FORUM DEBATING CLUB WINS SPRING DEBATE BY DEFEATING ILLINAE

The annual spring debates were won by the Forum, the boys' debating club. The question for debate was, "Resolved, That armed intervention in Haiti should cease." The debates were held last Monday evening in the society halls before large and appreciative audiences. The winners were Dr. Guy Neill and Mr. John S. Riek at negative and Fred Shappard and Ralph Ward on the affirmative. Venice Bink and Rachel Perry were alternates.

The fact that the boys won does not mean that they had little opposition. The girls were certainly worthy opponents, and Dr. William H. Casa- bergue of Margaret Wood, I. F. Wells, Bernice Myers, and Fern Haney, with Margaret Armer and Marie Lim on the affirmative side, put up a splendid fight and according to the judges there was little difference between the two teams.

There were seven judges for the debate, Capt. Wm. McKendree, Mr. W. Phelan, Mr. Dr. Purdy, Mr. Young, Mr. Mason, Mr. Dills Hall, and Miss Smith. Seven judges were chosen to preside at the five of the seven judges voted for the Forum.

The debate was one of the most memorable in the history of the Forum. The participants had made a thorough study of the question. It would be difficult to enumerate the important arguments presented in the debate, and the teams were well organized and prepared for the debate.

JAMES STORMENT

James Storment, Junior next year, will be the business manager of the Egyptian next year. During the latter part of the school year Mr. Storment has acted as advertising manager of the Egyptian, having done his work in a very meritorious manner.

Miss Crawford has had much experience with the publishing of year books and the Obelisk is fortunate in having one so efficient as its sponsor.

The Egyptian, too, is fortunate in having available on the faculty at least as well qualified as Dr. Beyer to take Miss Crawford's place.

Dr. Beyer is the editor of the Journalist. He is a member of the journalistic fraternity, Pi Delta Epsilon, and has had complete experience with high school and collegiate publications.

Dean Wham to Address Division of I. S. T. A.

Dean Wham stands among the first of those lecturers in Illinois who are called in to address groups of teachers and divisions of the State Associations. On April 28 he will deliver two addresses at the meeting of the Lake Shore division of the Illinois State Teachers' Association meeting at Cicero. One address will be on the general assembly and the other on sectional meeting of high school teachers.

This division of the Association consists of the South Side, Loop, and systematized schools in the state, in fact in the country. It includes the suburbs along the lakeshore: Du Page, Cook (including Chicago) and Lake Counties.

Egyptian Changes Management Today

At a recent meeting of the Student Council the following officials were elected to have charge of the Egyptian for the coming year:

Orville Alexander, Editor-in-Chief.
James Storment, Business Manager.
Miss Barbour, Features.
Miss Power, Editoral Critic.
Miss Baker, Alumni Critic.
Dr. Abbott, Financial Adviser.

The new administration of the Council by Royse Bryant, the present Editor-in-Chief, and the Council honored his choice by accepting it in full.

It has been customary for the last two years for the new officials to take charge during the last six weeks of the Spring term so that they may have the aid of the outgoing members. A complete change in the staff will not be made until next year, how- ever. Staff members are chosen by the new Editor-in-Chief and Business Manager.

Readers will note that the only change made in faculty advisers is that Dr. Beyer replaces Miss Crawford.

Orville Crawford becomes faculty adviser for the Obelisk in place of Miss White.

Miss Crawford has had much experience with the publishing of year books and the Obelisk is fortunate in having one so efficient as its sponsor.

The Egyptian, too, is fortunate in having available on the faculty at least as well qualified as Dr. Beyer to take Miss Crawford's place.

Dr. Beyer is the editor of the Journalist. He is a member of the journalistic fraternity, Pi Delta Epsilon, and has had complete experience with high school and collegiate publications.

