Pro-Noriega troops crush rebellion

U.S. denies involvement in ousting dictator

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) - Loyalty troops crushed a rebellion Tuesday by mid-level Panamanian military officers who surrendered to U.S. headquarters and demanded the retirement of military chief Gen. Manuel Noriega, military officials and state-run news media said.

Panama City television reported that pro-Noriega troops had broken the central barricades of the Panama Defense Forces amid heavy fighting and "all rebel officers have run down their weapons and surrendered." A dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed in the capital.

A smiling Noriega appeared on national television in the evening to announce the revolt had been crushed and that he had fired the Forces' chief of staff. He said he was wounded during the fighting and accused the United States of involvement.

"For weeks we had received this information that now (Americans) were going to penetrate, trying to confuse the mid-level officers," said Noriega, surrounded by about 20 military officers and government officials. He said loyalist forces now controlled the country, adding, "We will maintain this order.

Washington, a State Department official said the coup attempt apparently had failed and that the U.S. government was "now looking at consequences, trying to sort through the evidence."

The White House emphatically denied U.S. involvement in the attempt to oust Noriega, who is wanted in the United States on drug charges and whose removal the administration has sought through peaceful means.

Noriega was indicted in Miami and Tampa, Fla., in February on racketeering and cocaine conspiracy charges for allegedly turning Panama into a safe haven for Colombian drug lords. Noriega has accused the United States of seeking his removal in order to retain control over the Panama Canal.

Panamanian Defense Forces spokesman Maj. Edgard Lopez said Noriega had been arrested and the attempted putsch had been crushed by 1 p.m., and six soldiers had been wounded in the fighting. About 50 soldiers involved in the revolt had surrendered their arms and the coup leaders were being questioned.

A PDS statement late Tuesday said two of the four mid-level officers who launched the coup had been arrested.

A University student injured during an Alpha Tau Omega fraternity initiation ceremony was released from Memorial Hospital of Carbondale Monday, but an investigation of the incident is pending, the student's attorney said.

Graduate student Craig Jackson said although he hopes to get the matter settled as soon as possible, nothing had been determined as of Tuesday.

"Right now, we're just going through all the official channels. We don't have anything on the investigation as of yet," Jackson said.

Lt. Andrew Smith of the University Police said James Frei, of 20, 600 E. Campus Dr., was involved in an initiation ceremony Friday night. Frei broke the window and suffered lacerations to his right hand.

"Frei was running outside wearing a blindfold while fraternity member Michael Cababe yelled 'left and right!' to direct him," Smith said. "Cababe yelled at him to stop, but for some reason and slammed into the Sigma Kappa sorority kitchen window."

University Police Officer Phillip Saue said a finger on Frei's right hand was mangled and the bone was exposed.

Friel had no comment Tuesday, but previous statements said he was "pretty sure" he would stay with the fraternity program.

Jackson said the investigation had been hampered because Harriet Wilson-Barlow, assistant director of student development, had a pre-planned commitment this week and was not available to answer the situation.

Jackson said no charges had been filed as of Tuesday.

High Court could terminate political patronage in Illinois

By Jackie Spinnler

The U.S. Supreme Court agreed Monday to review a case between the Illinois attorney general and state workers that could terminate political patronage in Illinois.

"If the court would decide (in favor of the workers), they are going to tear up Illinois patronage and the political job will be weakened," Barbara Brown, University political science lecturer, said.

Political patronage, she said, is pledging support for a candidate and expecting to get something in return, whether it be a job or a city and community at large.

The court said it will hear an appeal by two state employees and a state job applicants who said they were denied promotion or employment by the GOP and Gov. James R. Thompson because they did not support the state Republican Party.

The suit was filed in July 1983 by Mary Lee Leasy, a Springfield Democratic attorney. She is suing

City approves money for needy youths

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council voted unanimously Tuesday to contribute money to help create sports programs and cultural clubs for youths living in public housing and challenged the rest of the community to do the same.

Mayor Jim Seid, executive director of the Jackson County Housing Authority, said in a letter to Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard that he asked the city for $5,000 to help match the funds the housing authority received from the federal department of Housing and Urban Development.

As outlined by HUD, the housing authority must match HUD's grant 100 percent with local and private funds, Seid said.

According to the housing authority, requested $5,000 as contribution from the city, the council only donated $1,000.

"I recommended that the council authorize $5,000 from the city contribution towards the local match, with the funds to be expended only if the housing authority is successful in raising the additional $4,000 needed from other individuals and groups in the community," Seid said.

Dillard said he hoped others in the community would come forward and help contribute to the project.

"(It the program) is well worth it, we can raise the money," Dillard said.

Seid said the city of Carbondale has the largest population of youths living in low-income housing in Jackson County.

"Statistics show overwhelming that public housing residents are among the very largest segments of our population targeted by illegal drug dealers in their recruitment of people who distribute and use drugs," Seid said.

Seid said the money would be put to good use since it was "the goal of the housing authority to provide alternative, constructive activities for youths living in public housing."

Seid said the success of the program depends on the support of the community.

The housing authority is not seeking funds, but advice and

Bogota struck by 8 drug-related bombings

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) - Eight bombs apparently linked to Colombia's drug war exploded in three cities Monday night and Tuesday and police said a drug trafficker captured in Ecuador last week has been moved to Bogota jail. Police said two bombs exploded in Bogota overnight and six others were reported in the coastal cities of Santa Marta and Barranquilla. No one was reported wounded in the attacks, which police blamed on cocaine cartel-financed terrorists. The bombs in Bogota - one thrown from a car and the other from a taxi - damaged a video store and several other businesses in northern Bogota.

