Engaged couples dodge AIDS test

By Antoinette Hayes
Staff Writer

Some Illinois residents with wedding plans are reshuffling state licenses to avoid taking the mandatory test for the AIDS virus.

Shirley Shield, a clerk at the Jackson County marriage department, said there has been a slight decrease in the number of couples applying for marriage licenses in Jackson County compared to last year. Eighty-six couples have applied for licenses so far this year, down from 130 couples at the same time last year, she said.

Under a state law passed in July, couples must be tested for the AIDS virus before they obtain a marriage license. The law went into effect Jan. 1. Shield doesn't attribute the decrease in marriage applications to the mandatory testing. She said January traditionallv has been a slow month for marriages.

However, she added, there was a noticeable run to beat the December 31 deadline. Figures show that in December 1987, 40 couples applied for marriage licenses in Jackson County compared to 27 couples in December 1986. Those who missed the deadline seem to have found a way to avoid the tests. According to recent press reports, out-of-state counties bordering the state have experienced an increase in the number of Illinois' residents applying for marriage licenses.

The test does not detect if a person has AIDS, it only indicates whether a person is infected or not.

Day care center feels budget cuts

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Underfunding of the state's child care budget has forced one秀e statewide day care center to cut back its services.

Donna Haynes, a coordinator at Ezra C. Hayes Comprehensive Child Care, said the program's staff was cut from 29 full-time workers to 13 last May. Haynes said substitute staff members fill the former full-time positions on a day-to-day basis. The program also cut the number of children served from 279 to 172.

In addition, Haynes said, "we have put off purchasing replacement items including toys, crayons, paper and pencils."

Underfunding also has forced the center to stop transporting schoolchildren to the center after school. Parents now make arrangements for their children's transportation to the center through the public school system, she said.

Haynes said the cuts haven't affected the quality of the center's programs. "But I can't say if they keep cutting," she added.

The Hayes center serves a large number of low-income families through a state program called Title XX.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) - In a surprise move, Nicaragua sent a delegation to open direct cease-fire talks Thursday with U.S.-backed Contra rebels, saying it was taking the initiative because peace efforts were at a "crucial stage."

The unexpected move came after two sides, planned to hold talks only with Cardinal Obando and here we'll determine the date we can undertake the meeting with the Sandinista Front, Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, a leader of the Nicaraguan Resistance, the Contra's political arm, said in an interview.

"We don't believe it is convenient to maintain direct talks after our appointment with the cardinal." He also said the full cease-fire leaders in San Jose to set up the direct peace talks with Sandinista officials next week.

"We have come to San Jose only to talk with Cardinal Obando and here we'll determine the date when we can undertake the meeting with the Sandinista Front." Chamorro said.

Simon expects $300,000 from 'gala'

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer

Although receipts are still trickling in from the "Simon Gala," the event has raised nearly $150,000 for Saul Simon's presidential campaign, chairperson Einar Dybrokopp said.

"But the event probably will generate about $80,000 more," said Dybrokopp, chairman of the gala, said. "Because the government will match every dollar Simon raises, up to $500 per donation, where contributors work and who their house, be explained.

However, a "tremendous amount of additional money" must be completed before Simon is given money from the government, Dybrokopp said.

To get the money, Simon's staff is hurrying to fill out forms that include information about contributors such as when the government will match every dollar Simon raises, up to $500 per donation.

"If the paperwork is in order, the government will return it for corrections," Dybrokopp said. "If the paperwork is incorrect, the government will return it for corrections.

Simon has said he hopes to come first in the Iowa caucus "which is being held in Iowa, Dybrokopp said. "If Simon wins Iowa, Dybrokopp said. "A win will give him sufficient momentum to rise through the other primaries and caucuses. They'll never be able to catch him, but if he loses, he'll have to fight hard.

Simon — who launched his campaign with little name recognition and a 1 percent poll rating — said during a press conference before the gala that he's leading in the latest CBS-New York Times poll of Iowa Democrats. "Things are going better than expected and my campaign is selling everywhere," Simon said.

