Dean of Students resigns,
Mace to return to teaching

By Gene Charleton
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Dean of Students George Mace has resigned to resume full-time teaching and research, it was announced Friday.

An associate professor of government, Mace requested reassignment in the Department of Government Effective Sept. 15.

In his letter of resignation, Mace noted his original appointment in the Student Affairs Division, which was to have been temporary, had stretched into almost two years.

Mace's letter of resignation was dated June 13, and President David R. Derge's letter of acceptance was dated June 26, although the official announcement of the resignation was not made until Friday.

In an interview Friday, Derge said the intervening time had been used to ponder the decision and begin to look for a successor to Mace.

Derge said he has asked the officers of the Student Senate, Graduate Student Council, Graduate Council and president and vice president of Student Government to recommend and comment on potential candidates for the position.

Among potential candidates already suggested are Student Center Director Clarence (Doc) Dougherty, Jerry Lacy, Assistant to the vice president for development and services and former affirmative action officer, and Sam Rimella, director of housing.

These names have been "floated in conversations," Derge said.

He said he hopes to have a candidate chosen in time to present to the Board of Trustees at its September meeting.

The appointment to the dean of students position would be temporary until July 1, 1974, Derge said. During this time an extensive analysis of the entire student affairs structure will be carried out.

The new dean should plan, to carry out this analysis, Derge said. He said it could take the form of a task force or a joint committee with Faculty Senate and Student Government participation.

Derge said he doesn't see this analysis and possible reorganization as any conflict with the work of the Management Task Force which recommended the administrative structure which includes present Student Affairs Division organization. The present structure went into effect last July.

"This is a step beyond the Management Task Force in putting our administrative house in order," Derge said. He said the task force merely looked at existing conditions and not at possible future ideas.

The next appointee to the student affairs position will be temporary because the analysis may indicate changes which might make a vice presidential-level appointment inappropriate, he said.

Possible alternatives include: no change to the present structure; a vice president or a substantial lessening of administration influence in student affairs.

Derge said the appointment would be made from within the University.

Mace was attending a workshop at Oregon State University and was unavailable for comment.

Earlier testimony was false

Gray admits reading, burning documents

WASHINGTON (AP)--Former FBI chief L. Patrick Gray admitted Friday he had secret documents before he burned them, then lied about the event for months amid the Watergate coverup.

Gray also told the Senate Watergate committee he warned President Nixon 19 days after the Watergate breakin that "people on your staff are trying to mortally wound you by using the CIA and the FBI."

But the former acting FBI director contradicted much testimony given earlier in the day by Lt. Gen. Vernon R. Walters, the deputy director of the CIA, who told the committee he handed FBI files to White House efforts to bring the intelligence agency into the Watergate affair.

Gray said the FBI-Walters conflicts concerned whether there was danger that the FBI's Watergate investigation could reveal CIA operations in Mexico and who was trying to promote that theory.

The papers Gray burned were given to him June 28 in the office of John D. Ehrlichman, top domestic advisor to President Nixon. They had been taken from the safe of E. Howard Hunt, a former White House consultant since convicted in the Watergate break-in.

Gray acknowledged in his 81-page prepared statement to the Senate committee that he was never directly ordered to destroy the two envelopes of papers.

"But there was, and is, no doubt in my mind that destruction was intended," he said.

Ehrlichman and former White House counsel John W. Dean III have each testified he did not intend for Gray to burn the papers. Gray, however, said Dean told him that "these files were political dynamite, and 'clearly should not see the light of day.'"

Gray said the documents followed a route from under his shirt in an apartment closet to his personal safe and then to a chest of drawers at his Stonington, Conn., home.

"I distinctly recall that I burned them during Christmas week with the Christmas and household paper trash," he said.

"Immediately before putting them in the fire I opened one of the files. It contained what appeared to be copies of 'top secret' State Department cables.

The text of the cable implicated officials of the Kennedy administration in the assassination of President Diem of South Vietnam. I had no reason then to doubt the authenticity of the 'cable' and was shaken at what I read."

Gray did not know the cables had been faked by Hunt.

The burned papers came to haunt Gray during his Senate hearings in March on his nomination to be FBI director. He said he talked to Dean about the papers early that month but did not tell Dean he had burned them and was concerned that Dean had told Atty. Gen. Henry E. Petersen something about the papers.

Gray said he lied to Petersen April 16 when he denied ever receiving the files from Dean.

The next day, Gray said, he told Petersen he had received the papers but had not read them.

Food merchants not yet hurt by shrinking beef supplies

By Ed Dunin-Wasowicz

Local Carbondale grocers registered mixed opinions on the beef shortage in the face of Egyptian poll, condiments. Although beef was Friday, but do seem to be showing their wounds over the nation-wide beef shortage.