Catastrophic insurance repeal vote delayed

The vote on the repeal was originally scheduled for the early afternoon but was delayed until today when the house became bogged down in debate on the Interior Department appropriations bill. Foley refused to predict the outcome of the catastrophic case vote but said there was "very strong" support for repeal in both parties.

High school students playing academic games

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

High school students who have the gift of quick recall and a well-rounded knowledge of all topics compete against their peers, and time, via participation in the HI-Q competition.

In its sixth year, the competition covers a spectrum of topics, from math and science to literature, arts and history.

According to Thomas Puckett, coordinator for the competition, it is geared much toward the Scholar Bowl.

The HI-Q competition matches are televised on WSIU-TV. The competition, sponsored by SRU-C, started Monday and will continue until a grand champion is named Feb. 5, 1990.

According to Puckett, the teams involved are entered on a first-come, first-served basis. In all, 32 teams will compete in the single elimination contest.

Puckett said the contest is not on a national basis yet, but efforts are being made to try and enter the winner into the national contest, held in Texas.

The contest is divided into three segments: two toss-up rounds where any team can answer the question, a rapid-fire session and a final toss-up session. For each correct answer, 10 points are awarded. During the rapid-fire session, the team with the lowest score goes first. The team's captain answers all the questions during this session, but team consultation is permitted.

"We want schools to believe in academic preparation," Marilyn Kintzau, acting dean of the College of Communication and Fine Arts and moderator of the show, said.

Chris Asplin, team captain and senior, said each team member had their own field of expertise, and the team had been practicing for about four weeks.

Uninformed students burden on Health Service

By Phil Pearson

Students who are feeling sick, but do not understand their symptoms are putting a burden on the under-staffed Health Service, July Dyer, Health Service director of communications, said.

"A common mistake is advertising for a full-time doctor and a few part-time positions. She said the practice is a combination of being under-staffed and of students thinking they have one illness when they actually have another.

"The flu is a lot like a cold, except you get muscle aches," Labyk said.

Labyk said symptoms of a cold, which last seven to 10 days, include a temperature and congestion.

Watery eyes, runny nose and sneezing without a temperature indicates an allergy, Labyk said.

Symptoms of influenza, the most serious of the three common complaints in the fall, includes all the symptoms of a cold plus feeling sure.

"The flu is a lot like a cold, except you get muscle aches," Labyk said.

Labyk said a person should see a doctor if a persistent cough lasts two or more weeks.

Dyer said persons seeking care at the Health Service should make an appointment if possible.

Emotional issue spouts second reply while POW/MIA information unverified

Once again I am compelled to respond to Professor Turley's letters on the POW/MIA issue, (Dec. 22 and Oct. 21). Evidently, Professor Turley took my letter (Nov. 27) personally and responded in kind.

This is a very personal issue with me and I do have trouble discussing this emotionally, I apologize to Professor Turley that it was not my intent to attack him personally.

I spent 21 years of my life serving in the United States Air Force helping to protect our precious freedoms and I never want to find myself attacking anyone for speaking freely or exercising any of their other rights.

Professor Turley's assumption that all POW/MIA issues are settled in Vietnam is based on the Reagan administration's finding that conclusive evidence of live American POWs in Vietnam could not be found.

Professor Turley then stated that this finding is "truth." I agree that it is "truth" but as a first hand Reagan administration.

I would ask Professor Bowman suggesting Reagan deceived the American people on this.

What I am suggesting is that there is no conclusive evidence that American POWs sightings from sources outside of the Reagan Administration, other than his own personal paranoia and lack of accuracy of the administration's findings.

I do not know how anyone can successfully dispute these reports as they originate from so many independent sources.

There is also the question as to the definition of "conclusive evidence" as was pointed out by Joseph Miller (Daily Egyptian, Sept. 27). Why would I not accept the Reagan Administration report? First, it doesn't matter which administration made the report and it is not just President Reagan that I question on this and many other matters.

Our system of government is one of checks and balances that protects for the questioning and verification of findings by separate branches. There has been no verification of the executive branch's findings from the legislative branch or any other group.

You would expect such verification on a matter of such importance. Secondly, President Bush made the following points in his recent address to the National League of Families (the official organization of POW/MIA families):

"Despite increased activities with Vietnam, many matters remain shrouded in doubt. Resolving the POW/MIA issue remains a matter of the 'highest national priority' for the Bush Administration.

"If the Reagan Administration so conclusively answered the questions, then why is the POW/MIA issue not the "highest national priority" for the Bush Administration?"

Third, it was the "administration" that kept telling the world that we had no troops in Laos or Cambodia while I was in Laos on military orders; it was the "administration" that gave us Watergate; our "administration" orchestrated the Iran-Contra affair; etc., etc.

That was the whole point of my Sept. 27 letter and the reason why I took the trouble not too write the history of the POW/MIA issue during World War II to Vietnam.

One more little detail that should enlighten this issue Sept 25 the Southern Illinoisan reported that John Sun, prime minister of Cambodia, stated that his government has discovered some remaining and is willing to hand them over.

"It was the U.S. that showed a lack of interest in our finds," said Sun Sen. "They said they had made the findings with the French government so they will not get in touch with the Phnom Penh government on this issue."

Does this suggest "highest national priority" or is there some other, higher priority for the administration. You, Professor Turley, may be willing to accept as truth the pronouncements of our administration without independent verification and you may expect your students to do the same. I did my little part in Southeast Asia and through my 21 years of service to help assure that I would do it again, with pride. But I do not owe you the "highest national. — Terry S. Bowman, Alumni Management, SMKilg (ret) USAF.