Diplomat visits Pakistan; Soviet withdrawal sought

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — U.N. mediator Diego Cordovez met with Pakistani officials Thursday at the start of a diplomatic mission that could lay groundwork for a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan this year. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said they discussed mid-February talks in Geneva where Pakistan and Afghanistan are expected to chart a pullout of Soviet troops.

Militant politician charged with inciting riots

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) - Former presidential candidate Louis Dejoie Jr. was charged Thursday with provoking civil disorder, a crime punishable by life imprisonment, his lawyer said. Dejoie, arrested upon his arrival from Puerto Rico Wednesday, was taken to the Port-au-Prince central court Thursday where he was formally charged. Dejoie is one of the few persons to whom the U.S. district attorney has not recommended extradition.

Israelis exert control by fear, sources say

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israeli troops have been dosing Palestinians in a new policy intended to crush rioting in the occupied territories without bullets and instill fear of the army, Israeli and other sources said Thursday. The United States sharply criticized the tactics as inhumane. Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, touring the Gaza town of Rafah and the Deir el-}e refugee camp, described the level of Palestinian violence as "down almost to nil." He said curfews may be lifted shortly on all Gaza camps.

Greek militia ends siege of refugee camps

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Palestinians cautiously ventured Thursday outside two refugee camps where Greek militia ended a 15-month siege in the largest such evacuation of Palestinian refugees in the Israeli-occupied territories. Shirkki Molam, a Greek militia and allies in the Army's Shiite 6th brigade left the camp fringes Wednesday in line with a decision by Amal chief Rabbi Berri to end the blockade in solidarity with Palestinians in the Gaza Strip and West Bank, where anti-Israeli unrest has flared since early last month.

Significant decision

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Leaders of the anti-abortion movement, buffeted in recent years by bad weather, division in their ranks and waning public interest, are hoping for a crowd of 400 people to mark the 15th anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court abortion ruling, police officials said Thursday. Officials at the Brooklyn Court — increasingly the target of the militant wing of the anti-abortion movement — said they will close the court building and ported of the grounds Friday afternoon during the annual March for Life-demonstrating the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision.
Foundation names Miller executive fundraiser

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

Michael Miller could be considered something of a boy wonder as far as fund raising executives go. Before graduating from college, he was well on his way to being in the hierarchy of the SIU Foundation.

On Jan. 1, Miller replaced Thomas Bila, the director of annual giving who left the foundation on Dec. 31 to become executive director of the Rockford Memorial Hospital Foundation.

Miller started at the foundation in 1984 as a student volunteer who made phone calls to alumni during the foundation's annual telephone fund raising campaign. He was hired as assistant director of annual giving in July, and now is showing students how to make phone calls to coax alumni into donating money to their alma mater.

"It was a matter of being in the right place at the right time, but I'd like to think I got the job because I was qualified," Miller said. His quick climb up the foundation's executive ladder. "I used to help set up the phones and take down the phones."

Miller said he graduated from Carbondale Community High School in 1983 and completed a bachelor's degree in political science at SIU-C in May 1987. He started working at the foundation as an intern in Dec. 1986.

With the new job Miller has put his plans to pursue graduate studies in public affairs on hold. He said he could not disclose his salary, but admitted "I'm doing very well for a person my age."

Miller also said he would rather not have his exact age printed. "I have to work with a lot of administrators and if they know how old I am, they might not respect me as they would respect someone who is older," he said. "If it means I have to start acting like I'm older than I am or if it means I have to quit going out to the Strip, then so be it."

Miller comes into his position amid a swirl of personnel changes in the foundation.

In December, SIU Foundation president Anne Carman left for Washington D.C. to serve as vice president on the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education. She was replaced by Rex H. Ball, Linda J. Corser, director of resource development, left Jan. 8 to become director of development at Bryant College, Smithfield, R.I.

Subsequently, Miller is now working three jobs — Corser's, his old job as assistant director of annual giving — because no one has been hired to fill the positions.

"The situation is the foundation as a chance to win an award. He said he would like to see people accept the SIU Foundation as the sole fund raising source for the University.

