The Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) at its meeting in the Illini Union Tuesday received budget requests from the state universities, community colleges and the Illinois State Scholarship Commission totaling $635 million, an increase of 21 percent over this year’s figures.

Brown said the IBHE will probably reduce the budget requests “fairly drastically” before sending its recommendations to the governor and the legislature.

“The universities are asking for a 15 percent increase. My guess is that the IBHE will not recommend the budgets at that level. Even if they recommend them, say, at 10 percent (above this year’s appropriations) it would involve a considerable cutback, and naturally it will hit the highest request harder,” Brown said.

CHAMPAIGN — The SIU system has requested a 23.3 percent increase in its budget for fiscal year 1977, the largest increase sought by any of the four university systems in Illinois.

SIU is asking for $118.3 million for operations and grants for the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses, the system office, the School of Medicine in Springfield and the School of Dental Medicine in Alton.

James Brown, general secretary of the SIU system, said the administration did not set out to ask for the highest increase in the state.

“It (the large increase) is the result of the kind of requests put together and approved by the (SIU) board,” Brown explained.

Staffers arrested, charged with murder

NARCO operations to be investigated

An investigation into the operations of the Narcotic Addict Rehabilitation Organization (NARCO) by the state agency which funds it will begin soon, the Daily Egyptian learned Thursday.

The investigation follows the charging of three NARCO staff members in the gangland-style murders of three men and the wounding of another Nov. 1.

NARCO receives its funding through the Illinois Dangerous Drug Commission (IDDC). An investigation into the operations of NARCO by the state agency which funds it will begin soon, the Daily Egyptian learned Thursday.

A spokesperson for the IDDC in Chicago said the investigation of NARCO’s operation would be unannounced. Benny Price, NARCO’s Carbondale director, was unavailable for comment on the pending investigation.

Luther Carter, 46, NARCO program director, Ronald M. Jenkins, 29, field supervisor, and Grady Bryant, 20, staff consultant, are charged with the murder of Robert Gillmore, 21, James A. Williams, 22, Terry Easer, 25, and the attempted murder of Buford Lewis Jr.

The shootings occurred at approximately 1 a.m. Nov. 1 in a mobile home located at 401 N. Barnes St., police said. Carbondale Police Chief George Kennedy said the trailer was notorious as a drug distribution center and gambling establishment.

Drugs and gambling equipment were confiscated at the murder scene, Kennedy said.

NARCO was originally started by controversial still in prison who felt they could help in the rehabilitation of drug addicts. The organization helped drug addicts and convoluted criminals as clients.

State funding to the group was discontinued for a time last year, but was restored.

The IDDC spokesperson said hiring of convicted criminals was common in many areas, but potential employees for NARCO were screened before hiring to ensure they were no longer involved in criminal activity.

Nearly half of SIU’s requested increase would be devoted to salary, benefits.

The NARCO proposal includes funds to introduce a step pay plan which would bring SIU-E Civil Service workers up to parity with other state Civil Service employers.

The Carbondale campus held off asking for a salary increase in its budget request pending a state policy decision on step pay plans for civil service workers.

Humphrey offers self as party spokesman

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The elder statesman of the Democratic party, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said Tuesday night he is not actively seeking the presidential nomination but hopes to become “an articulate spokesman” for his party’s beliefs.

Speaking at a press conference prior to a fund-raising dinner for Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale, Humphrey said the difference between a candidate for the presidency and one who will accept the nomination is “a lot of work.”

“My attitude is that of a friendly doctor with a prescription while President Ford’s attitude is that of a mortician hoping for a resurrection,” Humphrey said.

Humphrey criticized Ford’s stance of waiting until the city defaults on its bond payments because many small investors have their life savings tied up in New York municipal bonds.

New York City has issued bonds for the maintenance of general government services. If the city defaults and cannot make payments on the bonds they will be returned.

Taking a slam at the Republican party, Humphrey said it is in turmoil and will be divided between the liberal Nelson Rockefeller faction and the conservative Ronald Reagan faction in the November, 1976 election.

“The Republican party is always a decade behind the Democrats so now it’s their turn to be in turmoil,” Humphrey said.

Speaking on education, Humphrey said, “The Ford administration wants education but doesn’t want to pay for it.”