Orville Alexander to Edit Egyptian

Orville Alexander, next year's Senior, will edit the Egyptian. Mr. Alexander is a man of very unusual scholastic ability, having for his rec- ord here a 4.93 average. During his high school at Marion he was active in extra-curricular work, being business manager of the school paper, The Marion Blues, and business manager of the year book, Memory Kit. In addition to this he was a member of the school quartette, a soloist in the intellectual meets, and for three years a member of the Marion High School debating team. He graduated from the Marion High School in 1927 with twenty-one credits, after having taken part in the class play every year in High School, and taking the leading role in a school opera.

In college Mr. Alexander has continued his distinguished work. He is a member of the Brotok Literary Society—president during the Fall term this year—a member of the Middow Club, twice in the Societe Spring plays, and this year an associ- ate editor of the Egyptian. He is also a member of Sigma Alpha Pi.

The Egyptian staff extends to Mr. Alexander its heartiest congratulations and good wishes.

Dr. Holt read his doctoral thesis, "HALL GIRLS CELEBRATE EASTER WITH PARTY

Anthony Hall celebrated the Easter session with a dinner and party Thursday evening, April 17. The living room and dining room were de- corated with bunnies, nests, and eggs. Georgia McCormick won the first con- tent, a jelly bean hunt. Ruth Ree- nell was the winner of an identification contest. Both girls received prizes. Af- ter the dinner and dance the party continued until Ruby Herrington, as chief hostess, proclaimed in a clever game, "Let us Eat." Girls living on the lower corridor were hostesses at this party.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS JOURNAL
The Community Chorus to Give Golden Legend

The Community Chorus of Carbondale is a new organization in the city. The chorus was organized for the purpose of furthering the interest in singing among the people of the community.

The impetus for the organization of the chorus came from the music department of the Woman's Club and the fact that Mr. Mcintosh was asked to direct the musical work of a group.

The chorus is open to anyone who will become a regular attendant at the meetings of the chorus. The meetings are held regularly on Tuesday evening at 7:15 to 8:15 in the basement of the public library.

The chorus is giving the first concert Friday evening at the Christian Church and the Golden Legend by Arthur Sullivan is being presented. For this concert, Mr. Wendell Mcravey, of the faculty of S. I. N. U., is acting in the capacity of director.

There are four solo parts:

The part of Elise is taken by Mrs. Aurelia Urula, the part of Cherub, is sung by Miss Besse Bevis. Prince Henry is sung by Mr. Henry Diers. Lucifer is sung by Prof. David S. McIntosh.

Princess Henry, of Robeckan, lisp sick in body and mind at his castle of Vauteburg, in the Hins, has conceived the famous physician of the area to write to him that he can be cured only by the blood of a maiden whom he shall, of her own free will, consent to die for his sake. Regarding the task as impossible, the Prince gives way to despair, when he is visited by Lucifer, disguised as a traveling physician. The Pimel tells him with alcohol, in the fascination of which he ultimately yields in such measure as to be deprived of placid sleep.

When Prince Henry finds shelter in the bottom of one of his vasels, whose daughter, Elise, moved by great compassion, resolves to save his life by risking her life that he might be restored. She prays the virtues of her mother. Despairing, he relents and awakens, telling her from this purpose, and, in due time, Prince Henry, Elise, and their attendants set out for Salerno. On the way they encounter a band of pilgrims, with whom is Lucifer, in the chair of a friar. He also is journeying to Salerno.

On reaching their destination, Prince Henry sends for Elise to come away by Lucifer, who has assumed the form of the Prior Angelo, a doctor of the name. This time Elise persists but is made to feel that the question is so more than her capacity. Lucifer drives E7 into an inner chamber, but the Prince orders that the songbreak down the floor, rescue her at the last moment. Miraculously healed, Prince Henry marries the devoted maiden, and is restored to his rightful place.

The six scenes of the cantata illustrate the corresponding story.