"There needs to be more continuity to everything that is going on. If some cases we are having multiple solicitations of donors," Miller said. "I was a time when the Alumni Association or individuals would solicit funds from alumni without consulting the foundation first."

"There needs to be more continuity to everything that is going on. If some cases we are having multiple solicitations of donors," Miller said. "I was a time when the Alumni Association or individuals would solicit funds from alumni without consulting the foundation first."

"A couple of professors would sit around at night with nothing to do and say, 'Why don't we call some alumni for donations?'" Miller said. "Around 1983, then-president Albert Somit rewrote the donation guidelines, making the SIU Foundation the only organization eligible to solicit donations. The foundation is a not-for-profit organization, chartered by the state in 1962 to solicit donations for the University."

Miller will be putting the phones out for the spring telethon fund drive on Jan. 31. Student groups will start dialing the phones in late February. He said he plans to offer cash incentives of as much as $250 to campus organizations providing callers.

Another idea Miller mentioned was to recruit famous SIU-C graduates as spokespersons for the annual fund campaigns. He said actor-comedian Jim Belushi, who graduated in 1978, was one possibility.

Miller's big goal is to see the annual donation fund drive reach $1 million each year. The annual fund usually reaches about $500,000, he said.

Miller gave advice for students who volunteer for the telephone fund raising campaigns. He said students are given a script to read when they call the alumni, but they should try to make conversation with the prospective donors by asking them what SIU-C was like when they were here or telling them about recent changes on campus.

"Usually students will talk to alumni in their own major," Miller said, adding students should not make door job contacts by talking to alumni about job prospects.

Jackson claims growing support from whites

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jesse Jackson claimed Thursday that his new coalition of blacks is growing, but persists in doubts whether a black can be elected president is creating a "fog" that obscures his campaign's message.

But Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, the dean of the nation's black mayors, said he did not believe Jackson would be able to overcome racism to win the Democratic nomination.

Young, who has not yet endorsed any candidate, said he was much of Jackson's message, but added, "The thing he lacks is the ability to win."

Jackson might want to believe he has a chance, Young said, but "wishing is not going to make it (racism) go away."

Appearing at the mid-winter conference of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, Young expressed confidence that he was making progress among white voters.

"There is a growing response to it," Young said. "There is no denying it."

"I see growth, for example, among family farm­ers in Minnesota, New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine."

Still, Jackson voiced concern that, whatever his success in winning white support, the repeated assertions in the media that he cannot win in the South or that black could become a self-fulfilling prophecy.

City must address real housing issue

CARBONDALE'S NEW ORDINANCE making landlords share the responsibility with tenants for zoning violations is pointless.

It is an extension of a policy that treats a symptom of the city's housing problem and not the problem itself. The ordinance, if aggressively enforced, would cost the city an inordinate amount of money that would be much better spent improving student housing conditions.

That many students want to move into R-1 zones is a undeniable indication of the low quality of most student housing. The main cause of students trying to skirt the zoning laws and to live illegally in R-1 areas is they do not want to live in dirty, dilapidated housing, as they now must.

A PROPOSAL BY the Undergraduate Student Organization to allow four unrelated people to live in R-1 areas, instead of the present limit of two, is a logical attempt to provide students with decent housing. But the necessity of such a proposal illustrates the basic problem.

Although zoning is necessary to preserve the family atmosphere of Carbondale's R-1 areas, it is presumed that they are in violation if a group of people must be considered a family. In effect, four distant cousins could legally live together in an R-1 zone.

THE ORDINANCE also includes a presumption clause, which was introduced in 1965. It states that if three people live together in an R-1, it is presumed that they are in violation of the code. If four people instead of three are found residing in the same building, the presumption is that they are a violation.

This clause is also open to abuses by unrelated people who have the same last names living together in an R-1 zone, it is presumed that they are in violation of the code. They must then prove they are related or otherwise in compliance with the ordinance, but it is unclear how the city will locate tenants in violation.