Arena scheduling acts catering to 'metal heads' or 'Hee Haw groups'; not the campus majority

I'll admit it, I slapped on my Dylan DC, fixated my six hiding the volume and tried to bang my head — it didn't work. I was led back to the strains of Mt. Tambourine Man is no more the rage.

I understand Michelle Suarez's dilemma. Being head cheese of the University I'm in the midst of a glimpse of fan reaction at concert.

It's hard to imagine the right-wing air guitar playing head-banging stockholders in the haphazard fire of rock music with lyrics more risky. But it's happening.

Suzer points out that the crowds that the Arena attracts tend to be 25 and under. This seems apparent. Many of my classmates are filled with people under 25.

It would appear, however, that they are head-bangers. Head-bangers.

Reporter way off balance in review of opera

It was with equal parts amusement and irritation that I read the review of the Third Annual Maureen Lunn Opera Theatre Association's opera recently published in your paper. It is manifestly clear to me that not only too much of you to try and find someone on your staff with at least the remotest knitting interest about opera to send a reporter, but not only do not know, but have no idea how to write a review if opera.

"It was evident from the first paragraph that your reporter was woefully out of place. His apparent surprise that "most of the scenes were performed in a foreign language" indicts these statements.

"I am no expert on opera; but I do know that I am ignorant enough that I could not hope to write a credible review of a performance, at least not without a considerable amount of research beforehand.

"I am also knowledgeable enough to know that a performer singing in aria from Carmen would not appreciate having her performance likened to the music video 'Material Girl' by Madonna.

"I'm sure that your reviewer was woefully out of place. It is hard to believe complimentary. But no matter how well meant, I'm sure that the comparison caused nothing but anguish to Luanne Goodson, who, after all, worked hard to make the opera "official" opera, not rock music.

"The opera is as well as answer a question about Orson Welles' "performance" in "The Magic Garden of standout E.公式" by saying, "I never saw it, but I thought he was great in the wine scene.""

Working at the Daily Egyptian is supposed to be a learning experience. I hope the reviewer and his editors have learned something from this fiancé of Gary K. Shepherd, Carbondale.

"I'll admit it, I slapped on my Dylan DC, fixated my six hiding the volume and tried to bang my head — it didn't work. I was led back to the strains of Mt. Tambourine Man is no more the rage.

Model airplane club arranges first annual jet competition

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

Two area model airplane enthusiasts will put their model jets against other enthusiasts’ jets in a competition for greatest speeds at the first annual Superman Jet Fly Oct. 7 at SIU's Student Center.

Metropolis resident Jerry Caudle, along with the contest director, Cartherville resident Lynn Elston and others will pilot their radio-controlled jets from the ground.

Jim Young, public relations official for the event, said the festivities, sponsored by the Paducah Area Modelers Club, will begin at 9 a.m. at the Metropolis Airport. There is no admission charge.

“We are encourage[d] to bring a lawn chair and they can purchase refreshments at the contest,” Young said.

“We have entries from nine or 10 states, from Canada to Texas. Some of the best pilots in the world will be here,” he said.

Caudle said around 33 people had pre-entered the event, but he expects 50 pilots and 70 to 100 planes to be participating in the competition.

“Two of the models in town are already full with people here for this weekend,” Young said.

“We will have a speed trap set up. The radar will be recording speeds of over 200 miles per hour,” he said. “We are hoping to break the old round-trip speed record of 191 miles per hour this weekend and we will have the equipment to make the new record official.”

Caudle said pilots have attained speeds of over 200 miles per hour in one direction, but no one has done it officially on a round trip.

“It is much easier to go one way than the other way because of headwinds’ effect on those small aircraft,” Caudle said.

Caudle said the jets are six to eight feet long, with wingspans of four to five feet.

“Although it’s almost impossible to tell the difference, these are not true jets. They are the ducted fan engines—a gasoline powered engine which runs a propeller inside the craft,” Caudle said. “The propeller blow fans out the rear of the craft, which gives an appearance of a jet stream.”

Caudle said although many of the models are exact replicas of real jets, some of the crafts entered in the event are sport jets.

Prehistoric importance will be focus of lecture

Recipient of the 1989 Oceanic Society Award George J. Gunnarson will address the issue of potential importance of prehistoric change today in the University Museum Auditorium in Fisher Hall.

The lecture entitled “Prehistoric People in a Changing Environment: Some Lessons for SUI?” will begin at 4 p.m. with a reception following at 5 p.m.

Gunnarson said he will begin with a focus on the prehistoric Pueblo Indians of the Southwest.

Research findings concerning with the successful adoption to both physical and social changes spanning over two thousand years will show how the methods incorporated by these people can serve as a role model, he said.

This basic concept of successful change will then be applied to the SUI environment, he said.

Gunnarson said this is an issue he feels is in need of attention for both practical and social reasons.

“Change, however, is something that is not easily accepted,” he said.

“Change is an existing structure that needs to be taken into account,” Gunnarson said.

University Police reported a student was arrested and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol shortly after midnight Tuesday.

NORML hopes to apply for RSO status by end of week

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

The SIU-C chapter of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws has taken another step toward becoming a registered student organization by recruiting Mary Lamb, English department faculty member, as their adviser.

"My name was suggested to NORML, maybe because of my association with the Student Environmental Center and Mid-America Peace Project. There are overlapping members in these groups," Lamb said.

"Being NORML's faculty adviser doesn't mean that I agree with their position," Lamb said. "However, I think it's important for the campus to have representatives of unpopular viewpoints."

Lamb said her purpose as faculty adviser was to allow NORML to have a forum. "Faculty advisers allow the existence of the group. I'm not their watchdog," Lamb said.