Dave Pulcher, manager of Boren's IGA, said that "we're pretty fortunate for this weekend, we have enough." Lorens Fosse, meat manager of Boren's IGA, Foodliner, Lewis Park Mall, said the store is in good shape for the weekend but that skirt steaks and shanks have been hard to come by.

National Super Market, on Main Street, said that they had enough beef in stock, but that it was the sort of thing you couldn't really predict as far as next week was concerned.

Apparently the hardest hit in the shortage is the Carbondale Kroger Store, in Murdale Shopping Center.

"We're completely out of beef. There is a bad shortage all around," said Manager, Kroger general meat cutter, said.

"Some may say they have meat. But I'd like to know where they are getting it." Carl Wolf, manager of Eckert's Country Store, West Town Shopping Mall, said that they have enough meat but "We will be rationing one pound of ground chuck per customer."
Youth work project falling short, says city youth counselor

By Sam Denoms

More than 118 Carbondale-area neighborhoods have been employed this summer by the Neighborhood Youth Corps (NYC) and the Illinois County Youth Employment Program (SEF).

However, city youth counselor Fred Paluch, who has been directing the program for the past three years, said in a statement that the group has employed 128 persons this summer. Several of adult workers, 25 veterans and 86 youths. The NYC employed 22 youths, many from the northeast side of Carbondale.

The work is mostly outdoor, physical labor, Paluch said, such as cutting grass, cleaning up parks and public buildings, etc., "the kind of things in a city that money and time do not always allow regular city employees to do."

Paluch added that the veterans and adult work mainly is of the viscous roles but labor right along with the youth employment program.

The programs were set up through the efforts of George Paluch, city personnel director, who is in charge of both operations.

Funding for SEF came from the state government, said Paluch, and the money retuned to the federal government by city and the money applied for the program and then redistributed, Paluch said.

He said Jackson County received a $320,000 grant from the Department of Labor for summer employment programs. These programs are for more applicants than jobs available.

"Spokesman for a group called Young Citizens for Progress, operating on the northeast side, says they have been working successfully in finding odd jobs for youths without any financial aid," Paluch said. The spokesmen said the group had applied for funding from the Carbondale City Council long before the NYC was set up, but was not told they would be receiving any money.

Carroll Fry, City Manager of Carbondale, said the city does not fund groups such as the Young Citizens for Progress or the NYC. "We only act as a disbursing agent for the funds once they have been released," Fry said.

Fry said the Young Citizens for Progress fund application came through his office and was immediately submitted for funding, but no further information has been received.

In an attempt to get help locally, the Progress group has started requesting donations of new or used furniture, clothing, office equipment and other materials. Items may be sent to N. Gum & Associates. Additional information is available from 549-5801.

Seattle University professor was called said in a statement that the group; s members say they are not limiting their work to the youth of the Northeast side, or just summer employment.

Powell, a counselor at the Southern Illinois Work Release Center, has tried to help Young Citizens for Progress get their program started.

Powell said he feels the young people in the city have been "short-changed."

"Out of more than 200 applications for summer employment, less than a third were hired by NYC said Powell. "What's supposed to happen is the rest of these disadvantaged kids?"

The National Guard, stationed on campus after three days of curfews, at first did shots were fired in response to a sniper but later said there was no evidence of sniper fire. A state grand jury exonerated the National Guard, and former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell dropped the case in August 1971, saying there was no evidence to justify calling a federal grand jury.

Richardson said he had no reason to believe Mitchell's decision was wrong, but that "there are some areas where an additional inquiry is desirable."

He did not elaborate and neither did Atty. Gen. J. Stanley Pe- tinger, who heads the Civil Rights Division conducting the new in- vestigation. Pettenger said he sought permission to reopen the case but was dissapointed with firm aspects of the original probe.

Pettenger said he has not yet developed investigative plans but that a "grand jury acting in its investi- gating function is a possibility."

He said the FBI, which had produced an 80-page report, also may be instructed to resume its in- vestigation Monday.

Foster homes struggle for harmony

By Jean de Plie Oiser
Daily Egyptian

Kevin walked in the front door and said, "Mom, there’s a hole in your outfit." This might not be unusual for an 18-year-old, but for Kevin it is a foster child.

"Kevin is a student," Mrs. Kathy Carden said.

The Hartys, who have been foster parents for three years, got the idea to become foster parents from friends.

"We have a very good friend who is a social worker at the Children and Family Services office in Murphysboro," Mrs. Kathy said. "We heard about it through him," Mrs. Kathy said.

"We also have other friends who were foster parents and saw their experiences and we thought we’d do it too."

Mrs. Kathy said that being a foster parent is a great need for people to become foster parents.

"Children are brought to foster homes because the child’s family situation is totally deteriorated," she said. "There is no one in the family that can take the child because the immediate family is in a position to help foster parent in place of the child to go.