In addition of making more useless clauses to Carbondale's zoning laws, the City Council should make more of an effort to enforce ordinances that deal with the upkeep of rental property. In effect, the council should treat the disease, not the symptom.

Bakker's victims are limited to his fold

One of the last Daily Egyptian editors to break cover the surprising story that Jim Bakker had regained his clergyman credentials and once again was on the loose. The sheer again is in the sheep herder's hands. While we all nod sagely, knowing what he's up to, I wonder if we have really learned our lesson from this sad episode of American history.

If someone is telling you that God needs your money then perhaps you should wonder exactly what kind of God would be broke. Again, you can't be shared if you refuse on a sheep.

Now that the lower eight counties of Southern Illinois are without doctors who will deliver babies, hospitals and obstetricians from nearby counties are bracing themselves for a heavier workload.

“We will deliver 500 babies this year — a 40 percent increase from last year,” said Herrin Hospital Administrator Larry Fell. “We are presently operating at about capacity,” he said. “We might have to start refusing people service.”

The obstetrician shortage came into the news with the proposed closing of the obstetrics ward in the Harrisburg Medical Center April 30. But the problem has been a growing concern of local doctors for the past 10 years, with the gradual exodus of area obstetricians, midwives and general practitioners who will deliver infants.

Last year, Franklin Hospital in Benton and Pinckneyville Community Hospital discontinued their obstetrics services. Centers at DuQuoin and Cairo also folded. The Southern Illinoisan reported on Jan. 17 that obstetric services in Central Illinois may also be discontinued unless an obstetrician can be found.

As early as 1985, a group of citizens, nurses, and obstetricians tried to open a birthing center out of Union County Hospital. Dr. Roger Klam of Carbondale said the center would have provided an alternative for women who want a less restrictive birthing environment.

Klam of Carbondale said the center would have provided an alternative for women who want a less restrictive birthing environment and would provide needed obstetric care.

A birthing center in a place usually looked upon as a hospital in which women can give birth in a more homey surroundings and yet be near enough to the hospital in case of emergency.

“South of Carbondale, there is no place to have a baby,” said Gail Barfas, an obstetrics nurse at St. Joseph’s Hospital in Murphysboro and one of the coordinators of the Anna project. “We thought there should be a choice.”

But the birthing center project died in 1986 because of various administrative problems.

“We couldn’t be licensed by the (Illinois) State Health Department,” said Barfas. Kim Tutis of Carbondale, who also worked on the Anna project, said it was illegal to set up a free-standing birthing center outside of a hospital.

Both Klam and Dr. Thomas Kepferer of Murphysboro agree that a birthing center south of Carbondale would be a great idea. But neither knew of any plans to start another center to serve

Baby doctors feel insurance pinch

By Mary Wlazkowski

The highest malpractice insurance rates of any medical specialty has led to a drop in the number of obstetricians and gynecologists nationwide, with a particularly severe shortage in Southern Illinois.

“It’s just not a fun job anymore,” said a representative from the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists in Washington, D.C. The representative asked that his name not be used.

“Doctors used to be in OB GYN (obstetrics and gynecology) because they loved dealing with pregnant women and babies,” he said. “But now the malpractice insurance is too high.”

A November 1985 survey by the American Medical Association, he continued, showed that obstetricians and gynecologists are decreasing their practices. Only 25 percent would still deliver for high risk pregnancies, 14 percent did not deliver at all, 15 percent had dropped obstetrics, and 7 percent had dropped all gynecological surgery.

More surprising, said the representative, is the retirement rate for obstetricians and gynecologists. As many as 28 percent were retiring between the ages of 55-64, 21 percent between 45-54, 21 percent between 55-64 and 15 percent for doctors over 65.

“The big surprise is the 65- group,” he said. “They find out about malpractice and drop out of obstetrics before they’re too old to go into something else.”

Peggy Rutledge, staff attorney for the department of professional liability of the American College, said most doctors have already been bitten once. A 1983 survey showed that 57 percent of obstetricians had been sued at least once. In 1985, that Chamorro said the Contras "would be flexible, and smoking is possible," although the rebels preferred to meet only during the week.