Alterations in MP4 discussed by IBHE

By Lesore Bobuta

CHAMPION--The Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) indicated Tuesday night during a scheduled two-hour meeting that it would recommend a one-month agreement to strip system representatives of their voting power.

The recommendation is part of the draft of the 1983-84 Statewide Faculty Senate Final Four (MP4) which is scheduled for tentative approval and public hearings in December after receiving the Board's approval.

The IBHE discussed MP4 for over three hours, discussing, among other conclusions on several provisions although no votes were taken.

The IBHE advisory committees were unanimous in their support of allowing system representatives to retain their votes.

Peter Yankwich, chairman of the faculty advisory committee said the recommendation to remove the system representatives "throws the baby out with the bath." Yankwich said the system representatives were needed on the joint board staff. "To deny the system votes would destroy that balance," he said.

Joseph L. Block was the only IBHE member to speak out against the system representatives having a vote. He said he feels the system representatives should continue to have a voice in collective bargaining decisions on the law student, made clear the IBHE power to regulate the contracts of the individual governing boards.

Block read a section from the state statute which created the IBHE giving it broad power to serve the state's universities and minority colleges.

Harris Rowe, SIU representative on the IBHE, said, "If we're going to read part of it, let's read all of it," and quoted the final section of the statute which states that the individual boards still retain the powers they held previously spoken out against Alton on Nov. 6.

Fellow Alton students have been making a bid for collective bargaining with the University to loose the opportunity to have a voice in collective bargaining with the University.

The award is given on the anniversary of the 1935 Oklahoma cross country team's victory at the annual Associated Press-National Football Foundation All-American Team.

Further, President Ford cleared that in his 1976 campaign literature, the faculty was not sólo a party to the deal made with the Administration, despite the IBHE's recommendation for faculty representation on the governing board.

Gish has refused to table documents, although the 1976 campaign literature which stated that the individual boards would continue to have full representation on the governing boards.

Gish was voted to receive the Lovejoy award by SIU journalism faculty and administration. Brown will present the award.

The lecture and award presentation is open to the public.

Faculty warned to unincorporize or lose voice

Members of the SIUC faculty were encouraged to make a bid for collective bargaining with the SIU Board of Trustees soon they may lose their job security.

The IBHE passed a collective bargaining decisions on the Carbondale campus.

Tom Britton, assistant with the SIU academic department, said SIUC would make a bid for collective bargaining with the SIU Board of Trustees soon they may lose their job security.

"Those collective bargaining agreements may look forwards." The collective bargaining agreements may look promising in the future, but they can't be applicable to Carbondale," said Britton. He said there is a "chance" many laws which would allow collective bargaining for SIU faculty should not be as applicable to the Carbondale campus.

If the request is moved to No. 1 on the board's priority list, the item has a chance of receiving funding in 1979. However, the city's request is adjacent to the SHP, which approves a funding on a basis of priority. Each item is ranked in a sequence.

Since 1970 the University has requested pollution control funds, but at a lower priority, said Henkesh. In 1975 the item ranked 22nd on a list of 52 items, but in 1977 it rose to number five.

SIU pollution

By George Hasz

Along with the prairie dust, man-made pollution and environmental problems that are inevitable in a metropolis like St. Louis, we can add another air offender—the SIU Physical Plant smokestack.

It has been a problem long before a year since Gov. Dan Walker pulled a switch, flashed the okay sign and pointed the fumes from the smokestack from the Physical Plant smokestack at SIU's experimental scrubber went to work. At about the same time, Walker had proposed a $70 million bond issue which would finance the continuing research in environmental control.

And what do we have now?

The answer to the question is obvious to anyone who has glanced skyward in the direction of the Physical Plant lately. As of last month, the experimental scrubber was quietly scrubbing for lack of available funds: the smokestack is back to its former self and SIU is again violating the Clean Air Act of 1970. And that requires the achievement of national standards of air quality by May 19, 1975.

The scrubber held up its end pretty well, according to data collected by Howard E. Hesketh, SIU associate professor of thermal and environmental engineering and designer of the system. The scrubber was found to be pretty effective in using high-sulfur content Illinois coal, with more than 90 percent of sulphur dioxide gases removed by the scrubber. In addition, sulphate sampling, a by-product of the scrubber operation, are now being tested to see if a practical use can be found.

