternative '71."

Cadet's essay urges more effective UN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) - A West Point cadet won honorable mention in an essay contest Tuesday for his entry urging immediate steps to end world discrimination and promote security of Communist China in the United Nations.

Philip R. Lindquist, 30, Dallas, Tex., a second-year man at the U.S. Military Academy, entered the contest sponsored by the United Nations Association of New York City.

He told newsmen that entering was his own idea and that he received quick permission and encouragement to do so from academy officials.

The title of his 500-word essay is "Towards A More Effective United Nations: Immediate steps must be taken to secure a complete and enforced disarmament of all nations." Lindquist wrote: "A strengthened United Nations should provide international security with each nation retaining a limited force for internal security."

To strengthen the United Nations, a peacekeeper, a permanent international peace force and peacekeeping force should be established."

In reference to the situation in Communist China, he wrote: "The united Nations was founded upon the concept of universality. In keeping with this fundamental concept, the United Nations should strive to attain universal membership. The People's Republic of China should be seated promptly and the divided states of the world should each be entitled to maintain observers.

Musical recital

set for Monday

By University News Service

The first annual mixed instrument recital for talented area high school students will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the McFarland Baptist Foundation Chapel, the School of Music announced.

Designed to permit concertizing rather than everyday performance, the recital will include Tim Akin, marimba and Robert Brown, French horn, of Murfreesboro; Township High School; Gretchen Hendersman, flute; Anna Tubi, bassoon and Susan Shaglett, piano, of Carlisle Community High School; John Lemm, oboe, of Herrin High School, Kristie Martini, clarinet, of Mount Vernon Township High School, and Ruth Ann Wing, French horn, of Carthage Community High School.

The recital is open to the public without charge.

Local Sierra chapter to form this weekend

A local chapter of the Sierra Club in Southern Illinois is feasible, according to Warren Dewall, conservation chairman of the Great Lakes chapter.

In a newsletter to the Great Lakes Chapter Dewall said, "membership now is large enough in Southern Illinois to justify a Southern Illinois Group of the Sierra Club.

The letter also mentioned that an organization session for Southern Illinois members will be held May 8-9, during the Great Lakes Chapter's annual meeting at East Bay Camp, Lake Bloomington, near Madison.

According to the letter, there are 44 members in Southern Illinois, of which 27 are from Carbondale.

John M. H. Olmsted, dean of SU's graduate studies and research and a member of the club, said the proposal was an "excellent idea," but he said he had not heard of it from the club.

Dr. F. W. Gardner, professor in religious studies and a member of the club, expressed a similar feeling.

The letter urged all Southern Illinois members to attend the meeting, or even if they had not registered before the April 20 deadline.

Members are asked to contact Richard Womack, Marion Archivist in Lisle, III. 312-996-4805, if they plan on attending the meeting at the last minute.

The Sierra Club is a group that promotes wildlife and natural resources conservation.

Psychiatrist claims wealthy hard to treat

WASHINGTON (AP) - Psychiatrists have special problems in treating the rich, the famous and the influential, a psychiatrist re- ported Tuesday. Sometimes, he said, the problems include name-dropping.

As a result of these problems, the psychiatrist said, "All sorts of people in those three categories may have "incomplete, ineffective or unsatisfactory analytic experiences" than any other group of patients.

In a report to the American Psychiatric Association, Dr. Charles W. Mayo, chief of the Psychiatric Medicine Division at the University of California at Los Angeles, said the solitary nature of the analyst's work often results in no works without recognition or praise.

"It is thus perhaps understandable that a doctor's income may be lower than his or her income in a career with similar educational attainment," Mayo said.

"But an occupational departure from the analyst's work is often the result of name-dropping, which is perhaps a subtle indication of the analyst's part in that he is praised and valued by the general public. It is possible that the patient mentioned has a major or reputation that makes him a nationally-known figure."

"If only the patient itself is more important, the California psychiatrist said.

"If only the patient itself is more important, the California psychiatrist said, "the patient's name is familiar to well-remembered,

He said, "the reputation of the majority of the patients come from middle-class origins, and as such we have not been exposed to the cultural in fluences and biases that tend to be a barrier to the treatment of the rich."

"The reverse barrier to effective treatment of the rich, he said, however, is the habit "the rich may have of regarding all professionals as a kind of servant status."