According to the regulations for becoming an RSO, the organization must have a tenured faculty adviser, which Lamb is.

"Getting a tenured, full professor faculty adviser was the part of becoming an RSO that held us up," Kristen Bonde, NORML president, said.

If NORML achieves RSO status, the organization will be able to use Student Center rooms for meetings and use other rentable University property, such as seats.

According to the regulations for becoming an RSO, NORML must have at least 10 signatures of members and elected officers. At NORML's meeting three weeks ago, members approved a constitution and elected officers.

Bonde said NORML hopes to be filing for RSO status by the end of the week so that they have the required adviser, officers, signatures and constitution.

"All we have left to do is type up an official copy of our constitution," Bonde said.

This would not be the first chapter of NORML in SIU-C's history. NORML was an RSO at the University from 1974 to 1977, Debbie Walton, assistant director for student developments, said.

City awards development contract

By Lisa Miller

The Carbondale City Council voted Tuesday to hire a consulting firm to implement the city's downtown development plan.

The firm of Reig, Waggoner, Sumner and Cannon was selected by city officials to develop a Downtown Development Plan.

The plan will examine land use, public parking, economic activities, public facilities, traffic patterns, financing and other community involvement in the downtown Carbondale area.

The cost of the firm is $60,000, an amount that exceeds the appropriated funds by $10,000, Steve Hoffner, city manager, said.

"The additional $10,000 necessary for the contract is available from the increased revenue the city will receive from the state income tax," Hoffner said.

A total of $9,500 was deleted from the consultant's original contract proposal because a historical building survey was not needed in the plan, Hoffner said.

"A historical building survey would have duplicated the information which is being prepared by Upown Inc. through a contract with the city," Hoffner said.

Edward P. Womack, director of planning for the firm, said he was very enthusiastic about working with the city.

By Doug Toole

Staff Writer

A new photo exhibit is on display in the Alternative Space Gallery in the Communications Building. "Two Women" features the work of Jennifer Keller and Karen Donaldson through October 12. Keller describes her work as a statement about monetary gain in today's society and its downsides. Donaldson said her work combines pictures to show the differences between make-up and reality.

Keller, a senior in photography, said she has received a lot of positive feedback about her display. People have told her they liked the dark, edgy mood and the use of pearls to represent money. She said a professor tried to recruit her into the cinema department because he was impressed by her styling.

"I think this is one of my stronger works," Keller said.

Donaldson, a junior in photography, said her piece required a lot of work and that she didn't consider it completed. There is a theme, but she said the mood of the project is light enough that it comes across as a fun piece of work.

Donaldson said the project started as a comparison of people's facial expressions and gradually turned into a look at what society insists is the "right" look and how people try to attain it. She said she used magazine clippings to create collage backgrounds to prove her point.

Although most of the reactions from people who have seen it have been positive, Donaldson said the w. s. had to receive feedback on the piece from more people. Dick artists admitted they would like to sit interchangeably next to the piece and handout people while they talk about the photo exhibit.

The Alternative Space Gallery is sponsored by Photogenesis, a University photography club, and provides students with an opportunity to display their work to the public. The gallery is located next to the Cinema and Photography department in the Communications Building.

Guerrillas attack Cambodian posts

Government troops seek to bring down pro-Hanoi regime

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Western-backed guerrillas attacked government positions in western Cambodia Tuesday in increased efforts to topple the pro-Hanoi government since Vietnam pulled its troops out last month.

Military sources at the Thai-Cambodian border said the resistance wastightening the noose around: the remnants of the Vietnamese-installed government in the western provinces.

The sources said more than 1,000 guerrillas had surrounded the garrisons at the border town of Poipet and the nearby supply depot at Nimit.

Thai officials said two Thai border guards south of Poipet were wounded in the barrage which partly fell into Thai territory.

"There has been more fighting at Poipet as the resistance resurges the Phnom Penh troops and policy of surrender," one source said.

He said the government troops fired on the guerrillas near Poipet, launching along with mortars in an effort to break the ring of resistance around Poipet.

Thai officials said two Thai border guards south of Poipet were wounded in a battle which partly fell into Thai territory.

Resistance radio said their forces destroyed a Soviet-built tank in the fighting at Poipet and repeated accusations that Vietnam has not pulled its troops out of Cambodia as promised.

"Vietnam has dispatched its troops — special forces from Phnom Penh and Kompong Cham (in eastern Cambodia) — to reinforce (President) Heung Samrin troops in Poipet," the radio said.

The radio charged that Vietnamese troops disguised as Cambodian government soldiers had been detected at the towns of Svey Chok and Kandal, northeast of Nimit, which were also surrounded by the resistance.

Earlier Tuesday, a Thai foreign ministry spokesman said five people had been captured wearing Phnom Penh government uniforms.

The spokesman declined to say where or how the soldiers were captured, but an intelligence officer said they were captured inside Cambodia by the resistance.

Vietnam has said that the last of its forces withdrew from Cambodia last week, but the resistance has repeatedly charged that thousands of Vietnamese are remaining behind disguised as civilians or as Cambodian soldiers.

Also Tuesday, the Klmer Rouge, the only communist group in the three-party resistance coalition, began claiming part of the credit for the successful resistance attacks that began on Saturday.

A Western diplomat said U.S. aid to the two non-communistist groups could be endangered if it is discovered that they were carrying out joint military actions with the Klmer Rouge, which is blamed for the deaths of more than 1 million people during their brutal rule in the 1970s.

The United States has given the non-communist groups about $5 million in "non-lethal" aid this year.