In Washington, White House spokesman Martin Fleischer said, "From our standpoint the service is better, but we will find out if they're serious.

Diplomatic sources in Central America said Sandinista negotiators do not see their willingness to meet face-to-face with Contras leaders appear aimed at influencing next month's vote in Congress on more aid to the rebels.

The White House has said President Reagan will ask Congress for less than $60 million for the Contras in mainly "non-lethal" aid, which could include helicopters, military training and spare parts. Congress returns next week from recess and could vote on the aid issue in early February.

Administration officials said Reagan's asking for the relatively modest sum a drastic drop from the $270 million Secretary of State George Shultz once suggested — was aimed at keeping the Contras in the talks and making the request more palatable to Congress.

Earlier this week, Reagan authorized resumption of CIA air drops of weapons to the Contras under a previous authorization.

Barricada, the official Sandinista party newspaper, said Assistant Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco and Ricardo Wheelock, chief of army intelligence, were among the delegation that traveled to Costa Rica to seek the direct peace talks with the Contras.

"We come in the context of Esquipulas (the Central American Peace Treaty of 1987) to see if there is a desire in the Reagan administration, which we would reflect in the Contra attitude, because it is not a problem of the Contra wishes, but of the (Reagan) administration," Tinoco said upon his arrival Wednesday in San Jose.

"We come to see if there is a will to negotiate, and we will do what we can. The process is at a crucial stage."

On Saturday, Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega offered face-to-face talks with the Contras and said he would implement a series of reforms, including amnesty for about 3,300 political prisoners.

The amnesty would go into effect as soon as a cease-fire is arranged, Ortega said.

 meaningless doesn't necessarily mean that a person will develop AIDS," Ferrell said.

A positive test result does not prevent a couple from getting married. The purpose of the test is to make individuals aware of the results. Ferrell said the test is aimed at making people with AIDS think twice about having children.

The cost of marriage licenses is $13, but the cost of taking the test varies, Shields said.

The price of the test ranges from $34 to $50, depending on the doctor.

Evidence in Nofziger trial focuses on Wedtech

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ex-presidential aide Lyd Nofziger warned White House counselor Edwin Meese it would be a “hunder” not to award a $2 million Army contract to one of his lobbying clients, evidence showed Thursday.

Nofziger accused of illegally cashing in on his White House connection to win millions of dollars in business for two defense contractors and a maritime union less than a year after leaving government in January 1982.

In an April 8, 1982, note, Nofziger reminded Meese of the April 1982 campaign promise to revitalize the South Bronx, a year after leaving New York City and suggested awarding the $2 million Army contract to a former White House aide Ed Rollins.

"I think it would be a big plus for the president to go up there. I think, too, that we probably need to get a few other things done there in the next year and a half," he wrote.

"I certainly don't want some Democratic candidate for president standing where the president stood two years ago and charging that he has done nothing," Nofziger warned.

Earlier Thursday, ex-White House aide Ed Rollins testified that Nofziger frequently met with Reagan and other officials before he left government to open a consulting business with fellow Californian Mark Braug.

"People thought Lyn was very much part of the Reagan group," said Rollins, who replaced Nofziger as Reagan’s political director. "Nofziger was not only a close advisor of mine but a close advisor to many people in the White House — including the president."

To convict Nofziger of illegal lobbying, the government must prove the former aide lobbied old colleagues during a one-year ban on contacting officials about areas of "direct and substantial interest" to the agency.

In his questioning of Rollins, independent counsel James McKay tried to show that as far back as 1981, White House officials were interested in Wedtech, the now-bankrupt defense contractor.

Rollins, chairman of the Lyn McNair Defense Fund, said he vaguely recalled a few White House discussions that year about the South Bronx and Wedtech Corp. but did not remember talking about the firm with Nofziger.

McKay, however, introduced into evidence a memo Nofziger sent in October 1981 to Elizabeth Dole, then head of the White House Public Liaison Office, that praised the "South Bronx idea" — a possible reference to Wedtech.