"The Rich and the Famous, which will be presented in a series of lectures, is a project of the American Psychiatric Association.

MOBILE HOME to return May 27

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be in Carbondale Thursday, May 27, at the First United Methodist Church between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m.

According to Moorehead, the Bloodmobile will not operate in campus this spring, therefore all those on campus should consider donating their blood and be invited to donate the next.

Dr. T. J. Moorehead indicated that the response of students to the Bloodmobile has been outstanding.

The Bloodmobile is scheduled to be on campus next December 1, 2, 3, 4, and 7. Moorehead said.

Every individual contributing blood receives complete coverage for any blood loss for 24 months period.

The Bloodmobile is sponsored in Carbondale and at all SIU by the following churches: Bethel A.M.E., Episcopal Lutheran, First Christian, Grace United Methodist First United Methodist, Our Savior Lutheran, Rock Hill Baptist St. Francis Xavier Catholic and Congregation Beth Jacob.
Report questions new air standard

CHICAGO (AP) — A Wisconsin medical researcher said today that proposed federal standards covering air pollutants in the blood may be too restrictive.

Reporting on his research at the Automotive Air Pollution Research Symposium, Dr. Richard D. Stewart of the Medical College of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, said the standards are "joyously idealistic and overly stringent."

The Environmental Protection Agency in Washington proposed Friday that the carbon monoxide level not exceed 8.7 parts per million for an eight-hour period. The national air quality standards would go into effect in 1975.

Dr. Stewart's research, like that of others reported at the symposium, is supported with funds from the automotive and petroleum industries.

Dr. Stewart, professor and chairman of the department of environmental medicine at the medical school, reported on research he and his colleagues conducted with 46 health human volunteers, ages 20 to 42.

The subjects were exposed to various levels of carbon monoxide, a form of air pollutant that is, according to the exhaust of automobiles, industrial furnaces and other combustion equipment.

The gas in sufficiently high concentrations can harm human and animal health, as carbon monoxide picks up carbon monoxide in the lungs instead of the oxygen needed to nourish body cells.

Carbon monoxide levels Dr. Stewart reported do not produce any measurable detrimental effect on healthy humans in concentrations up to 100 parts per million, far higher than is ever found in any city.

Following exposure to carbon monoxide, subjects were tested for short-term memory ability, mental coordination, reaction time, brainwave activity, visual acuity, ability to estimate short time intervals and the ability to respond to a visual stimulus.

"No impairment in performance of any of the tests even in subjects whose blood showed a carbon monoxide saturation of less than 15 per cent," Dr. Stewart said.

This 15 per cent saturation level would correspond to exposure of about 100 parts per million for 8 hours, he added.

His research group plans to continue studies of the effects of carbon monoxide on persons with heart or circulatory system diseases, those consuming alcohol or drugs, and upon the aged.

Dr. Stewart reported that one concern which grew out of the research was a delayed development of severe headaches after carbon monoxide intoxication.

He said it's apparent that exposure to a potentially lethal concentration of carbon monoxide over a period of a few hours might occur without producing symptoms sufficiently alarming to warn the person exposed.

Dr. Stewart said the only way cities will be able to meet the proposed federal standards is "a major breakthrough in auto emissions," which would drastically reduce carbon monoxide or alter the life style of metropolitan residents in a way which would have serious economic repercussions.

The latter he said, would mean that the number of automobiles coming into a city would have to be restricted.

Employees group to meet today

The Non-Academic Employees (case) will meet at 1 p.m. today in the General Classroom Building, Room 125.

Topics on the agenda include a report from committee representatives from senate provosts and a discussion on the council's constitution.

Tickets still available

Only about 2,000 tickets are left for the May 14 Chicago concert at the Arena. Ticket sales have been so good that only the $3.50 concourse seats remain, but these are still good seats from which to see the revolving stage, according to W.D. Justice, Arena manager.

Tickets are still available at the University Center Central Ticket Office, VTI Student Center, Penn's Sav-Mart, Tempo and the Arena Ticket Office. Telephone orders may be made by calling the Arena Special Events Tickets Office at 453-5341.

Organic garden buds programs

The Student Environmental Center will begin work on its organic garden Wednesday, according to the group's coordinator, Ray Lenz.