In the Prologue, the defeat of Lucifer is shown by an attempt to wreck the Cathedral of Strasbourg. In the Epilogue the last scene of Elise in comparison to the course of a mountain brook, which cools and fortifies the soul.
Echoes and Re-echoes

From Our Campus

Autobiographical

Some few weeks ago Echoes and Re-echoes published the initial chapter of an autobiography of one of our students. It is feared that in the midst of our activities we are likely to forget, too likely do carelessly to let our troubles and tribulations of those around us. It is good to know just how others do live, and so, for that reason if for no other, we are glad to present herewith the second instalment of this very human document.

Resume: This narrator (who for the present does not desire to make known his identity) was born in a little log cabin in the state of Kentucky. At an early age he migrated with his parents to Indiana because that was the most glorious country in the world, and shortly after that to Illinois, because it was more glorious still. While living in Illinois he had given to him on Christmas time a little hatchet, bright and serviceable.

One day in the spring he wandered out into the back yard where his father had planted a number of cherry trees and proceeded to hack them down. His father returned home in the evening and, observing that his fine cherry trees were cut down, he said to his son: "Son, did you cut down my fine cherry trees?"

"The honest lad looked up to him with tear-stained eyes. Realizing fully the significance of his deed, and knowing that a terrible punishment was likely to follow his confessions he said, "Now father, I did not cut down the cherry trees."

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER II.

Father looked at me with a queer expression on his face. I had never seen him look like that before. It wasn't a fatherly instinct that prompted his continued stare. Then he brought his big rough face down on the table with a merciless bang. "You lie!" he declared.

"I distinctly remember was all I could say."

"You lie!" he repeated. Then I noticed his hand was stained with something red. Crimson red. It dripped on the rough table. I took two steps toward him.

"O, father, what is the matter?"

"Hush, you beast!" he said. Now different from the way my mother had talked. Poor kind, gentle mother. She was now dead three years. If she hadn't died—But now was no time to mourn over her untimely death. Father was changes for some reason.

"I guess the best thing to do would be to—" I mumbled. What could be mean by talking like that to me. He reached into his pocket and drew out a huge knife. I can still see that wicked knife. Like a dirk, it was, and the blade was stained with blood. With warm, human blood!

"Daddy," I cried anguish. "Daddy, what have you done?"

"It be that my father had killed a man. I knew he had a bad temper. There were those who declared that father had killed my mother. Ah—and now, what had he done? He started toward me.

Then I realized what he meant to do. His knife was open. The blood was dripping slowly from his hand. For an instant I was frozen in my tracks. I couldn't move. Such a sensation! An impending tragedy!

My own father was getting ready to kill me.

With a start I came to myself. Had to. There was no choice in the matter. None at all. I leaped. Shout out the door. I remember one thing, father's Argus-eyed expression. Then began the chase. Down through the orchard we went. I ran for my life. There was nothing else to do. If father caught me, I'd lose my life. And I was getting short of breath! There was the orchard fence. Could I get over it? I could hear father's breath close upon me. In another minute—Or would it be a minute?—before he swept me up? There was but one thing to do, and that was run! Run! And I ran. I had never run before.

"Stop!" yelled my father.

But I heeded not. On I ran. On father was now almost upon me. (To be continued.)

Smith: "Taking" is not the right word. "Giving" would be better.

"How do you learn to walk the tightrope? Just pick it up yourself?" "Oh, no—it has to be taught."

It would be fine if someone would invent soft rubber mouthpieces for telephones. Then when you get ready at the phone, you could bite it.

SPECIAL LIBRARY PRIVILEGES FOR SENIORS
A considerable amount of time could be saved in connection with the use of the library is Senior College students who have to write term papers were given the privilege of finding their material by themselves. This is done in other schools quite successfully. When a person is writing a term paper, he must obtain all the material available. It is very inconvenient to go to the librarian with a long list of references and wait until they can be copied up. If a person could investigate the sources himself, he could pick out the material pertinent to his subject and discard the rest. This would relieve the librarian of work and be a decided boon to the student. Such an arrangement would not interfere with our regular library systems.