Communists in Poland could revolt

WARSZAWA, Poland (UPI) — The Communist Party of Poland warned Tuesday that the nation may revolt against the new Solidarity-led government of Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki unless there is a halt to price increases.

In another development, Politburo member Leszek Miller, in an address to a plenary meeting of the party’s 200 members of the Central Committee, said the United Workers (Communist) Party has decided to change its name.

Miller said the party polled it (a million) whether, to change its name, and that 72 percent of the respondents voted in favor of "the transformation of the name into a new party with a new program and status."

Formed in 1948, the Polish Communist Party led the nation from one economic crisis into another until the new government took over this year. The economic situation in the country has verged on catastrophe. Prices of some Thai commodities have grown 1,500 percent since August and new increases are expected to be announced soon.

Under pressure from the people and Solidarity, the Communists agreed to give up its leading role, an Esperian event in the East Bloc, since the end of last year. Mazowiecki formed a new 19-member cabinet at the beginning of this month, with only four Communist Party members as ministers.

Reformist, conservative members of Hungarian party could clash

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UPI) — The reformist party cannot survive its extraordinary congress if a growing pluralism of reform communists has its way at the crucial session that begins Friday.

A clash between the conservative faction of the party and its reformist members is inevitable at the congress, which was scheduled for Oct. 6 under pressure by reform-minded members who want to resist the party’s current policy.

"The conservatives cannot stay with us," State Minister Imre Ponzio, the leader of the reformist faction, said flatly.

Ponzio is president of the New Democratic Hungarian Movement, founded two weeks ago as a loose organization to promote the idea of a fairer, greater party.

Its goals are echoed by the "Rinventi Utgaz" and "Unite" groups within the party, established Monday, which also foresees a fight for the party’s future.

The dictatorial socialism which has ruled for 40 years in Poland has come to a dead end," the Reform Union said in a statement. "Democratic concentration, the legal and political party may be replaced by an authentic leadership and individuals who accept this and are politically and morally authentic."
Production gives audience inside look at actors’ work

Cast hopes to use rehearsal tapes to document findings

By Carrie Pomeroy
Entertainment Editor

The Caliper Stage production “From Out of Me We Speak,” directed by Kon Pelas, is like an actor’s notebook brought to life. The production lets audience members observe how five actors and actresses create dramatic characters, then lets them see how the work pays off in live performances.

The play will be performed Oct. 5 through 7 at 7 p.m. at the Caliper Stage on the second floor of the Communications Building. Tickets are $3 and are available in the speech communications office, Room 2002 of the Communications Building and at the door the night of the performance. Pelas said the purpose of the play is to examine the academic premise that acting is a way of learning about one’s self, one’s consciousness and others.

He said the cast eventually hopes to use rehearsal tapes, production notes and performance experiences to “write up some of the things we find for scholarly journals.” The production had its own ethnographer, speech communications student Scott Ollard, who documented its creation.

Pelas said the script, which consists of 10 pieces taken from plays and literature as well as original monologues written by cast members, was “ultimately collaborative.”

Cast members were not selected by traditional open try-outs, Pelas said. He noted that this would be a challenging piece, Pelas said he circulated the idea among speech communications graduate students to gauge interest in the project.

Performers Anita Rich, Amy Bert, Gayle Maldonado and Bill Kiefer, all speech communicators, and Sophomore Mark Koplis, definitely rise to the challenge. The cast members exploit the full potential of the production’s experimental form, revealing themselves and their characters in intimate detail. Coveting in the production, the audience together, set the performers are like children set free in an intellectual playground.

Although each of the 10 pieces has moments of brilliance and excitement, some are more consistently effective than others. Among the best pieces is Rich’s performance of “Bug House,” a monologue adapted from the diary of a insane woman.

Rich’s “This is the real thing, Mr. Shakespeare” while wearing finger paint on her face, is chillingly realistic and reminiscent of a character. Rich washes the paint off her face while analyzing her approach to the character. “I created this character for me. I’m not sure how well I created it for you, but I didn’t seem to be my main concern.”

Other effective pieces include Koplis’s recitation of the Mona Lisa poem “What the Motorcycle Said” with infectious energy and an obvious love of language.

The production demonstrated how actors and actresses bridge the gap between themselves and their characters in many ways. But made a comic scene about rape extremely funny, but occasionally steps out of the scene and advertise “half of the piece pieces of rape isn’t very funny at all.”

“From Out of Me We Speak” is an excellent opportunity to watch creation in action. It is a production that takes big chances with theater conventions and succeeds in almost every way.

‘Other voices’ photo lecture series

high lights work by various artists

By Katherine Lydon
Sports Writer

“Other Voices in Photography,” a free public lecture series, will begin at 7:30 tonight at the Union, Student Center in Facer Hall.

The series presents three artists throughout the month of March. Tonight’s featured artist is Chicago-American Rebecca Louie, who has a personal desire to resolve what it is to be both American and Chinese, Jamaica, coordinator of the series, said.

Louie, father of Chicago American over half a century in search of a new life. The life that he father left behind is who intrigues Louie. He returns to China every year question for an understanding of his.

Roddy said Louise, who is a photograpy instructor at the San Francisco Art Institute, should have some interesting photos.

“His work is important because so many people tend to think that everybody belongs to a main- stream, nuclear family. This just isn’t true,” Roddy said.

Carrie May Weena, professor at Hampshire College, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 11.

Weena is a black woman who explores how stereotypes black. She said her work “taps right at the core of these ugly little prevailing attitudes.”

Roddy said Weena uses images like family snapshots with story telling,” such as a black man holding a watermelon and a black woman holding a chicken leg.