When McKay suggested that Rollins had been less candid on the stand than he had been before a grand jury last April, Rollins shot back: "Whether I take an oath or not, I would always tell the truth."

"During McKay's questioning, Rollins tried to emphasize Nofziger's positive qualities, describing him as a "very direct communicator. He’s not a games-player."

Nofziger jotted notes during Rollins’ testimony, avoiding much direct contact with his former deputy and "very dear friend."

If convicted, Nofziger faces eight years in prison and a $40,000 fine.

SIU-C receives 10 nominations for academic vice president post

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

Ten nominations have been received for vice president for academic affairs, Jeanette Endres, chairwoman of the vice president search committee, said Wednesday.

The deadline for nominations for academic vice president is Feb. 12 and the deadline for applications is March 1, according to a memo sent to the faculty Tuesday.

The positions recently advertised in the Chronicle of Higher Education.

Bill Hall, a student member of the committee, said some of the nominations probably were received from people who know about the opening before the advertisements appeared.

Endres said some of the nominations were for people who work at the University, but declined to identify them.

Acting Vice President for Academic Affairs Benjamin Shepherd has said he is interested in the job, but said Wednesday it will be a couple of weeks before he decides whether he will apply.

Hall said a list of "desirable qualities" for the position includes:

--Recognition in an academic discipline based on scholarship and demonstrated ability;

--Successful experience in university administration;

--A well-developed philosophy of education that includes an understanding of the variety of programs and goals of a comprehensive university.

--An ability to be innovative, skillful and persistent in attaining academic goals, to provide leadership and a means of instruction, public service and research goals;

--A commitment to academic freedom and to the principles of due process;

--A commitment to the principle of affirmative action;

--The ability to be a forceful and articulate advocate for the academic community.

"The committee seems to be very committed to affirmative action," Hall said.

He said the committee invited Seymour Bryson to talk about affirmative action.

The position should be filled by July 1, according to the memo.

Applications should consist of a cover letter, a resume and the names of at least three references.

Services for crash victims this weekend

Two memorial services will be held this weekend for the three students who died in Monday's plane crash.

Mae Smith, Neely and Schubert will sponsor a candlelight vigil at 7 tonight between the two halls.

A community-wide memorial service will be held 3 p.m. Sunday at the Student Center Auditorium.

Matthew P. Brady, 19, of Kankakee, a freshman with an undecided major; Damon E. Deutschlie, 18, of Bradley, a freshman with an undecided major; and Darrell L. McChesney, 19, of Bourbonnais, a freshman in aviation maintenance technology were killed in the crash.

"We are tremendously saddened by the loss of the three young men and extend to their families and friends our heartfelt sympathy," Harvey Welch, vice president for student affairs, said.

The students were flying to Carbondale when the plane crashed short of runway 118 at Southern Illinois Airport.

The community-wide service is open to students, faculty, administration and Carbondale residents.

Southern Illinois women.

Meanwhile, Memorial Hospital of Carbondale may soon be the baby capital of Southern Illinois. George Maroney, hospital administrator, said the hospital plans to expand its facilities to make up for the obstetrics shortage.

"This year, more than 1,515 babies were born here. In one or two years, that will be up to 2,000," said Maroney.

"We are recruiting more OBs (obstetricians) and we think we will be successful for four reasons — doctors like to be with other doctors, we'll have all the facilities to support them, we are increasing the number of birthing rooms, and we have a fallback system."

Rutledge said most malpractice cases, in order of prevalence, involve injury to the head or mouth, failed sterilizations and failure to diagnose a gynecological problem.

An assistant to Ron Ireland, head of the malpractice department of the American Medical Association, said the average premium range for malpractice insurance in Illinois was between $25,900 and $46,400 per year.

Dr. Thomas Kupferer of Murphysboro said he is one of the few remaining doctors in Southern Illinois who will accept patients on public aid. "Public aid only pays one-third of the going cost for a delivery," Kupferer said. "And insurance costs are very high."