FOR YOU
Every Tuesday evening a group of boys and a group of girls assemble to plan ways and means to help you. These groups are the two Christian Associations. They are organizations trying to help young people, not in an abstract way, but positively and definitely. The leaders of the Y. M. and Y. W. C.A.'s are not striving chiefly to build up a bigger and better organization. Their chief goal is to give the young people both in and out of the C. A.'s richer, fuller lives. There is an opportunity in these societies to develop and display any kind of work that he likes best. These Christian Associations meet from 6:30 to 7:30 every Tuesday evening.

THE EGYPTIAN

BOOK REVIEW

GIANTS IN THE EARTH
By O. A. ROVALA
-versa Randolph

"GIANTS IN THE EARTH" is a saga of the prairie. It tells of several Norwegian settlers who have come from their home in Norway to live in the plains of South Dakota. Among them is Per Hanus, a giant, who struggles with nature, but his wife, Kari, has only hatred for the new hard life. She does not change in her attitude but she finds comfort in religion which gradually becomes an obsession. It is through this that Per Hanus meets his death.

The plot is not strong, but, like Defoe, Rolvaag has caught the spirit of the pioneer in such a way that you feel his sorrow and his brief moments of happiness. You know the different characters from their actions and their stories are interwoven with the construction of the house. It is a half adventure story, a realistic description of the physical facts of the homesteader's life, and latterly the story of the pioneer's psychology.

"GIANTS IN THE EARTH" makes allusion to the recent expedition of a group of Japs in a front on ship. There is a memorable simplicity and vigor about the book which places it in a class with the few really fine novels.

STUDENT OPINION

Do you think the Spring Debate got enough publicity?
Arthur Nolan

Taking into consideration the amount of work they have to do and the fact that it is spring time, I don't think that the Spring debates get nearly enough publicity.—Dean Marfin.

Well, I think they get enough for the worth of the debates. If they would be better advertised the meeting would be better attended.—Fred Willis.

If time and energy expended, together with the interest necessary for debating, are taken into consideration, the Spring debates should receive a great deal more publicity than they do at present. They are as hard as the cast of the Spring plays. Why should they not receive an equal amount of publicity—Mabel Godward.

Why, I didn't know there was a Spring debate. Where do you do your advertising?—C. B. Berger.

I consider the Spring debate one of the most important activities of the campus. I do think they should receive more publicity and a group of students who have part in the debate should have consideration by advertising because they deserve it.—Elizabeth Springer.

"Need any more talent for your motion picture drama team?"
"We might use you. Had any experience in acting without audience?"
"Say, what do you think brought me here?"

THE SHYPHIN

Who turned off the gas and left the note under the windshield wiper of a certain new Ford coupe, damaged on the version, Tuesday evening, April 15.

Why a second history student says: This is the punctuation in his teaching.

What geometry student not looking at a book who places it in a geography class, said with great exclamation, "Not having more than a slight idea what you are talking about, I could not express myself with any degree of accuracy." P. S. — You may be surprised, but he’s still in class.

AND WONDERS:
What was the point to O., Henry's speech at literary society Wednesday night or if it was an after thought. If George Paul Champion is going to wear his bright red sweaters all summer. Why Robert Dillard added an ominous "Ho, ho" after reading this sentence in French yesterday, "I'll have to be in his arms and she called to her uncle for help. Why the sudden great exit from the seventh hour Modern European History class last Tuesday.

Why Ann Henry named her gym team "Sphnith."

How John Lewis found the valuable of a particular phrase.

GIAR Paros

The Gasts are getting just as interested in Mr. St. Peter's work as the rest of the students. A French program was carried out to such an extent that the Giant must take French leave at the last minute. Miss Katy Cotton, a great traveler (she has seen almost every place and her suitcase labels talked on "Gyar Paros" at the last meeting. One phrase is most useful, happy to the girls, "It is fiche moi la pain," meaning "eat." "On your way, you big cheese, best it before I see the dog on you," or anything else you might wish to convey, depending on your gesture and your expression. It is well to use it on the natives, especially those smooth, handsome Frenchmen with such a winning way about them. If you know, you is always best to keep out of Charm's way.