The last artist featured this month in Alberta Malagrinho, who will present her work at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 18. Malagrinho is a visiting artist at the University of Illinois at Champagne-Urbana and the Art Institute of Chicago.

Malagrinho studied literature at the University of Buenos Aires in 1974 where multiple overwhelmed the government.

“Her work deals much with memory. It is abstract and emotional social large, heavily scratched and manipulated,” Roddy said.

Malagrinho said her work is “out of range pressure, some sort of tension that is clear not even to me.”

“In depicting the world that is mine, therefore, I am also depicting the society I am living in.”

Roddy said she chose artists who fit into the category of “other,” which included people from ethnic, gender and sexual preference groups.

Children address Congress on issues facing the youths

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Children from across the country had a rare chance to tell Congress Tuesday what was on their minds, saying budget priorities should stress education over defense and sex and drugs should begin in grade school.

Several witnesses under age 17 testified at a joint hearing of the House Children, Youth and Families and the House Budget Committee Task Force on Human Resources. Tuesday was designated "Children's Day" under legislation sponsored by Rep. Joseph Kennedy, D-Mass.

"If all 435 members of the House could have heard their testimony, we could easily pass legislation to deal effectively with their problems," Kennedy said after the three-hour hearing.

Traci Meiler of Fort Edward, N.Y., told the lawmakers, "Education is lacking in this country. How can our budget for education be lower than for defense? We have to change things now, not 10 years from now."

Krista Silva of the Bronx, N.Y., who noted she had a son before she was a teen, said sex education "really needs to be taught earlier" and she wished she had received it in grade school. She also suggested more day care funds could help young parents finish high school.

Frieda Dyson of Harrisburg, Pa., said kids have "gotten too far" when schools need to post signs indicating they are drug-free zones.

Dealing with young people's stress and constant pressures also needs to be more effectively addressed, Dr. Charles Schooler of Lawrenceville, N.J.

Kennedy released a National Children's Day "Report Card," showing an increase in rates of mumps, measles and pertussis (whooping cough), which can be fought with immunizations.

Judge rules for actor Hurt in court battle

NEW YORK (UPI) — Oscar-winning actor William Hurt and his ex-wife Sandra Jennings, former partners in a romantic relationship, Monday won a battle at the New York Supreme Court over marriage, a judge ruled Monday, saying witnesses presented questions as to who owned what.

"I am thankful for the ruling received today, which is a vindication of everything I have said," said Hurt, in a written statement distributed by his publicist.

Hurt, 39, said he took on the court battle, rather than trying to reach a settlement, because "I simply could not continue to give in to the pressure that has been constantly put on me for more and more money and other accommodations from Sandra Jennings and others."

Jennings’ flamboyant lawyer, Richard Golub, accused the judge of becoming "sun-struck" and smitten with Hurt during a sensational six-day trial in June.

"I am an instant celebrity because of widespread television coverage of the trial, featuring testimony from Hurt and his former wife, actress Mary Beth Hurt."

"Any judge is entitled to fall in love with any witness. She was star-struck and impressed by William Hurt," said an angry Golub to reporters. "The decision is legal embarrassment for the judge. This is a perfect case for appeal."

Hurt won an Oscar in 1986 for his performance in "Kiss of the Spider Woman." He was nominated an additional time in 1987 for his role as a teacher of the deaf in "Children of a Lesser God," and in 1984 for playing TV anchorman-tunk Tom Grumich in James Brooks' "Broadcast News."

Hurt and Jennings were married and considered one of Hollywood’s outsiders, Hurt going on to star in the 1980s for his work in the movies "Body Heat" and "Altered States," and Jennings to star in a drug-fueled dropout in "The Big Chill."

Hurt is now in an off-Broadway play, "Beside Herself." Previews at the Circle in the Square in New York begin Wednesday.

Silberman’s long-awaited decision on long-term court battle that made public the couple’s private pain and acrimony. In a sensational trial last spring, Jennings’ attorneys portrayed Hurt as a drunkard with cancer.

Jennings, 32, sought to prove she and Hurt had a common-law marriage under South Carolina law.
To Pete & John

There was a group of strangers, who met Saturday, taxied down a runway & got their drinks the fun-way!

We said bye-bye Miss American Pie, broke in a light fixture, & got real courageous more than one time!

A barrette was lost in such a macho way, & our new letters are so cool; will the hangover ever go away?

The night was a blast, wish it could have forever last, Can we do it again?

Just remember, M-n-M’s make friends!

Mets tell Hernandez, Carter they won't be needed in '90

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gary Carter and Keith Hernandez, former symbols of the New York Mets' championship teams of the 1980s, were told by management that they are no longer needed.

"They called Carter and Hernandez to inform them that the team was looking to trade them," Carter's agent, Steve Carroll, told the Associated Press.

Carter and Hernandez were injured most of the season. Carter missed nearly the entire season with a broken leg and Hernandez missed 183 games with 2 broken hands and a broken leg. At bat, Carter fractured a kneecap in May and his .233 with 4 home runs and 19 RBIs in 72 games.

One option the Mets had was to re-sign both players at a 20 percent reduction in salary from the 1986 salary. Carter made nearly $2.2 million this season and Hernandez $2 million.

Acquired in a trade from Houston in November 1984 for infielder Ruben Herrera, outfielder Herm Winningham, pitcher Floyd Owenby, outfielders Cousens and pitcher Mike Fitzgerald, Carter drove in more than 100 runs in each of his first two seasons with New York and was called the key ingredient that brought the Mets their 1986 championship.

"I had a great 5-6 years here," he said. "I came here with a mis­trust and made a young pitching staff and to win a world champi­onship and we accomplished that. In this time here, we had three ac­counts, two firsts and one world championship.