"The Hartys, who are licensed to help children who have had many problems with their foster children. Their foster experience can be "shocking."

"Foster parents are matching with your own middle class neourous with children who have problems," she said. "The situation must show up suddenly begin to panerize."

"The Hartys are one of the problems doesn’t lie with the parents but with the child’s ability to accept their situation.

She said the children experience a ‘growing’ stage when first brought to a foster home. "One boy we had was as frightened of the switch as the experience was traumatic for him," she said. "He became very withdrawn and didn’t want to be seen and left."

"After a few months, however, he opened up.

"This is the way the children react to shock," she added. The situation is not explained to them and they really don’t understand it.

"All of a sudden, everything is changed."

"The Hartys said the hardest thing for foster parent has to accept is the fact that, the situation is temporary. With things they’ve grown to love you a long time and then leave," she said.

"You don’t always know what you’re getting into," she said, "and there are lots of problems with children who are not with their parents."

"The foster parents agency work to arrive at a permanent situation for the children as soon as possible.

"It’s not easy for the children, parents, or foster parents," she said. "The situation must show up suddenly begin to panerize."

Mrs. Kathy said that although being a foster parent is a difficult job for parents and, overall, it is a very rewarding job.

"Most foster parents run regular programs to set up to handle children with special problems."

Mark and Judy Konikoff, Benton, are licensed to run an emergency diagnostic and specialized care foster home. Parents in these homes are available to take children on a 24 hour basis.

"If children need to be placed somewhere in the middle of the night, we take them," Ms. Konikoff said.

These children need to be in an understanding environment not found in most homes. "We have to spend a lot more time with them then with other children," she said.

"The Konikoffs, who have a 16 and a 17 year old girl staying with them, have been foster parents for three years and have had about 20 children living with them during that time.

"Some of these children have stayed with them overnight and others have been with them for as long as a year.

"Ms. Konikoff said there are a lot of problems in dealing with teenage foster children. "They are troubled by the separation from their parents and require a lot of understanding," she said. "They feel that they should be grateful but a lot of them could care less because they don’t want to stay with you."

"Another problem is getting the children to trust the foster parents," she said.

Ms. Konikoff said the most important part of being a foster parent is being able to communicate with the children.

"Nine-tenths of being a foster parent is just being able to talk to the kids," she said.

"Ms. Konikoff said her main concern for the children is their ability to read just like any other family.

"The children we’ve had really responded well but when they go back home, there could be problems," she said.

Ms. Konikoff said, however, the goal of being a foster parent is to get the children rehabilitated with their parents.

"Foster homes are a temporary situation," she said. "All of our kids have grown up in foster situations and several have returned to their parents."

"Ms. Konikoff, who has a seven-month old son, said the foster children have responsibilities in the home.

"The two girls we have now help with the household work and also take care of the baby," she said.

The Konikoffs said they have enjoyed being foster parents.

Foster homes needed, child services official says

Foster homes are needed for children 12 years of age and older. Evelyn Barber, district home locator for Children and Family Services, Marion, said.

"We have homes that have been approved but the parents in those homes," she said. "Barbar said both temporary and regular foster homes are needed.

"Temporary homes which serve as "shelter places," take children over the weekend, Ms. Barber said. Regular homes take in children for periods of a month to several years.

"It’s a legal requirement for becoming a foster parent to have a different room in their home," she said.

"The children must have enough space for the child and be physically and legally approved, she said.

"We need that single or married persons can become foster parents.

"Foster parents must have a good home situation themselves and can take care of the children with the children," she said.

Foster Parent5 Association soon to avail services for parents, child

A Foster Parent5 Association, dedicated to providing parents ideas to exchange ideas with each other, is being formed in Jackson County. According to one of the parents, the association will provide parents a means to get help with their problems.

"We have a group of parents that are circulating information about problems they are having and providing emotional support," he said. "We had to talk and we are a foster parent, said the association will provide parents problems to get help with their problems.

We also have a group of parents that are circularizing information about problems they are having and providing emotional support," he said. "Mrs. Kathy said he had a number of parents that need help from foster parents can help them.

"Every foster parent has to deal with one thing, he said, "they’re never done with before." This way we can go to other foster parents and ask them if they have been in certain situations.

Mrs. Kathy also said the social workers from the Department of Public Aid and Children’s Services are not always available when someone asks for help and this will provide an alternate place to receive advice.

The Foster Parent5 Association also will help parents find needed materials in case they get children they’re not prepared for.

Foster parenthood isn’t regulated," he said. "You don’t know when the family will dissolve or when children will need a home."

It’s not always a given in certain situations. The Foster Parent5 Association will provide a place to exchange ideas with each other, the association said. It’s not always a given in certain situations.

Ambulance service: Right, Wrong or Unreasonable?