Negligence as to the continued operation of the scrubber system is not solely the fault of our government. The demise of the scrubber was also caused by SIU. This funding of the project was a joint effort that included the Chemical Construction Corporation (Chemico), the Illinois Institute for Environmental Quality (IIEQ) and SIU.

Chemico donated much of the complicated and costly equipment. The IIEQ provided an $84,000 grant and SIU put up just over $5,000 grant. Percentage-wise, SIU had the lightest load to bear, yet it is the one holding things up.

Hopefully the system might be started again if funds become available from other sources. Chemico stated its intentions of continuing its program of pollution control experimentation, and according to Hesketh, the federal Environmental Protection Agency showed interest in continuing funding of the operation. But university requests came after available funds had already been allocated for the current fiscal year.

Apparently Walker and SIU's economic foot-dragging techniques have again backfired and SIU is now faced with finding a new way to keep the EPA off its back. The reasons behind this stand are faced with a little dinger morning air.

Spanking wrong

By Kenneth Pillarski

Student Writer

Through the use of our punishment schools have moved one more step away from the goal of education and toward the role of an institutionalized beach cleaning and custodial business.

The Supreme Court's recent decision upholding state laws which allow corporal punishment in our educational system has deteriorated to the point where physical abuse is the only method by which teachers can control the school children.

Our schools are supposed to be teaching students the laws an effective method to change another person's mind is through reason and the powers of persuasion—no paddling. Self-respect as well as respect for others are vital elements of a free society. Students who are subject to humiliating and sometimes brutal spankings see that it is better to be strong than weak, to oppress rather than submit and to practice violence rather than evidence of the school.

Abusive discipline rarely solves anything, it merely adds to a child's growing distrust and ill feelings toward society.

Dr. M. D. Stock argues that "advocates of corporal punishment are turning their backs on modern knowledge gained over the last few decades about the effects of punishment.

A recent study revealed that children in classes with strict discipline are not only more aggressive and less concerned with learning.

David G. Gil, a professor at Brandeis University, who recently was quoted about SIU's "irregular" situation, said, "Rarely is corporal punishment administered to promote the benefit of the attacked child. Usually it serves the needs of the attackers who are seeking release from his own anger and aggressiveness.

It is time our school administrators face the fact that corporal punishment breeds more problems. The stick is a relic of the past that has long outlived its usefulness. Now is the time to be buried once and for all and replace it with the understanding and concern that we all too frequently preach.

Fetal research sparks controversy, contradictions

By Mary E. Gardner

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Although fetal research promises to make human beings more comfortable and help make a child's chances of being born "normal" and healthy greater than they are today, the topic is one sparked with controversy and contradictions.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) recently revised its guidelines on fetal research. It says it is not unethical to maintain the viability of a fetus through use of extraordinary means for research purposes if there is every reason to believe the fetus is not and never will be able to sustain its own life.

However, abortion laws limit these guidelines by stating only therapeutic research may be done on intentionally aborted fetuses. This is to say that only research which could in some way help the aborted fetus can be done. Since abortions must be performed prior to viability the (ability to live on its own) in order to be legal, it logically follows that no research can be done on them.

If one can kill a fetus in the abortion process, it is "unethical" to perform research on an entity which was never capable of viability to increasingly extraordinary means for research purposes if there is every reason to believe the fetus is not and never will be able to sustain its own life.

However, HEW guidelines also provide that once a non-viable fetus is put on a life-sustaining device to keep it alive for research, nothing can be done to terminate it.

This raises the possibility of fetuses being kept "alive" for unpredictably long periods, as pointed out by Dr. David G. Nathan or Harvard Medical School. A fetus would thus be kept pumping away indefinitely without a chance to die.

The guidelines indicate that testifiers can pool around all they want on a fetus unless it is the product of some nasty woman's decision to terminate her pregnancy.

If a fetus is non-viable and has no possibility of ever being able to sustain its own life, then there is no moral obligation to artificially maintain its life and not allow it to die.

Opponents of fetal research claim concern over the "dignity of the fetus," just as though a fetus is a person. Only at the age of 24 weeks does a fetus have the potential of a personality because the brain is not "hooked up" until then, says Wesley W. Parke, who does fetal research at the SIU School of Medicine.