Dear Frederick:
Yes, I am by no means the first pitiful person to receive an answer on this subject. Many a guiltless student has fallen victim to his own prey. Hundreds of applicants are wiped out yearly by these cunningly devised rules and regulations. But the desire rate is decreasing. There is a ray of sweet light of hope shoveling it's way through the muck and mire.

Without the aid of the mathematics Sorority, I could be happier than this hour. However, with my help we have worked out a system. Now they are systems. I have them.

Although those who have been attending these noon-hour services have already been invited, all Baptist students are invited.

Socratic Society

"Give it Play? The Mayor and the Manicure"

The Socratic Literary Society presented another unusually good program Wednesday evening. There were three new members in the oratorian, which helped considerably. That Mrs. Kappo• is doing good work as orchestra director is evinced by the fact that the orchestra has been invited out of town to play.

The program of the evening was an orchestra number, directed by Mr. Kappo; talk by Oscar Henry, in which he told of life during pioneer days in Kentucky when the redskins were a menace of the state; and Omer confirmed that he was only a week old during those hectic days, and recounted an incident with remarkable vivacity; duct, by Georgia Hankla and Lottie Hall. These girls delighted the audience with two clarinet duets. And the play, The Mayor and the Manicure, was a little different from the others that have been given, as it bore on the border. The story is of an adoptive geology digger (the part was played by Zella Hess) who was attempting to blackmail Raymond Allen, her lover. That Raymond was, according to her story, her lover—the man who had deserted her—ruined her life. She first appeared in the play of the office of Raymond's father (Sheriff Martin) who was a politician, got the idea of making the race for governor of his state. She made the demand for ten thousand dollars in the same. The sun returns, and a second is enacted between the father and son. Then the father, by a clever scheme—a fake telephone—puts a message from the police in Zella's home town. That is too much for her to bear. She jumps when the police make reference to her husband, and she confesses. The real betrayer was Minnie Rose who played her part well.

The scene ends by the father giving the Manicure girl—Zella—a thousand dollars, their parting good friends.

Demonstration Room for Special Classes

A new and interesting plan has been worked out in connection with the teaching of method courses, practical classes, and educational classes in the new Chemistry building a demonstration room has been provided for the use of the teachers in teaching any of the above subjects. At any time they wish, they may take their classes to this room and by making arrangements with the department of Chemistry the department is able to give a demonstration. The plan has been a great aid both to the instructors and the students in that it makes the principles which are being taught objective. Miss Kel- del, Mr. Purr, and Dr. Thalmann have made extensive use of these demonstrations and have found them helpful in conducting their classes.

Trees and flowers planted at Forsville recently are looking fine. All the schools have an exhibit of penmanship, construction and drawing this week. ECHOES AND RE-ECHOES FROM OUR CAMPUS

“Welt?” snapped petite Sramonoch.

“I know, dark-eyed, deep--voice Tom began.

“That’s just like you!” Sramonoch spat.

“Give me a break,” he implored. “I’ll break you!” she threatened.

“Any man who will leave a girl simply because he’s got his name on the White Way flickering like a chewing gum ad” she hesitated. Perhaps it dawned upon her that she was a tiny bit inconsistent. It gave Tom a chance to say a word.

“But you know I’m not trying to ditch you,” he vowed.

“I know!”

“I’m not, why, without you—” But we turned off the dictaphone. We did not want to intrude any more.

Helen Russell is planning a trip to Italy shortly. There under the curvaceous sky she will loiter in luxury and write sonnets in that tongue best adapted to the soft strains of love.

... but who couldn’t do sonnets? Imitating the fragrant blossoms and cool voices and warm Mediterranean waves lazily lapping the shore while in the velvet skies a thousand stars whisper as melodiously as the crooning of fairies. Then from across the water comes the low, amorous sound of a guitar being twanged soulfully. ... With all of that—not to mention the dark--haired, soft--skinned girls—anyone would turn poet perchance, and if he but copied from life, his works would be sure to be immortal.