In reviewing the accounts of the head-on collision six miles north of Carbondale on Rt. 51 last Saturday, which resulted in the death of Southern Illinois residents James Burns and Cheryl Thompson, a serious consideration of certain underlying facts seems imperative.

Though possibly not viewed as a major issue, the question of a 24-hour emergency ambulance service remains deep in the heart of the matter. Under a July 1 contract between the city of Carbondale and the SIU, the university reimburses the city for every emergency call made within the city-limits. In return, the city is obligated to provide 24-hour ambulance service inside Carbondale in place of the local fire department service when the ambulance is needed.

The Carbondale-SIU ambulance plan gained tremendous support from most of the parties involved. It would clearly improve local ambulance service and cut operating costs for both the city and the University.

Along with the fact that a successful joint venture of this kind could be a prototype for future expansion of the program to meet pending Federal government health and safety standards.

However, it was noted at the time that unless Carbondale Township availed itself the opportunity to continue with the 24-hour ambulance service, there might be serious repercussions.

"Reports show that ambulance service is a situation which is worsening throughout Southern Illinois," City manager Carroll Fry told the SIU Board of Trustees, when the ambulance plan was being considered.

It would seem that due to rising operational costs and inadequate equipment and funds, most fire departments, funeral homes and similar concerns all want to maintain their emergency ambulance business. They simply cannot make money anymore picking up the "sick and afflicted" or rescuing those in distress.

On the other hand, there are lots of other sides to the matter, and money definitely is a problem. However, too many fronts have been forced, something that will come to a question of human social needs. And educated people seem to pay for too much attention to words and not enough to feeling that unless Carbondale Township availed itself the opportunity to continue with the 24-hour ambulance service, there might be serious repercussions.

"In defense of ‘wedded bliss’

To the Daily Egyptian:

In the editorial on "Unwedded Bliss" of July 19, I conclude that the dominant theme is the permanency in marriage is a pass thing, and that more freedom for temporary alliances is the way to go. Convenience seems to be the major reason for the "live-in" arrangement. It makes me wonder if the author of the editorial knows what marriage is.

According to the thinking of our present society, marriage is a contract between two individuals, which is annulled if there is sufficient cause. With this limited view of marriage, it isn’t any wonder that all kinds of reasons are developed to dissolve them, and even to bypass the contractual agreement to a live-in, walk-out relationship with this view of marriage. I would agree, it would be indeed foolish to contractualize such a shaky arrangement.

The ground of marriage is not based upon law but upon the unity of spirit binding the couple together. A basic and essential element of this spirit is a person’s esteem for the other, that honor and respect. A person’s esteem for the other, that honor and respect that each hold for the other. This esteem is the ground where the lasting and fruitful love can grow. Now this love is an essential ingredient of marriage. But the factor that does not depend on love for its continued existence. Rather, the love depends upon marriage, its continued existence. Marriage gives to love a situation of stability and permanency, wherein it can grow toward maturity. Mankind is prone to the tyranny of love and immature feelings. If forces a person to live out times of difficulty and win through to new degrees of love and understanding. Until a person has passed through this test, he or she doesn’t really know what love means.

Mankind gets recalled

By Arthur Hope

Scene: The Heavenly Real Estate Office. The Landlord, humming happily to himself, is busily touching up faded rainbows as his business agent, Mr. Gabriel, strides in — his golden trumpet in one hand, a sheaf of documents in the other.

Landlord: The Recall? (Beaming) Recall them.

Gabriel: Mr. landlord, sir? I think I’ve found the solution, sir, to your problems with that little planet Earth. The Landlord (sighing): I assume the tenants have been vandalizing the property again. And you suppose you want to sound the Eviction Notice on that trumpet of yours. But somehow, Gabriel, I just can’t bring myself to evict them.

Gabriel: I know, sir. So I’ve come up with a better idea. (triumphantly) Recall him.

The Landlord: Recall them? What sounds as though you’ve been reading Ralph Nader.

Gabriel: Exactly, sir. And by any sound method of business practices, all 3.8 billion current models must be recalled instantly.

The Landlord: On what grounds, Gabriel?

Gabriel (producing his documents): I’ve compiled a list of streets, sir, any street one of which contains 50% or more with recall. Now, first, they all obviously have faulty steering mechanisms.

The Landlord (frowning): Faulty steering mechanisms?

Gabriel: Yes, sir. They’re the basic ingredient in maintaining a straight line toward any objective or negotiating a bend smoothly. They’re always going off in all directions at once. And with their defective brakes, . . .

The Landlord: (tapping his fingers): Defective brakes?

Gabriel: Once on a periscope course, sir, they find it all but impossible to stop. This is what makes them so collision prone. Unsafe at any speed. And the malfunctioning reverse gears.

The Landlord (pursing his lips): Reverse gears?