Hernandez, obtained in a trade from St. Louis in June 1983 for pitchers Neil Allen and Davey Owenby, provided much needed leadership to a young team begin­ning in 1986. He batted more than .300 in each of his first three seasons with the Mets and was a Gold Glove 11 years in a row, including six with the Mets.

"There is someone to step forward. I was sad when I came here and didn't play. I spent an equal amount of my time in St. Louis, but I can honestly say I'll always be a New York Met."

Carter's option, he said, be definitely will play somewhere next year. Hernandez said he has productive baseball left, but he will consider his future over the next month.

"Keith came up in the middle of the 1983 season and turned the Mets around through his leader­ship," Carter said. "I've often said we had a body of great players that had big bodies and was together, Gary Carter came to us a year and a half later and many have left us over the top. And I just would not dispute. He gave us class and dignity."

Other Mets executives said the Mets have decided on Manager Davey Johnson's future. However, before disclosing their plans, Cashen said he wanted to contact Johnson, who is believed on a Florida fishing trip.

Johnson, who has been with Cashen and Joe McMillan, vice president of baseball operations, last week and came away believing he would not be retained. However, most of the players have said they want him.

"He has two years left on his contract and he is not saying anything until I tell him different," Cashen said.

Memorabilia dealers questioned in FBI, IRS Pete Rose investigation

CINCINNATI — Internal Revenue Service and FBI agents are questioning baseball memorabilia dealers about a federal grand jury inquiry to determine whether Pete Rose evaded income tax evasion and unreported income.

"The IRS did talk to me," said Soto, who operates CEI Sports in Cincinnati. "They wanted to know how much business I had done with Pete. They wanted anything involving Pete Rose."

A report of special investigator John Dowd for Major League Baseball on Rose's tax evasion and use of memorabilia shows for business purposes was turned over to the IRS.

Perkins, who owns a bowling and a sandwich shop in Florence, Ky., said the FBI wanted to see a $5,000 check he gave Rose in return for his card autograph in 1987 in Nashville.

"I talked to the FBI, and I talked to Dowd's people," Perkins said. The federal grand jury began investigating Rose in late April. The grand jury, in addition to investigating the memorabilia deals, is probing possible tax viola­tions concerning Rose's gamb­ling in Florence. A former Rose friend, Jim Sotto, told the FBI that he was a player against Rose."

Paul Janzen, has told federal investigators that Rose owned three-quarters of a winning $47,046 Pick-Six ticket at Turfway Park, Kentucky.

"I'm not going to say Gary and me," he said. "I spent an equal amount of my time in St. Louis, but I can honestly say I'll always be a New York Met."

Ex-champ Graziano hospitalized

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former middleweight boxing champion Rocky Graziano was being treated at a New Jersey hospital Sunday for an undisclosed ailment that his family said Tuesday could be Alzheimer's disease.

Longo Hill Hospital spokesman Kevin Soto, however, would not give details of the 68-year-old Graziano's condition.

"He called me and requested that we release no information," Spencer said.

The former prizefighter's daugh­ter, Audrey Weissman, however, told the Daily News that Graziano suffered a mental and physical collapse that has fam­i­ly concerned that he may be suffering from Alzheimer's disease.

Spencer, who was married Sunday at the apartment she shares with his wife, Nona, and was taken to Longo Hill Hospital after what she described as a "total col­lapse, physically and mentally."...

"It doesn't look good," she told the News.

Nona, well down, he couldn't speak and wasn't responding to anyone. I don't want to talk about Alzheimer's, because I don't want to put a name on it until the doctor tells me," she told the newspaper.

Alzheimer's disease is a degen­erative brain disorder that afflicts about 2.5 million Americans. Symptoms usually begin with diffi­culties remembering simple and victims regress to an infantile­like state, needing round-the-clock atten­tion. The cause of Alzheimer's is unknown, and there is no cure.

Graziano, a veteran of 83 profes­sional bouts, was born Rocco Graziano in 1918 and grew up in a poverty­stricken ghetto kid on the tough streets of Manhattan's Lower East Side. He spent a major part of his early life in confinement.
Walton, Smith, other rookies helped Cubs win East crown

By Joan Ryan
San Francisco Examiner

The biggest difference between the Chicago Cubs' 1984 playoff team and this one might best be illustrated by a tale of the same old windy City.

When the team put together a golf double on one morning, every player participated except two. Andreas Johnsen didn't play because he dislikes golf, and pitcher Rick Sutcliffe couldn't play because he likes it. So back to the course they went to a morning practice of the same old routine.

"This team enjoys each other," Sutcliffe said. "We do a lot of things together. We have someone to talk to all the time."

Why the change? A group of rookies who has allowed the veterans to see baseball through fresh eyes again. The Cubs' five rookies on their playoff roster, including a starting pitcher, both catchers and two starting outfielders, have added a lot of fun to the Cubs this year. They ask a lot of dumb questions, but they've helped Cubs win the East crown.

Walton, Smith, other rookies are a throwout team. Walton, 21, returned in June. Smith, hitting .224, now plays in left field with Lloyd McClendon. In his last 23 games, he has batted .449.

"They're always trying to make the opening-day catcher when Damon Berryhill began the season on the disabled list with a shoulder injury," Girardi said. "After Berryhill went out for the season with a torn rotator cuff, Girardi and fellow rookie Wrona pleased at catcher the rest of the year."

-Rick Wrona: One of the biggest surprises of spring, Wrona had spent less than a year in Triple A, yet broke camp with the Cubs and didn't look out of place. After Berryhill came off the disabled list, he was sent back to the minors but was recalled in late August. He is batting .281 and hit his first home run in the final game of the season with a pinch hit."

