On the muddiest, dampest, rain-soaked worst fields seen in Carbondale for many moons a great gridiron battle was fought.

When the whistle sounded all the rain, the cold and the mud for before them there was something to witness and to remember. It was a close battle throughout and many times it seemed as if a scoreless tie would be the final standing, but such was not true for our fighting Maroons came out with the big end of a score of nothing score.

The Y. W. C. A. met Tuesday evening with a large attendance even though it was a rainy evening. Rev. Sarkis gave a very interesting talk. Miss Swallen, a Korean Missionary will be here next Tuesday and Wednesday. Her chief subject is Voluntary Service, but she will be interested in anything that we girls are interested in.

Watch for dates on the Bulletin board for special talks.

Miss Gubelman's Spanish School

Miss Gubelman gave us a very good talk on the summer school she attended in Spain last summer. The school is called El Centro de Espanol; it was affiliated with the University of Madrid but not a part of it. The summer quarter especially for foreigners lasted one month. Out of the one hundred foreigners attending this school seventy-five were Americans.

School work was carried on in a fashion quite similar to the method used in our universities. Lectures were given regularly and classroom work took up the rest of the student's time. For those who wanted them, private lessons were given.

Students attending this summer school had the opportunity of learning some of the leading authorities on the Spanish language.

Miss Gubelman enjoyed her work with the school and expressed a desire to return to Spain for further study at a later date. Valley City, North Dakota.
COLLEGE EDUCATION WORTH $72,000

After careful figuring from a large quantity of data the dean of the college of business administration of Boston university, Everett W. Lord, declared that the cash value of a college education to its possessor is $72,000. He put the cash value of a high school education at $35,000. In Dean Lord's report the "average maximum income" of an untrained man is put at $1200; of a high school graduate $2800, and of a college graduate $6000.

He placed the total earnings of the three types up to the age of 60 at $45,000, $78,000 and $156,000 respectively. At that age, he said, 60 out of every 100 untrained workers depend on others for support, while the college man has just reached his maximum earning capacity. He pointed out that the less the training the sooner the earning power begins—the untrained man beginning at 14, the high school man at 18 and the college man at 22; but the last named at 28 equals the high school man at 40. Since the educated man's income is partly dependent on his mental ability, the dean said, it increases with the years.

In the case of those depending on physical strength it begins to fall off at 50 or earlier.

It should be explained, however, that in drawing such conclusions as this only the successful graduates are taken into account, so that the conclusions are really misleading. Also, it is pointed out by critics, it is well known that it is usually the other persons who secure better education, and there is no way to tell how much of their success is to be credited to their natural ability and how much to their education. In other words a person who has the money-making ability with money without much regard to whether he has a higher education or not, these critics say.

ANTHONY'S SPEECH UP TO DATE

Friends, fellow convicts and bricklayers,
I come to speak politics, but not to bore you.
The evil that students do is preposterous.
The good is oft delayed till after the sixth hour.
So let it be with the most of us. The noble Belmont
Hath told you to keep off the grass.
When we assembled in assembly, we heard
His pleading call,
And grievously hath the students answered it.
Here, under leave of Mr. Farley and

THE EGYPTIAN

But the moral of this commandment from Belmont, is simply, "To walk on the paths of concrete."

"Now, children," she said, "it is the law of gravity that keeps us on this earth."

"But please, teacher," inquired one small child, "how did we stick on before the law was passed?"

"I don't like your heart action," said the medical examiner. "You've had some trouble with Angina Pectoris."

"You're party right, doctor," said the applicant sheepishly, "only that ain't her name."

THE AIM OF A UNIVERSITY COURSE

Today I have continued my efforts to show the importance of training the intellect, which is best for the individual himself, and enables him to discharge his duties to society. The philosopher, indeed, and the man of the world differ in their very notions, but the methods by which they are respectively formed, are pretty much the same. The philosopher has the same command of matters of thought, which the true citizen and gentleman has of matters of business and conduct. If then a practical end must be assigned to a University course; I say that it is that of training good members of society. Its art is the art of social life; and its end is fitness for the world. It neither confines its views to particular professions, or the one hand nor creates heroes or inspirers of genius on the other. Works indeed of genius are under no art: heroic minds come under no rule; a University is not the birthplace of poetry or of immortal authors, of founders of schools, leaders of colonies, or conquerors of nations. It does not promise a genera'r of Aristotles or Newtons of Napoleon, or Washingtons, of Raphaels or Shakespeares, though such miracles of nature it has before now contained within its precincts. Nor is it content with the other hand with forming the critic or the experimentalist, the economist or the engineer, though such too it includes within its scope. But a University training is the great ordinary means to a great but ordinary end; it aims at raising the intellectual tone of society, at cultivating the public mind, at purifying the national taste, at supplying true principles to popular enthusiasm, and fired aims to popular aspiration, at giving encouragement and sobriety to the ideas of the age, at facilitating the exercise of political power, and refining the intercourse of private life. It is the education which gives a man a clear conception of his own opinions and judgments, a truth in developing them, an eloquence in expressing them, and a force in using them. He is at home in any society, he has common ground with every class; he knows when to speak and when to be silent; he is able to conserve, he is able to listen; he can ask a question pertinent, and gain a lesson seasonably; when he has nothing to impart himself, he is ever ready, yet never in the way; he is a pleasant companion, and a comrade you can depend upon; he knows when to be serious and when to trifle; and he has a sure tact which enables him to trifle with gracefulness and seriousness with effect. He has the power of a mind which lives in itself, while it lives in the world and which has resources for its happiness at home when it cannot go abroad. He has a gift which serves him in public, and supports him in retirement, without which good fortune is but vulgar, and with which failure and disappointments have a charm. The art which tends to make a man all this, is in the object which it pursues as useful as the art of wealth or the art of health, though it is less susceptible of method, and less tangible, less certain, less complete, in its result.