Gabriel: They seem to have been left off most models, sir. Once they’ve taken a wrong turn, they can’t back up.

The Landlord (testily): Is that all, Gabriel?

Gabriel: Oh, no sir. That’s not the half of it. Let’s see. Their anti-collision devices clearly don’t work. Or, rather, oddly, look at the brown air down there. They consume fossil fuels at an alarming rate. Real gas burners. And, worst of all under the slightest pressure, they are prone to blow up, wreaking wide-spread carnage and havoc.

The Landlord (scoffing): So you would have me recall them, Gabriel?

Gabriel (smugly): Of course, sir. They are definitely guilty of being the worse designed, badly engineered, stupidly made.

The Landlord (serenely): They are guilty? And who designed, engineered and made them?

Gabriel: You, sir. But... (blanching) Oh, I didn’t mean...

The Landlord: Exactly. If there is any guilt, it is mine. And yet you are right about one thing, Gabriel. They should be recalled for design improvements.

Gabriel (surprised): You mean you will recall them? (raising his trumpet) Should I sound the Recall Notice, sir?

The Landlord: No, no, Gabriel. I’ll recall them as I always have.

Gabriel (puzzled): How’s that sir?

The Landlord (smiling gently): One at a time, Gabriel. One at a time.
Highway bill opens way for mass transit funding

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House Friday overwhelmingly passed and sent to the White House a highway bill which would gradually open the Highway Trust Fund to expenditures on mass transit.

After the 325-34 vote, the House also took up the minimum wage and farm bills on the last day of business before a month-long recess.

Shortly thereafter, the House gave final approval to the bill increasing the-maximum wage from $1.40 an hour to $2.30 next year if President Nixon signs it.

However, Republicans in the House and Senate predicted Nixon will veto it on the grounds it is inflationary and would increase unemployment among youthful and marginal workers.

House passage by a roll call vote of 250 to 152 completed a three-year effort by Congress to raise the minimum.

The three-year $50-billion highway bill had stalled for 10 weeks while Senate-House conference debated whether trust funds could be spent on rail transit lines.

Word of a possible presidential pocket veto had threatened further delay action on the bill until after the August recess. But Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., the conference chairman, said he had been assured by Transportation Secretary Claude S. Brinegar that President Nixon would sign the bill.

The administration had supported the diversion of trust funds to mass transit but objected to the funding levels contained in the bill.

The bill sent to the President would allow $200 million in trust funds to be spent on the acquisition of buses in fiscal year 1975, which begins July 1. 1974. In fiscal 1976 the entire $900 million in funds earmarked for urban highways could be spent on rail transit systems.

Another hotly debated provision would allow states to turn back road funds earmarked for controversial urban highway projects and spend an equal amount of general tax money on a mass transit project.

Parking lots due for improvements

By Don Crane

Campus parking may be slightly disrupted for the next few months as 12 lots receive improvements.

Parking lots 40 and 46, behind the Communications Building were closed Thursday and Friday for surveying as a preliminary to redesigning and upgrading, said John Crawford, J.H. Crawford Civil Engineers, Carterville.

Crawford has been contracted by the University to design and supervise improvement of the 12 lots.

According to Crawford, the work will be done in several phases. Phase 1 will consist of improvements to five of the 12 lots.

Estimated cost of phase 1 is $200,000. The estimate for the entire project is $500,000.

Lots scheduled to be improved under Phase 1 are 23, northwest of Small Group Housing; 4, west of the Agriculture Building; 1, west of the General Classroom Building; 40, southwest of the Communications Building; and 46 west of the Communications Building.

The General Classroom Building lot and the Communications Building lots may be closed at the same time, but Crawford said he hopes such a situation can be avoided. "We want to try to keep inconvenience to a minimum," he added.

Ray Smith, civil engineer for Plant Engineering Services, said, "It's really too bad, but we can't do all the work from the end of August to the middle of September."

According to Crawford's schedule, work may not begin until after September. He plans to finish surveying early next week and begin designing. He will seek construction bids about mid-August and hopes to announce the low bid by September. Crawford said it will then take about a month to get contract approval from the Board of Trustees.

Smith said the improvements will consist of laying black-top, installing gutters and curbs, painting permanent lines, and "possibly some rearrangement of the traffic flow."

The parking lots improved during Phase 1, three are for red decals and two for blue.

August LeMarchal, coordinator of parking and traffic, said he knew of no plans to change the decal designation of any of the lots being repaired.

K. D. Isbell, SIU assistant treasurer, said the improvements will be funded from the Parking Facilities Fund. The fund is supported by parking fines.
Justice Douglas to rule on bombing

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP)—Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas has promised he will rule by Monday on whether to call an immediate halt to U.S. bombing in Cambodia.

Douglas heard arguments in the case Friday and then retired to his Cascade Mountains cabin to consider the case.