But without its brain functioning, without being a conscious being, a fetus is not a person and there is little sense in discussing its dignity.

The whole notion of "personhood" is based on a combination of both body and mind: both parts are necessary for the whole. A mindless body is not a person.

Unless research involves a "person" there is no reason to curtail it. Research on loads or oysters on the grounds that they have living bodies could be prohibited just as validly.

Concern over fetal research involving intentionally aborted fetuses is that a business might very well develop around "abortion for research" in which pregnant women might be paid to get pregnant and have their pregnancies terminated.

The prospect of having stables of women raising fetuses for profit is unappealing. However, having an embryo harvested and giving up a life within one would be a difficult enough decision. Making the situation presents itself and the number of women willing to raise fetuses for research would be very slim.

If intentionally aborted fetuses could legally be bought and sold and giving up a life within one would be a difficult enough decision. Making the situation presents itself and the number of women willing to raise fetuses for research would be very slim.

Lucy is as good as skill in stock market analysis

By Joseph R. Tybor
Associated Press Writer

Big-time stock investors who depend on sophisticated analyses in their dealings apparently are wasting their time, says a study by two University of Chicago law professors.

In the study, the two law professors found it no greater than if they depended solely onelsey Lady Luck, the study says. This is because, the study says, analysts aren't reading the market, but rather just the opposing side's press releases and correspondences.

They conclude that a recently developed "buy-and-hold" market strategy is superior for big pension and endowment funds. The strategy is patterned on the "cold warrior," the study adds.

"Every investor of large capital who has tried to outperform the market (has failed," Langbein said. "Mu1t1fund suCCes5ion one year may be the bottom the nest year."

The study, part of a research arm of the American Bar Association, was restricted to pension and endowment funds but Langbein said that "buy-and-hold" mutual funds for small investors may become popular within the next few years.

There is an "impressive amount of empirical evidence that says you can't consistently beat the market. Despite the immense opposition and cost involved, the amount of analysis is now employed, data show that success can be achieved." The study says.

"Every investor of large capital who has tried to outperform the market (has failed," Langbein said. "Multi fund success one year may be the bottom the nest year."

The study concludes that the advantages of the market funds, so superior to the traditional strategy that "a trustee who declines to procure such advantages for the beneficiaries of his trust may in the future find his conduct difficult to justify in the courts."

Persons interested in working as a Peace Corps or VISTA volunteer can obtain information and applications from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Nov. 12 and 13 in the Career Planning and Placement Office, Woody Hudson Hall.

"Applications will be accepted from seniors and graduates only," said Bert Rava, Peace Corps/VISTA recruiter. "The fields in which we are particularly interested in attracting students from are those of agriculture, business, education, engineering and home economics."

ISSC rule requires reporting of 'gift money'

A new Illinois State Scholarship Commission (ISSC) regulation now requires that reports of gifts, including "gift money" they receive, regardless of the amount.

Joseph Zimny, grant and loan director at SIU, said gift money includes such programs as the Basic Education Opportunity Grant (BEOG) or any private scholarship that a student may receive in addition to the Illinois State Scholarship.

In other words, any money that a student doesn't have to pay back must be reported to the ISSC if the student receives the monetary award. "Skill along with attitude is what we're looking for," he said. "The person who applies should have a well-defined skill, a well-defined self-concept, be energetic and in-dustrious, but most of all, have seriously thought out the idea of volunteering, before applying," he added.

Applications take four to six months to be processed. No wording is involved, the application will simply give an overall view of the person and references to contact. "Letters are sent to the interested references and their responses are taken heavily into consideration," he said.

Blood drive sets SIU quota

Student participation is needed to meet the SIU goal of 1,000 pints of blood for the Red Cross Blood Drive. The Red Cross Blood Drive is scheduled for 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 17 to 20, in Student Center Ballroom D.

To donate blood, students should register for an appointment at the solicitation area of the Student Center. Donors will also be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis at the drive.

The actual donation process takes less than 10 minutes. Donors should plan, however, to spend an hour at the bloodmobile taking a mini-checkup and medical history.

Cartoons will entertain donors during the administrative work. Sandwiches, cookies and drinks will be served following the process.

Holiday wreaths, holly on sale

All wreaths and holly will be shipped fresh from Washington and will arrive by Nov. 13.