What does it mean to stick to a job until it is finished? Probably it will mean the difference between success and failure. The man that can be depended on to do what he says he will; and the man who meets apparent failure with a smile is the one who is in demand. The line between failure and success is so fine that we are often on it before we know it. Many a man has thrown up his hands at a time when a little more effort and patience would have achieved success. A little more persistence, a little more effort, and what seemed a hopeless failure may turn to glorious success. There is no failure except in no longer trying. The goal may seem like a speck in the future but patient determination will make it a shining light of the present.

NATIONAL EDUCATION WEEK

This week should be an interesting time for all schools. It has been set aside as education week over the entire nation. At this time people over the whole country are expected to dedicate themselves to the course of education. Think what a great part education has played in developing this prosperous democracy of ours. If we are to remain a progressive people, educational possibilities must continue to advance in the future.

Preparations for this week have long been in progress. The President of the United States and the governors of the various states have issued proclamations for its observance. Educational journals and general magazines are publishing special editions. Radio programs are being given, broadcasting talks on education and school features. Educational associations have prepared programs for each day of the week, dealing with different phases of education.

During the week every community should sum up its educational needs and do everything possible to aid them. Every town and community should see that a public library is available for its citizens. It is the duty of every citizen to help in the advancement of these things. Education and patriotism go hand in hand. Let us all be patriotic and strive to make this an educated republic.
WEE WUNDER

Due to the fact that each possible day for school work is needed, and that student loafing is not beneficial the student body and faculty celebrated Armistice Day with a special Chapel Exercise. About twelve or fifteen men went from the audience to the front rank of the stage group to be introduced as ex-service men, who wore the khaki suits six years ago. We feel a great admiration for these men; they meant a lot to us during the war and should mean a lot to us even now. Four faculty members had their name upon the honored list. They were—Capt. McAuliffe, Mr. Scott, Mr. Hall and Mr. Jacobiah.

The orchestra played a special selection “Old Glory,” containing a group of our favorite patriotic songs, and our national hymn, “The Star Spangled Banner.”

“We pledge allegiance to our Flag, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with liberty and Justice for all.”

Since completing his law course in Chicago, Illinois, he has been engaged in the practice of law at Marion.

Harry Wilton was elected by a very large majority to the State Senate from the 44th district. Harry has served several terms in the lower house of the State Legislature, and is one of the best friends of S. I. N. U. We rejoice in his election to the Senate.

WHAT WE THINK OF GOING TO McKENDREE

These are anxious times. The football season is steadily moving toward an important conclusion. Next week, Oct. 24th, our team meets the Meth-odist ministers of McKendree College, on McKendree's field. You remember without being reminded that the dashing team of our campus has won every game out of town so far. This makes the third, and it's guaranteed.

It happens that this is the season for mutual disagreement but these McKendree preachers are in perfect unison with the idea of getting our goat. We really dislike to show them up and leave a blot on their record, but there's two ways to do a thing—a right way, and a wrong way—and the only way we can play football is the former.

This play with the preachers is adding a new force and zest to our season's routine. But more important of course is the fact that our team is going to make the last game a ringing VICTORY.

When I asked the following question to members of the team, fans, etc., these were the answers I received:

Question—"What are we going to do to McKendree?"

Answers—"Yo! Ho! Well we'll put their rock cooled coats on backwards for them, and make show strings out of their jazz bow ties. What do you want to know about anyway?"—A player.

"We are going to bury their championship hopes in the dirt."—A player.

"They can't possibly stop us unless they line up with a pitch fork in each hand."—Another player.

"We are going to whip them of course. Why surely we're going to lick 'em."—A fan.

In the four games played between the two institutions since 1920 each