President Nixon, meanwhile, sent a letter to Congress accusing the lawmakers of "abandoning a friend" and undermining his own efforts for a cease-fire by setting an August deadline on Cambodian bombing.

At the Pentagon, officials indicated it would continue reconnaissance flights over Cambodia even after the cutoff date.

Justice Douglas, who is taking his summer vacation, will issue a written opinion after the court reconvenes Wednesday.

Douglas heard oral arguments in a request from American Civil Liberties Union attorneys that he vacate a stay of a lower court order declaring the bombing to be unconstitutional.

The District Court judge who granted the stay said he did not have the authority to prohibit the bombing. But the stay was stayed pending an appeal to the Supreme Court of Appeals. Arguments in that appeal are set for next Wednesday.

Douglas said he will decide the case during the weekend and issue the order Tuesday.

By Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and four Air Force officers challenging the President's authority to order Cambodian bombing.

University Police Sgt. Robert S. Harris has been awarded a nine-month scholarship for Traffic Police Administrative Training program at Northwestern University.

The program begins Sept. 13 and works nationally and internationally, providing the administrative, legal and technical skills of personnel in agencies responsible for operating highway transportation and criminal justice systems.

Harris will probably be assigned as a training officer when he returns to campus, Virgil Trummer, assistant security officer, said.

Godwin Chu, SIU professor of journalism, has accepted an invitation from the Republic of China to attend a seminar on national development. It begins Monday.

Chu, who will travel in the United States and on international relations at the National Chengchi University. He left Carbondale Thursday and is scheduled to leave Tuesday, Aug. 21.

On Aug. 21, Chu will present a paper entitled, "Communication and National Development in China," to the students at the school.

In September, Chu will be leave for a nine-month appointment as assistant professor at the East-West Center, University of Hawaii.

While in Hawaii, Chu will be doing research in communication and national development with Wilbur Schramm, director of the East-West Communication Institute.

Anna Carol Fults, professor and chairman of the Department of Home Economics Education at SIU, will conduct an in-service workshop for the faculty of the Western Illinois Technical Institute August 27 at LaCrosse, Wis. The workshop is entitled, "Attitudes, Beliefs and Values in the Affective Domain of Educational Objectives.

Two research papers will be presented at the annual meeting of the Poultry Science Association Monday through Friday at Southeastern University in Brookings.

Scott Hinnery, professor of animal industries, and graduate student Arvart reported papers. Both present partial fulfillment of requirements for student master's degrees in animal industries with majors in poultry science. The papers will be presented in the Poultry Association section meetings.

Hinnery will present a report on "The Effect of Protein Level and Species of Cereal on the Growth of the Chicken due to the Choline Methionine Supplementation." Joint authors are Paula Costa, graduate student from the University of Santa Maria, Brazil, Arrvart's wife, and Hinnery.

Poor peach, apple harvest predicted by area growers

By Linda Lipman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

An Early April freeze has left the Southern Illinois apple and peach business little lenient this year, area growers have noted.

The freeze caused the peach crop to be almost complete loss and only half the usual apple crop will survive for the fall harvest.

SIU to co-sponsor beef cattle workshop

Modern practices in buying, housing and feeding beef cattle will be observed and discussed in a Southern Illinois Beef Cattle Workshop Monday, at the Gypsy Hill Farms northeast of Du Quoin for the benefit of the region's livestock farmers.

The program is a joint effort of the University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Service, the animal industry department of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, Gypsy Hill Farm, and a feed company.

Robert J. (Pud) Williams, director of the Illinois Department of Agriculture, will lead off the 10:30 a.m. program with a discussion on what a beef cattle industry could mean to Southern Illinois.

Farmers attending the event can take part in discussion tours of the Gypsy Hill Farm facilities during the 9 to 10:30 a.m. registration period. Almost 1,000 beef cattle of various breeds are on feed at the Farm under confinement and drylot conditions.

Area Democrats to have annual basket picnic

All area Democrats have been invited to rub elbows and renew acquaintances at an "Old Fashioned Basket Picnic" Sunday in Murphysboro.

The pot-luck picnic is an annual affair sponsored by the Jackson County Democratic Central Committee. Chairman Ray Chaboy said the committee will provide coffee and soft drinks.

State Sen. Ken Buie and State Rep. Dan Brown will speak Sunday's event, but Chaboy promised that nothing political will be made. He said the picnic is "just a gathering" for Democrats to mingle and get acquainted with new precinct committeemen and friends.

The picnic will begin at 1 p.m. in the Eastern Club Shelter in Murphysboro City Park. Those attending are invited to bring a cake or dessert to share.

Nixon urges lift on interest limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon Friday proposed an emergency bill to lift all limitations on the amounts of interest that banks and savings and loan associations can pay on savings deposits.