Dr. Chasal Sukha of Marion Memorial Hospital said there are a limited number of deliveries you can do, and patients who cannot pay full price. "Public aid patients are also higher risk than normal, because of poverty," Sukha added.

Larry Peil, Herrin Hospital administrator, said they are hiring nurses who accept public aid patients. "We've accepted a good part of the load. None of the doctors in eastern Illinois would take public aid patients, because reimbursement was too poor."

Many women complain that the use of fetal monitors, anesthetics, and Cesarean sections make birth too technological.

Dr. Linda Hungerford, a Murphysboro obstetrician, said the possibility of decreasing high technology in the labor room "will depend on the medical-legal situation."

"Having a baby, if everything goes right, is very simple," said Dr. Roger Klam, a Carbondale obstetrician. "As far as using too many wires, you have to remember that OBs get sued — they have the highest chance of being sued of any other doctor. There's a bit of overkill (in technology) in some cases."
All sides claim identical goal: the reduction of nuclear threats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate battle over the INF treaty pits a handful of conservatives against a formidable coalition of Democrats and Republicans, with all sides claiming the same goal — reducing the nuclear threat.

Conservatives, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the highest ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, contend they are not prepared to enact the Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty signed by President Reagan in 1987. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, their Democratic leader, Michael Gorbachev at the Washington summit Dec. 8 and say they just want to improve it.

Supporters, on the other hand, contend any move to encumber the treaty with added provisions or delay its ratification could prove disastrous.

The INF agreement would eliminate all intermediate-range superpower nuclear missiles with ranges of 300 to 3,400 miles that have been deployed in Europe. The two sides would be able to return the missiles' warheads to their stockpiles.

Those favor the treaty run the ideological gamut both outside the government and public interest groups. It is now the largest and most diverse coalition ever for an arms control agreement. Group leaders, who say, they could make the difference should the treaty run into trouble in the Senate.

Outside supporters range from Common Cause to the United Nations University of America, and inside coalition members include Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas and his Democratic counterpart, Robert Byrd of West Virginia.

Dole, a candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, is expected to begin foreign relations hearings Monday with an "opening statement" auditing the treaty and the president's role in crafting it. Many treaty supporters contend no less is at stake than Reagan's leadership of the Western alliance and the future of arms control, including the signing of a more comprehensive Strategic Defense Initiative, or SPADT.

Mayors fight Contra aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of 40 mayors, taking a rare step into the field of foreign policy, called on Congress on Friday to defeat President Reagan's planned $500 million aid program to the Nicaraguan Contras.

The mayors — heading cities ranging in population from 43,000 in Paris, Louisiana, to 38 million in Los Angeles to the 28,074 in Norwich, Conn. — urged Congress and the administration to "give peace a chance in Central America."

The peace initiative was an independent effort made during a meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors. If all 40 mayors can win, the White House announced Reagan will seek less than $50 million in mainly non-lethal aid next week for the Contras, raising prospects of congressional approval.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the request would be submitted to Congress on Tuesday.

Green, from left, Rich Clifton, Ken Kursen and Jeff Lescher, will play at Hanger 8 Sunday with Material Issue. Both are Chicago bands on a Midwest tour.

‘Big City’ bands tour Midwest

By Richard Nunez

Members of Green and Material Issue hope 13 is a lucky number. Tired of playing hometown gigs, the Chicago-area bands stop at Hanger 9 Sunday, half-way through a 13-city tour of the Midwest.

“We're trying to break away from the Chicago scene and see what the area bands are doing,” Ken Kursen, bassist for Green, said. "They are very competitive and we are trying not to get caught up in that competition."

Kursen, drummer Rich Clifton and guitarist-vocalist Jeff Lescher are promoting their album "Elaine Mackenzie," which was recently released on Chicago's independent record label, Dub Quartet.

In 1984, Green released a self-titled, do-it-yourself 7" record on the Gang Green label. "Gotta Getta Record Out," a track from that 4-song vinyl project, was later included on an Epic Records compilation of unsigned bands. Green's self-titled LP in 1986 received positive reviews from influential music publications such as Spin, Musician Magazine, CMJ New Music Report and The Village Voice.