Lenz said persons interested in working on the garden should meet at 501 S. Pogge St. A four-week series of work programs will be held to develop the garden. The group will leave at 8:30 a.m. Transportation will be provided.

General preparatory work will begin at 9 a.m. Wednesday and include a survey of the area. Work will break at 11 a.m. for lunch and resume at noon. A discussion on composting and fertilizing will be held from 12 until 2 p.m.

Persons interested in working on the gardening project can contact Lenz at the center's office in the Student Government Office, 310.

Dorm damage leaves residents unconcerted

By Emily Thompson

Every thoroughfare of dollars worth of damage is incurred in the year's first two months, according to Don Ballantine, housing business director. Each resident is responsible for any University property damaged from, or damaged in, his room.

The guidebook also warns. "If University property is damaged, the resident is financially responsible for their private damage to University property on the public area of their unit that cannot be attributed to a known individual."

Ballantine said that a lot of damage during winter quarter is caused by snowballs flying through windows.

"We have three ways of assessing damages," Ballantine said. "If the individual who caused the damage is found we charge him, otherwise the individual floors or entire building are charged depending on the location and extent of the damage."

The damage at Thompson Point came to $2,250.45 in the room and affects several units. The damage at Thompson Point and University Hall was charged to a known individual.

Dress codes slacken

By Leslie Cady

School officials have just passed out trying to enforce rigid dress codes in many of the nation's classrooms. Even hot pants draw little more than a raised eyebrow in most places these days.

As reported in Associated Press surveys showed schools have abandoned formal regulations that once made slacks for girls no longer look like men's. Instead, they've adapted general guidelines that stress the "younger-looking" in accordance with health regulations—meaning shoes, a must—and that their attire may be "non-traditional" in some places.

"We've become fairly liberal," commented Vincent F. Gregory, who teaches students to use common sense. "Central Hall, assistant superintendent of schools at Hunter College in New York, said, 'We can't be style enforcers.' For hot pants, he said, 'She's right. It's a matter of taste.' If we're not going to stop it, we'd decide to make it a school policy, to let more people wear it and dad decide what the kids should wear."

The Board of Education in Los Angeles liberalized its dress code Monday, as member of the Dress Committee explained, the school district "should not be forced into the role of dress enforcer to enforce the rules parents themselves cannot enforce."

"Students now can grow hair as long as they want, or bear as many as any length and wear clothing of any color, as long as it is not uniform with school activities."

When it comes to boys, the biggest problem is hair and recent court decisions have cast doubt on the school's right to control hair length. U.S. District Court Judge Charles Wynnham Jr. ordered Alan Bennett, 16, to meet at Weilhands, Minn., after the youth was suspended for growing a mustache. The judge said it was unreasonable to try to regulate the length of a student's beard, which isn't a "characteristic" of a student.

"The student is a member of a community and it is not a discredit to his education if he is not in our business to educate, or if his education is being harmed."

Political science talk scheduled

State Senate OKs phosphate ban

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. (AP) — The Illinois Senate has approved the bill to ban sales of detergents containing high levels of phosphates.

The bill, which would prohibit sale without a no vote, was intended to protect the environment from the state containing high levels of phosphates.

The bill now heads to the House. The sponsor is Sen. Robert Erne, D-Chicago, who said it was "the right thing to do for the people of the state and the environment."

Lowi has received a number of special research awards and fellowships. He has written five books on politics and political science and has served as a county chairman for the Citizen's Committee for Kennedy-Johnson in 1960.

The Department of Government is sponsoring the talk.

U.S. space program slowing, lack of funds may cut more

EDITORS NOTE—it seems long ago, but it was only 10 years ago that Alan B. Shepard, Jr., became America's first astronaut. The following by Apollo Astronaut Writer Howard Benedict has been on the space story since its inception, review some of the years of space flight and looks into the future.

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—"Freedom 7" was just the first baby step among many things. One day man will land on the moon. He will position space stations and he will go to Mars.

But, for the U.S. at least, manned flights to Mars are many years away. After overtaking an early Soviet lead to win the race to the moon, America's space program is slowing.

Unless Congress votes funds for future programs, the U.S. will end manned space flights for the foreseeable future 1973.

Russia, meanwhile is accelerating its space efforts. Soviet scientists say they'll launch a fleet of earth-orbiting laboratories for medical, scientific and industrial research. They will be used for earth survey and for military purposes.