Conference set on earthquake building codes

A conference on earthquakes and building codes and the hazards that earthquakes create in Southern Illinois and nearby states will be held at SIU on Nov. 18.

According to C. Raymond Nowack, conference chairman, the purpose of the meeting is "to provide information on the need for seismic design requirements and the level of resistance that should be provided in Southern Illinois and adjacent states."

Speakers at the conference include William J. Hall, professor of civil engineering at the University of Illinois, Vincent B. Rusu, regional engineer for the International Conference of Building Officials, and Otto W. Nurtli, professor of geophysics at St. Louis University.

The conference is sponsored by the SIU Department of Engineering Mechanics and Materials and the Division of Continuing Education. Funds for the speakers have been provided by the special meetings and speakers program of the office of the vice-president of academic affairs.

A $10 registration fee includes a noon luncheon. Further information is available from the Division of Continuing Education, phone 455-2201.

Theater group presents final play

The Carbondale Interpreters Theater will present its third and final production of the semester, "Freaks of the Cosmic Circus," Thursday through Sunday.

The production deals with the spiritual nature of reality. Four short stories and six poems make up the group's stage package.

A member of the cast said the production's four sub-plots revolve around "man's discovery of the divine within himself in an often comical context." One story tells of a man who shares his room with an angel and another portrays a woman learning that she is from a star in another universe.

All performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. on the Caliper Stage in the Communications Building.

Sweet Cherry.

I am an Air Force officer and this is my sweet cherry. When I visit home people are happy to see me and proud. They say I'm doing my part in the community by showing the young people and the adults that you really can make it if you really can get your share of the good life.

I also feel good about my position in the Air Force community. I'm a leader there. In some other brothers and sisters I meet in the service can look to. And it amazes them to know they have a voice in Air Force matters that concern them.

The Air Force needs more leaders... pilots... crew members... and scientists and engineers. Majors. You might be one of them and the best way to find out that it is in an Air Force ROTC program. There are two, three, and four year programs. Scholarship and non-scholarship. Why not look into all these plans? It's worth it, brother.

Facilities now operating to recycle newspapers

By Mike Springer
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A newspaper recycling bin on the SIU campus is now operating, said Jim Davis, a custodian at Faner. The bin is located below the U.S. 51 overpass. Davis stressed that the bin is for newspaper only and added that there would be at least two pick-ups a week.

Another bin located next to the first one has been cleaned out but will not be used unless it is needed.

The bins were used by the Jackson County Recycling Center until it ceased operation. Davis said the bin has been out of operation for about a year.

Davis said the paper he collected would be hauled in 18-to 12-ton bundles and shipped to the Orem Corp. in Munster, Ind. where it would be converted into cellulose fiber insulation for homes.

Davis said he has been collecting paper for about three years. He also collects salvage from the Daily Egyptian and Southern Illinois newspaper presses.

The bailing is done at Davis' home, but the operation may move to another building if the new bin collects much newspaper, he said.

The Bicentennial of what?

A REVOLUTION!

If the patriots of the 1770s could take a look at the America of the 1970s, they'd be staggered by our silence.

Ted Howard, cofounder of the People's Bicentennial Commission, will present his program entitled, "The American Revolution: A 200 Year Cover-up," Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Ballrooms B, C, D of the Student Center. It is Free to all.

Honorary alumnus dies in New York hospital

Henry Allen Moe, an honorary alumnus of SIUE, died Oct. 2 in New York Hospital. He resided in Riverdale, N.Y. and Sherman, Conn.

Mr. Moe's honorary degree was one of numerous honors conferred by universities and learned societies in North and South America, England and Europe in recognition of his conception, planning and, for 38 years, administration of the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation.

During those more than 5,000 men and women received fellowship grants for research and creative work in all fields of knowledge. After his retirement from the Foundation, Mr. Moe was appointed the first chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities by the President of the United States.

Mr. Moe was also president of the American Philosophical Society, The New York State Historical Association and the Farmer's Museum in Cooperstown, N.Y., vice president of the National Museum of Modern Art and the New York State Council on the Arts, a trustee of the Rockefeller Foundation, American Academy in Rome, Peabody Institute, Tiffany Foundation, Guggenheim Museum, Clark Foundation, Wesleyan University and other institutions.