-Steve Wilson: Another big surprise of spring. Wilson had been almost a throwaway part of the offseason trade that sent outfielder Rafael Palmeiro and pitchers Don Hall and Jamie Moyer to Texas for pitchers Mitch Williams, Paul Kilgus and Wilson and infielder Curt Wilkerson.

Wilson, like Walton, made the club (in its fifth game) in the spring despite spending last season in Double A. He is 6-4 with a 4.20 ERA and two saves.

"I really believe that this team was carried early in the year by attitude," Sutcliffe said. "You'd look at the [newspaper] before a game and wonder sometimes how we were going to win.

"But so matter what happened, no one ever pointed a finger. The only thing this club ever did was pick each other up. I think a lot of it is that these young players are not only good players, they've got good people.""

Golf and sophomores Deborah Minner and Anne Childress, were exempt from the golf party the week to determine who would make the trip to Columbus.

Sophomore Mark Geacene will play in the two previous tournaments but was edged out by senior Julie Shumaker and sophomore Gina Giaccone, who round out the top five.

Daugherty said the team will travel to Columbus early and will have a practice Friday. They return and will try to improve on the scores they posted two years ago. They tied 243 and 245 at the Ohio Open.

Daugherty said she would like to see the team finish in the top five in the fall and in the top 10 in their two tournaments this fall.

There's a lot of good competition in the league, Shumaker said. "There would be no love to finish in the top five. That's a real lofty goal, but it's not out of our grasp." We've done well in the last tournaments.

Daugherty again will look for the seniors to step forward and provide the leadership as they have given in previous tournaments.

"Julie was conference champion her sophomore year," Daugherty said. "She is hopefully back on track after a less than successful junior year. She had a great score on the last day of qualifying. She's been playing a lot and working hard. We're expecting good things from her."
Cubs, Giants fans recall 1908 monotonous blunder

By Dwight Chapman Sports Editor

If it weren't for Fred Merkle, baseball's all-time "goat," this year's playoffs would be the first time since 1908 the Chicago Cubs have ever played for a National League pennant.

But, 81 years ago, Fred Merkle made the mistake he was never able to forget. His gaffe cost the New York Giants a spot in the World Series.

Mercedes was a 19-year-old reserve first baseman in 1908, just a handful of games into a 16-year major league career that was exemplar in every way, except for the one in which he was permitted to throw out a runner or hit a home run.

It happened on Sept. 23, 1908, at the Polo Grounds, with the Giants only three games behind the Chicago Cubs in the World Series standings.

They had won the first two games of a three-game series, and the third game was tied, 1-1, in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Mose McCormick was on third and Merkle on first base when Al Bridwell swung and missed, and Merkle, who had been sitting in almost his underwear, reached up and snatched the ball from Bridwell's hand and fired it into the right field.

Cubs second baseman Johnny Evers, a former star of baseball's technicalities, got that ball — or another one, perhaps from plate umpire Hank O'Day — shoveled through the crowd, touched second and demanded that Eddye call Merkle out on a force play, thus denying McCormick's run from scoring.

Evers refused, saying that in the beckoned he had never seen Merkle touch second.

"No decision was made," McGraw said, "and we expected none. Frankly, nobody paid much attention to the squeaky, because the rule involved (if a batter makes a third out without reaching first base or forces a runner, no runners can score) was a new one and we carried no weight. We've even joked in the clubhouse about Evers' effort to put one over, and that ended it."

"But that didn't end it. Evers had taken his case to O'Day, who ruled Merkle was out. If so, that should have sent the game to a 10th inning, but in a report he wrote several hours later to National League president Harry Pulliam, O'Day said that since he hadn't asked to have the field clarified, it was too dark to complete play.

Eversbonus bowed, but Pulliam didn't overrule O'Day. The game ended in a 1-1 tie. The Giants, who were on the verge of a series in the tie with the Cubs, lost a playoff to Chicago.

Mercedes' mistake is one of New York's fans refer to as "The Goat." The other is the "Great Chicago Fire."

Mercedes himself has even written a book, "Merkle's Error in Baseball History, Nearly or fairly, was unmitigated."

Merkle wept in the clubhouse, and McGraw, who went through the dugout and fired it into the right field.

"Get rid of me," Merkle said, "I don't deserve to play on the Giants."}

McGraw didn't get rid of Merkle. Instead, he raised the youngster's salary $500 and started to help rebuild his shattered confidence.

Merkle didn't lack mental acuity. He was the league's best hitter and was one of the Giants' best pitchers, and, in time, became a lightning rod for the press as he talked his way out of the knowhow.

For years, however, unrelenting fans would shout "Bonehead!" and "Don't forget to thank you!" every time Merkle came to bat. Merkle even wound up in some dictionaries of the time as a verb: "to Moke. To fail to arrive."

His teammates knew what he went through. Decades later, Bridwell said he wished he never made that error that key single.

"I wish I'd struck out instead," he said.

The Huskies are led by junior quarterback Stacey Robinson who has rushed for 467 net yards on 81 carries in four games. The 6-foot, 192-pound quarterback also leads the nation with 10 touchdowns as the team’s starting back.

The Huskies are 3-1 this season and are headed to Columbus, Ohio, September 29, for the Ohio State University Tournament. It will be the first time the Huskies have played in the tournament.

The overall balance of the wishbone offense is what makes it so effective. A balanced attack with a solid running game and a good passing game will make even the best defenses struggle.

The Huskies will take on the Big Ten as well as other top schools.