The Soviet's sending men to Mars and of establishing a permanent base on the moon, one of which is in present U.S. plans, will now be regretting the winding down of the American program.

"It's not in the spirit of Freedom 7," he said. "It's in the spirit of Freedom 7 that we have the same momentum we had back then. We should stop and start and then run and stop again in response to the mood of the nation."

Shepherd and a Navy lieutenant colonel, who was an active duty officer, would continue his promotion to rear admiral before he flew. He is on his way to the space flight when a brainstiff nation riveted attention on his cramped capsule and his steady drive to the moon. America's prestige rode on what would happen to the man and his nation.

Only 23 days earlier, Russian cosmonaut Yuri A. Gagarin had become the first human to rocket away from earth and he circled the globe once on a 106-minute mission.Russia's success in the suborbital flight to reporting, in-stroming the Space Control.

Shepherd's landing was the famous "Everything is O.K." Twenty days later President John F. Kennedy committed America to a landing on the moon.

The men and the mothers and fathers who had the early story in a race to the moon were, indeed, in the seat, and America's technological, scientific and management capability enabled it to forge ahead as it might. America was one of the Gemini to the Apollo programs.

The US had a big advantage in the way.

The three Apollo 3 astronauts died in the 1967 launch and died in a space capsule during a second try in the same year. Gagarin, the first man in space, died in a helicopter crash while training for another flight. The problem of Gagarin's death, plus numerous rocket explosions, at the Soviet SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—After six months in office, President Salvador Allende is bent on growing economic problems, but he says he intends to lead Chile "down the road to socialism."

"I'm not going to put my foot on the brake," Allende declared at a rally where he told workers, "you will have to sweat more" to offset declining production.

Since assuming office last month as the first freely elected Marxist president in the Western Hemisphere, the manufacturer, bespeckled Allende has laid down a foundation for profound changes in Chile.

His leftist coalition government, dominated by Communists and Socialists, introduced legislation to nationalize the U.S.-operated copper industry, the country's main source of income. It is now more than half way toward its goal of nationalizing all banks and credits.

His administration has expropriated more than 500 farms in an accelerated agrarian reform program to create state farms and state-supervised cooperatives.

Allende, 62, a physician by education, has shown himself to be a vigorous president, traveling frequently to the Chilean interior and working long hours at Government House.

The Allende administration appears to have the support of the majority of Chileans in nationwide municipal elections, April 4 had a popular-unit coalition candidates for city and town councils received just under 50 per cent of the total vote. This was a substantial in crease over the 36 per cent he received in September's three-way presidential election.

U.S. seeks Saigon's aid on growing GI heroin use

SAIGON (AP) - Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor said Tuesday the United States is seeking assistance from the Saigon government to help in a growing heroin problem among American GIs in Vietnam.

"The problem of heroin is disappointing and something that we'd like to correct," Resor told an airport news conference on his departure after an eight-day visit to South Vietnam.

"Right now, it's too much too readily available and we are taking steps to get greater assistance from the Vietnamese government to deal with this problem," he said.

Face execution

Doubt now on death row

By Sam Daborn
Associated Press Writer

For the inmates on death row around the nation, the question remains: Who is going to kill them? Who is the final authority?....

The Supreme Court's rejection on challenges to the death penalty left a doubt that has haunted those facing executions could occur, but many officials indicated this was unlikely immediately.

"I have indicated clearly before that there are no executions in Ohio until the Supreme Court has ruled on the constitutional validity of the death penalty itself," said Gov. John Gilligan after the ruling.

The court's decision upheld the finding of a lower court that a new execution date for Rusk was not unconstitutional.

The ruling does not dispose of the ultimate issue for capital punishment. The argument that the death penalty is a form of cruel and unusual punishment prohibited by the Constitution has been put to the court several times in appeals by condemned men.

The court, however, has never ruled on that.

Because of Gilligan's position, the execution, convicted of killing has woman, does not face immediate execution. But officials in California said McLaughlin, convicted of killing a group of elderly women, set for a new execution date.

Drug actions suggested

SAIGON (AP) - U.S. officials have given President Nguyen Van Thieu a list of suggested actions to deal with the drug smuggling problem in the Mekong Delta and along the Ho Chi Minh Trail. The sources reported the suggestions list the list after top U.S. officials have appealed to him for government help in dealing with the problem among American servicemen.