Mr. Moe was born on July 2, 1894, in Monticello, Minn., and was educated at Hamline University in St. Paul. After Navy service during World War I, he went to Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar. There he received law degrees, became a barrister of the Inner Temple, London, and lecturer in law at Oxford until his return to the United States in 1919.

He is survived by his wife, the former Edith Louise Monroe; his son, Christian H. Moe, professor of theater at SIU; and two grandsons, Eric Henry Moe and Keith VanDoren Moe.

Smokestack repair underway

Repair work is underway on the SIU Physical Plant smokestack to repair damages from lightning and wind occurring within the last two months.

High winds twisted conduit (metal pipes housing wires) running vertically up the stack's sides. Principle damage to conduit occurred on the stack's north side. Lightning struck the stack's cap twice within a two-week period.

Repair will require over two tons of concrete to be transported to the top of the 175-foot stack, said Dennis Gourley, foreman of construction crew.

Other work being done to the stack includes replacing clearance lights on the stack to warn aircraft, and tack-pointing, which is a replacement of damaged mortar between the stack's bricks.

The Peabody Continental-Home Co. of Chicago has been contracted to perform the repairs, Gourley said. The contract allows 15 work days within a 30-day period. A three-man crew is doing the work, including a ground foreman and two men on scaffolding circling the stack.

Work on the stack began Oct. 22, but has been delayed because of excessive wind conditions. Gourley said he expects work to be completed by Wednesday.

Handicapped citizens to meet

Illinois Conference of Handicapped Citizens will meet in Chicago, Saturday and Sunday to develop an agenda for governmental services for disabled.

Milan Singh, chairman of the Governor's Committee on the Problems of the Handicapped, said that the conference will examine state policy and funding of handicapped services, including the examination of department rules and regulations.

The conference will include ten workshops on consumer participation, rehabilitation services and delivery systems, architectural barrier and housing, transportation, employment, education, human and legal rights, income maintenance and supplements, institutionalization and deinstitutionalization, and medical care, insurance and safety.

The conference is directed to the recipients of handicapped services instead of to the service providers. Singh said, but the Steering Committee hopes to reach not only those individuals active in organizations of the handicapped but also those who are in service groups or are unaffiliated with such organizations.

Dunn supports bill to ‘clean up’ fair

State Rep. Ralph Dunn, R-DuQuoin, said that he will work to gain sponsors for an ordinance in the State Fair.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Dave Jones, R-R Springfield, and co-sponsored by Dunn, would place the fair under the control of a 15-member board.

Ten board members would be elected from state fair districts to be established and five would be appointed by the governor.

The bill was a member of a legislative committee that visited the Illinois State Fair in 1974. The Illinois reorganization is based on the Illinois State Fair.

"Indians and many other states have well-run, profitable state fairs and there is absolutely no reason why the Illinois State Fair, the largest agricultural exhibition in the world, cannot be the same," Dunn said.

It has been charged that the 1974 fair lost contracts without competitive bidding and overspent its budget by approximately $1 million. Illinois Auditor General Robert Oremon called the fair a financial "disaster" in a 1975 report.

Dunn said, "It is time we put an end to state fair politics and mismanagement and make certain the taxpayers' money is well spent and Illinois farmers have a voice in how their state fair is run. In its annual report, the State Fair Agency recently admitted that the 1975 fair lost over $700,000 and still Gov. Walker vetoed the very bill designed to end such squandering and mismanagement of the taxpayers' money."

Dunn said he believed enough support can be mustered to override the veto.

Orienteering combines both physical, mental exercise for partakers

By Loran Lewis

Don't tell a member of the Southern Illinois Orienteering Club to get lost. He might take you up on it. The trouble is, he probably wouldn't stay lost.

Orienteering is a relatively young sport in the United States, based on the ability to find one's way around. Or as club president Myron Lower puts it, "Orienteering is cross-country navigation using topographic maps and a compass." Getting oriented.

Briefly the sport of orienteering puts the skills of the orienteer against a marked field course. Each orienteer is given a course map to begin. He must navigate his way from point to point to complete the course. How he gets to each point is his own decision, so route selection and decision-making are primary factors in determining success.

