"I Have Forgotten My French," by Dr. Vera Peacock

Explanations Values Derived From Foreign Language Study

By LOUISE STOUT

From a recent poll of the students of the Foreign Language Department, it was found that many of them could not pronounce their names properly. In fact, most of them could not even read their names.

The poll, conducted by Dr. Vera Peacock, revealed that many students had forgotten their French. This was a disturbing finding, as French is an important language for international communication.

Dr. Peacock noted that many students had forgotten their French because they had not practiced it in a long time. She recommended that students make a conscious effort to practice their French regularly, in order to keep it alive.

"It is important for students to continue practicing their French, as it is a valuable skill for many careers," Dr. Peacock said. "We should all remember that French is an important language for international communication."