The result of the recommendation, if approved by Congress, would mean higher interest payments for savers and would allow banks, savings and loan associations to pay the kinds of savings held by many Americans.

The President proposed phasing out interest ceilings, which now range from 5 to 14 percent on passbook savings, over a 15-year period.

He also recommended permitting some banks and savings associations to provide checking account services, and he proposed approving so-called New-Orderable-Tide of Withdrawal accounts — service for both banks and savings and loan associations. These provide that institutions can negotiate interest rate changes on deposit accounts at the time of withdrawal.

The proposals are part of a plan to reorganize the country's financial system that the administration hopes to send to Congress in September.

The main purpose of eliminating interest rate ceilings on savings deposits is to maintain a consistent flow of money into banks and savings and loan institutions during periods of high interest rates.

Although the proposals have been under study since 1970, Deputy Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon said they have been announced at an opportune time — "a period when the nation can be classified this moment as an interest rate crunch."

Simon said at a White House briefing on the subject.

He said a major consideration has been finding ways to help farmers and home mortgagees.

The proposals were criticized by the savings and loan industry, which has opposed the National Board of the National League of Insured Savings Associations, which recommended that the savings and loan associations be turned into "underwritten commercial banks."

The National Action Home Builders declared that the proposals "were an attack on the American thrift system and put an end to the Federal Home Loan Banks and loan institutions as a principal source of mortgage funds for future buyers."

American Bankers Association said the proposals "at first glance appear to provide for balanced change" but said it would study them further.

Compromise farm bill approved

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress passed a compromise farm bill Friday that includes a new concept of price supports and food stamps for strikers.

President Nixon is expected to sign the bill.

Under the new bill, price supports for wheat, cotton and feed grain would remain constant in 1974 and 1975, but could be adjusted in 1976 and 1977 if farm costs and crop yield vary.

Federal payments would be made to farmers if the market price dips below the “target price” level. The payments would make up the difference between the target price and the market price. Current market prices are above the target prices.

The House approved the bill by a vote of 250-131.

A parliamentary maneuver blocked insertion of a proposed ban on issuance of food stamps to strikers.

The compromise, worked out by Senate-House conferees, had been accepted earlier this week by the Senate. It is 7 to 1, after the food stamp ban was rejected.

The target price for the first two years of the new concept would be $2.05 a bushel for corn, and 38 cents a pound for cotton.

The bill would set an annual payment limit of $30,000 per farmer, instead of the current $10,000 per crop. Cotton allotments could continue to be leased or sold with the full impact of the limit. Payments to farmers for non-growing crops would be exempted from the limit.

The minimum milk price support would be boosted by the legislation, to 80 per cent of parity, a formula used to gauge how much farmers get compared to costs and living expenses, for the rest of the marketing year and for the next one which ends March 31, 1975. After March 31, 1975, the support returns to its current level of 75 per cent of parity.

The legislation also abolishes the wheat certificate program—the so-called bread tax—by ending a requirement that wheat processors pay 75 cents a bushel to help finance the price support system.

This provision would be retroactive to July 1, the secretary of Agriculture would make “appropriate adjustments” in the value of loan allotments effective Jan. 1, 1974, based on price changes through August 31, 1973, instead of annual adjustments.

The bill also makes partial restoration of food stamp eligibility for some aged, blind and disabled persons who will be getting federal payments starting Jan. 1, 1974, under the new Social Security supplemental aid program.

The legislation extends food stamp eligibility to people in drug and alcohol rehabilitation treatment programs.

Special Ed hosts picnic for young, old

Friday was fun for a very special group of area residents. Around 90 senior citizens and children were treated to a picnic and a ride on an old-fashioned coal train by more than 70 special education students and instructors from SUU.

The seniors were residents of Tyler Nursing Home, Murphysboro.

The kids were children from Syrent Nursing Home and the Elm Street Project. The SUU special education department has sponsored tutoring projects that summed involving young and old citizens. Friday’s excursion was the wind-up of the program.

The day was rounded out with a little help from some friends who donated food, drink and money to the picnic—Buffalo Bob’s, Bobby’s and the Carbondale A&P grocer.

The federal park services furnished a picnic grove in the Crab Orchard public recreation area free of charge.

Besides quantities of food and drink, the picnic featured active games and lots of laughter. After the music, the group went on to Marion’s old North Street station and climbed aboard the Perri Express for a chugging, toasting ride through Crab Orchard.

Activities

San Francisco (AP) — Eagles whose claws have been clipped and whose wings were bound upon the wind, owls fearful of mice and snakes and deer that never tasted hay—all are students in a rehabilitation school that prepares orphaned or injured wild animals for freedom.

Students learned how long to be free to fly. "We have to teach them how," Mrs. Spivey said. "You know, you can have a two-year-old program at the San Francisco Zoo and lose them on the streets."