The Southern Illinois Orienteering Club, sponsored through the Department of Recreation and Intramurals, gives local enthusiasts a chance to orienteer in orienteering meets throughout the area. According to Lower, the club has recently traveled to northern Michigan and Louisiana, and plans meets for Ohio, Tennessee and Virginia in the near future.

Orienteering, which club members refer to as "a thinking sport," is not just for competition. It provides participants with a chance to get out with nature.

"Orienteering areas are really beautiful," said Lower. "It gives you a chance for physical, as well as mental exercise. Both are equally important because you have to think. Basically, it's really good fun."

"The orienteer doesn't have to win to be satisfied," he said. "You can set your own challenge. Sometimes it may be impossible to complete the course. You are competing among people with your own skills and age. It provides fun for everybody."

Competition is divided into four color-coded categories. White is for beginners, yellow for novices, orange for advanced novices and red for the advanced level. Categories are also set up for age groups and male and female participants.

The club also offers five events in the top 10 performers in last year's rankings, including a first place finish by Lowe in the orange group.

Membership in the club is open to anyone interested. A $2 fee allows members to participate in the club activities and a subscription to the club newsletter.

An intramural orienteering meet is being sponsored by the club for Saturday to be held at the Trail of Tears State Park. Registration ends Friday for SIU students. Transportation will be provided.

van for seating. In order to follow the action, a radio was tuned to a local station. In side the van, blankets and beer were available.

Davall and his friends, referred to their seat as the "mobile grandstand." It was their second week in a row at this spot and they were first in line Saturday. They were worried about the police, but their cars were parked in front and in back of them. Davall said they weren't concerned about being towed away.

Davall said the University shouldn't have spent $1 million renovating McAndrew Stadium, but instead should have "bought a lot of vans for the students to sit on." Behind the van-sitters, on the hill built up around a concrete sewer for the new parking lot, sat sophomore Howard Kistam, a pre-law student, and his friend, Maria Harris, a sophomore in commercial graphics.

Kelman and Harris were stretched out on the hill watching the game. Kistam said, "I really like football, but I haven't made as many games since the first game which was really sickening."

Harris admitted she wasn't a fan, but she said she still likes to watch the games. Despite her lack of knowledge about football, Harris said, "I think the new stadium is real impressive. The team has to feel more for a new stadium, than the old one."

Another free spectator was sophomore Michael Carter, a sophomore in computer science. He was using the foundation as a concrete seat. Because he was so far from the action, Carter was utilizing a camera as a makeshift telescope to watch the game.

"It's more comfortable up here. You can observe the game in solitude," Carter said.

Carter said it was dissatisfaction with the SIU football team that caused him to select a free area, instead of paying for a seat.

"The coaching staff just doesn't know how to coach," Carter said. "There's a lot of talent on the team, but the coaches don't know how to use it."

Next to the fence sitting on a bicycle was freshman Dennis Farley, a general studies student, said he didn't have any money, or he would have been in the stadium.

Parley also thinks the school needs to get a good coaching staff.

Also peering through the wire fence was Mary SOMMER, a senior in interior design. "The new stands are stupid. They should have spent the money on the team and improved it," Sommer said.

As the band filed onto the northern section of the field, Storner said, "The band is the highlight of the game."
Four Terriers hurt as playoffs start

A losing season has caused some fans to get down on SIU football coach Doug Weaver, as the above sign indicates. Several fans paraded up and down the east stands with the sign towards the end of SIU's 38-27 loss to Drake Saturday afternoon. At least one person did not agree with the fans' prophecy. Injured sophomore Saluki running back Joe Hage (right) led contingency of Weaver loyalty to rip down the sign. (Staff photo by Chuck Fishman)

Not scheduled to start Wednesday is first-string quarterback Phil Waters and fullback Bob Beyer. In the same predicament are linebackers Marty Pulley and Steve Stoneburner. Waters and Beyer are suffering from knee injuries. Stoneburner injured his left knee Saturday afternoon. The starting quarterback will be Tim Hawkins and switching over from fullback to the fullback slot will be Brett Doughtery.

Replacing Pulley at middle linebacker will be freshmen Larry Joslin and Bob Blandin, who are scheduled for his position. According to Tom O'Boyle, these injuries are one of the reasons Carbondale was so unsuccessful against Mt. Vernon.