Drug use among U.S. soldiers is viewed by many American officials as a crisis that is worsening weekly.

Two U.S. congressmen, Rep. Robert H. Sikes, D-Conn., and Rep. Morgan Murphy, D-III., said April 26 that they said they supported drug use by "epidemic proportions," and added that the U.S. military was responding to a request made in late 1974 by the United States government in Vietnam using a high grade heroin.

Undermining the rising concern felt by U.S. officials over the narcotics situation in the Saigon region of John E. Ingersoll, director of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, Ingersoll made no statement on arrival, but issued the Secretary of the Army.

China: Nixon's offers false

TOKYO (AP) - Communist China and the United States will improve relations are false.

The comment by the official New China News Agency came in an attack on the U.S. State Department for recent statements that the People's Republic of China, and the United States were "on the same page" in the Chinese news agency.

Since the visit of the U.S. table-tennis delegation to China, upon invitation, there has been no new development in the friendship between the American and Chinese people," the agency asserted.

In these circumstances, the Nixon administration, which is beset with difficulties both at home and abroad, hastily made various gestures in an attempt to gain political capital in order to excite the support of the American people. This is actually intended to gain political capital in order to absorb the unexpected isolation at home and abroad.

Master Plan III altered

Chicago (AP) - A second draft of the proposed, yet higher education in Illinois was released Monday and contained some minor alterations from the original commission document.

The revised plan was presented to the Illinois Board of Higher Education by Dr. James B. Holderman, executive director of the board, who said the changes stem from non-public hearings held throughout the state.

He said he expects opposition to the plan, which called for merging public and private universities in a college system, to come in a provincial fashion that should cause all of us in academic life great concern.

"The rhetoric of many who appeared before us in these hearings can be categorized as 'yes, but,'" Holderman said.

He said the board heard many voices of the plan condemned it except in those elements that engaged upon their particular area of concern.

"The record reflects the presence of public and private institutions with special interests of particular campuses or even some narrow segments of a particular campuses," he said.

Holderman declared that many persons who appear cling to two principles which he considers unfounded.

Chair, Glee Club holding auditions

Robert Kinsbury, director of a University of Illinois, has announced that auditions have begun for the University Choir and Male Glee Club for 1974-75.

Voice hearings consist of hearing the student sing for voice and range of the voice. Kinsbury said that the board of the Male Glee Club, but is necessary for membership in the University Choir.

Hearings are now being held from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday at the University Center.

Carbondale 301 N. Illinois
Holder: golf team one of best

By Errol Schure
The Daily Egyptian

"This team compares very favorably with that squad," said John Logan, "and that's my hope to rate as one of SU's truly great golf teams."

Looking at the Salukis record for this season and last holds Holder's confidence intact.

After a loss to Tulane in the first match of the year, the golfers have developed a machine-like efficiency in kindness to any of the seven opponents and finishing fourth in both the South Classic in Swansea, Texas, and the Illinois Invitational in Carbondale.

Of the two tourneys Holder rates the Illinois Invitational as being one of the big ones.

"The tournament is a testing ground of the national meet," Holder explained, "because most of the Big Ten schools and the top in the country are there."

In that tourney, the Salukis finished ahead of four teams from the Big Ten in one of their more impressive performances this year.

The success of the golfers actually started at home when they beat Drake, 338-300, in a start with three that Holder's team takes their last 17 of 19 matches on his way to their seventh straight win.

One of the key factors in the golfers' success this season is the ability to come through in the clutch.

For example, against Washington University, an off day at Vilo Sapino fired a 17 over par rounds for SU.

When the Salukis met against Florida, Friday July 1st, Holder took first place with 70.

The balance of the squad has been so good that Holder has been able to give different players a chance to compete at various positions.

"Usually it is anything like anything else said Holder in looking at the squad." Young and Russ Talk have 77.33 and 77.47 respectively.

If there is anyone who can compare and contrast an SU team and with squads of the past it is Lynn Holder.

He has coached the golf team since its inception in 1942 Holder has seen the good years like 1964, when his team won the college division championship, and the bad years like 1965.

So Holder should know what he is talking about when he says, "This is the best team we have had here since we won the national championship in 1964."