The survival school trains fawns and fallow deer and ravens and foxes to forage and fend for themselves in a rugged environment where food isn’t always plentiful—and man is the most dangerous animal of all.

"The owls will be set free in late summer or fall while the weather is cool and the food still abundant in the mountains of Northern California."

"We teach them to think freely," Mrs. Spivey said.

Hunting birds and mammals found injured or abandoned in the wild are taken to the zoo by the State Department of Fish and Game and the U.S. Department of Fish and Wildlife. They are brought to the school by pet owners, veterans or the animals’ captivity.

"People just started bringing us everything from everywhere. We can’t turn them away. We rehabilitate anything that can -fly or walk in the Northern Area," Mrs. Spivey said.

The birds of prey—hawks, falcons, owls and hawks—naturally remain aloof from their handlers. But now, little difficulty adjusting to the savagery and telerey has been swept aside as they recognize their new masters.

But many never have their flocks in flight. They are stopped upon inquiring rodents.

A bald eagle named Silver spent seven years in a cage before he was taken to the zoo.

The atripled muscles in his seven-foot wings had to be conditioned for a year before flight lessons could begin at the end of a tether. The first flight ended in a clump of bushes, but now he is able to fly.

The biggest problem with bears, deer, raccoons and other mammals is their attachment to human beings, Mrs. Spivey explained.

Young bears found orphaned or injured are brought to the zoo to be bottle-fed and raised by humans. But when they are released to the wilds, they are placed in isolation.

Evert chosen first in pro tennis draft

New York (AP) — Reaching into a giant grab-bag of tennis talent, the new World Team Tennis pulled out two prizes Billie Jean King and John Newcombe—and a host of other stars Friday in its first player draft.

Monday, the 1973 Wimbledon champ from Hilton Head, S.C., signed a contract with the Philadelphia franchise, while Newcombe in New York, signed a pact with the New York franchise.

Both were “preferential choices” of their clubs. There were 10 such choices made and where a team chose not to sign a player or commit to a contract its selection was then turned over to the draft board. As a result of their agreements with the players, Philadelphia and Houston surrendered their first-round picks.

Dennis Murphy, president of the bidding organization, announced that approximately 10 other players had signed contracts with the 16-team group but declined to reveal their names.

A number of the sport’s other big names were selected in the draft, but there was no immediate indication that any were ready to join the new circuit.

Teen-age phenom Chris Evert was the first choice in the draft. She was chosen by the Miami franchise, which picked first as a result of a lottery.

When informed of her selection, she said, “There is a 50-50 chance I will play. If it was going to be drafted by anyone, it was going to be me. I’m glad it’s Miami. It’s close to my home.”

Boston chose second, selecting Kerry Melville of Australia. San Diego chose Australian Red Laver: Phoenix took home Jimmy Connors; Belleville, III., and Pittsburgh grabbed Australia’s Ken Rosewall to round out the first five picks.

Other first round choices in order of selections were: Detroit, Terry Paine and Tony Trabulsi of San Francisco; Houston, signed Newcombe; Golden Gate, representing the Oakland-San Francisco area, took Margaret Court of Australia; Los Angeles, Australia’s John Alexander; New York, Roy Emerson of Australia; Minnesota, Linda Tuero, of Metairie, La.; Philadelphia signed Mrs. King; Cleveland chose Swedish sensation Bjorn Borg; Chicago chose hometown favorite Marty Riessen; Toronto, Tony Oker of the Netherlands, and Denver took American Tony Roche.

The WTT has commenced fire by the International Lawn Tennis Federation because it feels a schedule conflict with one of the major tournaments on the ILTF schedule. But spokesman for Team Tennis expressed the hope that a serious confrontation with the ILTF could be avoided.

Secretariat favored again

SARATOGA SPRING, N.Y. (AP) — Secretariat is an overwhelming 1-20 early-line favorite to win Saturday’s Whitney Stakes at Saratoga and become thoroughbred racing’s 13th millionaire.

Five rivals have been entered to oppose the Meadow Stable colt in the 46th running of the nationally televised-CBS 11-mil event. Secretariat’s first start against older horses is Aug. 20.

The Triple Crown winner has earnings of $707,242. If all goes well, the gelding will gross $54,100 with $22,460 awarded for second place. Post time is set for 3:48 p.m. CD.

Johannes Lambur, Secretariat’s trainer, said the 3-year-old will be “in a fine shape. I just can’t see how a horse can stay as fit as he is for so long a period,” Lambur added.

As a 3-year-old Secretariat was assigned 119 pounds. Ron Turcotte, who rode him to victories in the Triple Crown events—the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes—again will be up.

Secretariat has had only one start since he won 31-length success in the Travers at Saratoga June 30, when he led all the way to win the 1 1/2-mile Arlington Invitational by nine lengths.