Flag football injuries about normal

By Bruce Holding
Student Writer

Intramural flag football has had its share of injuries this year but no more than past years according to Larry Schaeke, coordinator of men's intramurals.

"Flag football offers more contact than any other intramural sport," Schaeke said, "but we still try, to keep the injuries at a minimum."

"The injuries definitely concern us but there isn't a whole lot we can do without changing the entire structure of flag football."

There have been a few serious injuries reported so far this season including a broken arm, a damaged knee and a wrenched ankle. The majority of the remaining injuries have been cuts and minor dislocations. To keep injuries to a minimum without taking away from the competitiveness of the game, certain rules have been installed. No longer are there any kickoffs allowing blockers to collide at high speeds and there is no diving for the flags.

Another rule adds it illegal for a blocker to get down on all fours while blocking a rushing lineman. "Wet fields are another vital reason for injuries occurring," added Reid Montgomery, a graduate assistant who helps oversee the games.

Montgomery mentioned that most injuries happened accidentally and very seldom does a player try to inflict damage.

"The only time that happens is if two teams have a big rivalry against one another and there is a little bad blood between the two."

All players involved in intramurals are insurance covered and there is no charge to a student if he is taken by an ambulance from a game.

"At the end of the year we'll follow up on the injuries and find out the extent and see if there is anything we can do to cut down the high risk situations," Schaeke commented.

"Rules were more modified five years ago when I first came here than they are today. There was no blocking done and, like basketball, you could only shield the opposing player."

"At the beginning of the season we get from the players is there isn't enough contact allowed in flag football," Schaeke pointed out.

Two chances of meeting Illini-slim, none

By Dave Wiecterek
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

It sure was a long time ago. I had to go back so far to find the last time SIU met the University of Illinois in a basketball or football game, that I thought Uncle Sam was ready to grab me for the draft for World War I.

SIU fans might be surprised, although I doubt it, but the Salukis and the Fighting Illini have met only one time in college athletic competition, where basketball and football are concerned.

In 1935-36, SIU lost to Illinois in basketball 26-11. The two schools have never met in football.

Since that meeting, Illinois has apparently risen to new heights in the collegiate athletic world. At least, those are the pompous vibrations I have received the last few years.

When it comes to the non-revenue-producing sports, Illinois is more than willing to schedule SIU. However, when basketball and football are mentioned, the Illini come up with more excuses than a kid trying to explain a poor report card to his father.

Illinois athletic director Cecil Coleman told me in a letter that because of the format of round robin play in basketball, a format the conference will adopt for football in 1967, it is impossible for SIU to play Illinois in football.

Of course, there are monetary reasons behind that explanation. To be honest, Illinois would probably lose money if it played SIU in football, considering the status of our program now.

Arguments are strong though, for intra-state basketball. If Coleman and the rest of the Illinois people were as eager as SIU athletic director Doug Weaver, the two schools would be playing each other already.

One major problem with scheduling is that it is done so far in advance. Weaver estimated that the Big Ten is already scheduling football into the 1968 season.

Basketball is not scheduled so far in advance and, in fact, it took only a short period of time and cooperation for SIU and UCLA to get together on a basketball game.

If Illinois really wanted to play the Salukis, it could be arranged. Nothing has been done to date in that direction.

Coleman was given a very real possibility for scheduling SIU in basketball when the NCAA at its summer meeting voted to add a 27th game to their schedules. Weaver and Coleman were both at the convention when the issue was voted on.

"Within a minute after we passed the 27th game," Weaver said. "I went right over to Cecil and told him I had a perfect opponent for him—and I made him an offer. I told him we would play them there (Champaign). We would go up there and instead of him making a guarantee to us for a share of the gate, I offered to pay him to let us play them."

"Obviously, Coleman turned down the offer and asked, 'I think he hides from me now.'"

The problem of scheduling a basketball game is not so complex that the athletic directors need to call in Harry Hinkle.

"We could do it by the 27th game or as a result of a tournament," Weaver said. "We've been asked about a tournament with Illinois State, Illinois, N.C. State and maybe one it could be played in the Chicago Stadium. It would be great money-wise and also for the alumni. Everyone is talking about saving money and you can't beat that."

"We really could do it against our team, but don't hold your breath until the opening kickoff. It doesn't look like the Illini is ready or willing to cooperate.