That's an awe-inspiring statement to make considering that champion team boasted two All-Americans in Gene Corella and Bill Maitner, but according to Holder the teams are worthy of comparison.

Martin featured at banquet

Glen Allen Martin, who is retiring at the end of the quarter after 40 years as an athlete, coach, athlete-coach and administrator, has made the decision to John A. Logan College.

The SU junior-varsity baseball team, riddled by mental and physical handicaps and a lack of intramurals at SU, will be the feature of Warren Delano Jr. Banquet, June 2.

Junior-varsity team drops game to John Logan, 4-2

The SU junior-varsity baseball team, riddled by mental and physical handicaps and a lack of intramurals at SU, will be the feature of Warren Delano Jr. Banquet, June 2.

He was head coach of three major sports at SU: football for 17 years (1940-61), baseball for three years (1945-46).

He also served as athletic director for 10 years (1950-60) and was active in the intramural program; a position he has held for 10 years (1950-60).

He was graduated from what was then known as Southern Illinois Nor University in 1932 after starting both football and track careers at SU.

The All-American in track had a total of 17 years at SU on the basketball team; a total of 17 years at SU as an assistant football coach under the late William McAndrew.

The SU junior varsity baseball team which was defeated by Illinois Central College by a score of 17-6.

Collinsville man wins cycle race

Jerry Brown of Collinsville captured a field of 10 riders and accumulated 1,200 points on his way to the title in the Illinois National Benefits Moto Cross Race meet Sunday at Great Western Fairway.

The race was the first of a series of races between the two tracks which requires points for both tracks.

The Illinois division went to Keeper East of Cairo Greenville.

Mike Smith also won in the second round.

Rounding out the day's events was the open class competition won by Gary Brooks of Carbondale which won, while the next best time was taken by Steven Frazer of Herrin.

Southern will help
George Mendenall

George Mendenall spent Tuesday afternoon in the same manner he has spent all his recent Tuesday afternoons—Attached to a kidney machine in St. Louis.

Three days per week, nine hours per session. Mendenall is attached to the machine. To him, Mendenall, a late 1956's SIU gradu- ate, in a young man who at 64, 259 pounds, was the picture of health. Then he was struck by a hereditary kidney disease that will kill him if treatment isn’t continued.

But he can look forward to between six months and one year in a wheelchair. His legs are useless.

Cost of the treatment is pretty much in line with most medicine bills these days—$99 per hour.

His insurance company is willing to cough up $19,200 for treatment, 80 per cent of the $20,000 cost for 120 visits covered under the policy.

After that, Mendenall will be on his own, forced to find a $120 per visit for a machine he will use three times weekly for the remainder of his life. Principals of elementary schools don’t make that kind of money.

On Wednesday from Saturday, the SIU football team will attempt to help save Mendenall.

The Salukis will stage the second of their fundraising events this weekend, the Community High School’s Bleyer Field. All proceeds will be donated to a fund that has been established for Mendenall.

$20,000 needed

Spearheaded by his friends and local educators, the fund group is attempting to raise between $50,000 and $70,000—enough to buy Mendenall his own machine.

Tickets for the benefit game will be sold at $3 per ticket for elementary school and throughout town. A table may be set up at the University Center.

The Saluki gridironers will appear in another benefit game this weekend, although for not nearly as humanitali- an a cause.

That was the public appearance of the season. Southern’s gridironers will stage a spaciously.

All proceeds from that contest will be donated to the Benton High School athletic department, similar to a system used by the University of Illinois this season.

Under new coach Bob Blackman, the Illini are playing two spring games away from Champaign. The first was April 23 in Springfield and drew 4,500 fans.

The second game will be Saturday night in Peoria.

Saturday’s intrasquad at Benton was the brainchild of that school’s athletic department which contacted SIU head football coach John T. Lattier to agree to the game.

George needs it more

Rich Herrin, head basketball coach at Benton, said the school would like to continue the game on an annual basis “if it is agreeable to Southern. But they have no use for them to come up here if we only have 100 fans.”

Herrin added he was not cer- tain how large a crowd will turn out but hoped for 1,000 people. That would fill Tabor Stadium, home of the Ragers.

It would be nice to see Tabor Stadium full Saturday. But a full Bleyer Field on May 15 springboard game in Benton.

George Mendenall needs money a lot more than Benton High School.