Material Issue, consisting of Jim Ellison on guitar and vocals, Mike Zeleoko on drums and Ted Ansani on bass guitar, are supporting a recent 6-song release on Landmind Records.

Both bands are influenced by a broad spectrum of rock music that includes Elvis Presley, The Beatles, early Rolling Stones, Eddie Cochran, the Yardbirds, the Who, Jimi Hendrix, Black Sabbath and Led Zeppelin.

"People have said we've sounded like the Hollies, Televison, Cheap Trick and Tom Petty," Ellison said. "It all depends upon what frame of mind they are in and what magazine they write for."

But with all the labels that have been attached to the bands, they are still considered punk bands in an area where punk music is not very popular.

"There is a real lack of press attention on the punk bands in the Chicago area," Ellison said. "We figure that either the general public is really afraid of the punk scene or they don't like it."

"We hope that people are open-mind to punk, but also toward country as well," Kursen said. "Our first priority is to entertain people. We're full-time musicians trying to make a living."

Trident-2 submarine missile destroyed in flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) - A deadly Trident-2 submarine missile was blew up on radio command early Thursday after a malfunction less than two minutes into a spectacular predawn test flight.

The malfunction marked the first failure in nine launches.

The three-stage Trident 2 blasted off from a ground pad at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station at 5:08 a.m. EST and majestically arced east over the Atlantic Ocean, trailing a spectacular stream of brilliant flame from its solid fuel first-stage motor.

The initial phases of the launch appeared normal to the unaided eye, but the 44-foot missile disappeared from view seconds after the third-stage appeared to ignite. It was at this point the self-destruct signal apparently was sent, ripping the missile open and ending the flight.

A witness said that through binoculars, "It looked weird. I thought something was wrong," just before the rocket disappeared.

"We had an unsuccessful launch this morning of the Trident-2," an Air Force spokesman said. "The cause of the malfunction cannot be determined until telemetry has been studied. There were no personnel casualties and no damage to the launch facilities."

He said when the malfunction was detected, "a destruct signal was sent" to the rocket by range safety officers 2 minutes and 43 seconds after launch.

"War Games" did happen, report says

LONDON (UPI) — For six minutes in 1979, a real life "War Games" scenario occurred at a U.S. defense center. Nuclear-armed B-52s readied for takeoff in response to a missile attack a computer said was in progress.

The incident was one of a number of nuclear accidents and near accidents detailed in a report released Thursday by the University of Bradford's School of Peace Studies.

The report, titled "A Handbook of Nuclear Weapons Accidents," said on Nov. 7, 1979, "a technician accidentally loaded a computer test tape programmed with simulated attack scenarios on the United States into the real early warning computer. The tape should have been loaded into a simulation computer."

"For six minutes, the error was undetected" while nuclear-armed B-52s readied for takeoff in response to the "nuclear attack," the report said.

The movie "War Games" had a similar premise, where a teenage computer whiz taps a test tape programmed with simulated attack scenarios on the United States into the real early warning computer. The tape should have been loaded into a simulation computer.

The movie "War Games" had a similar premise, where a teenage computer whiz taps a test tape programmed with simulated attack scenarios on the United States into the real early warning computer.

In another U.S. incident described by the report, a Titan II nuclear missile crew was performing a routine launch drill in November 1980 at McConnell Air Force Base in Kansas when a real launch sequence suddenly began, threatening to fire the 9 megaton weapon.

The crew managed to prevent the launch by hastily disconnecting the main power supply.

"It was," a launch control officer said, "the only way to keep it from taking off."

The researchers said nuclear accidents are inevitable, because of either human or computer error. The simplest of computer errors can have grave consequences, they said.

On June 2 and June 6, 1980, a computer error caused by a faulty 46-cent microchip caused the U.S. Early Warning System to twice warn of incoming Soviet missiles, prompting American nuclear forces to go on alert.

The report lists more than 300 American, Soviet and British nuclear accidents to systems, missiles and near-accidents that have occurred since 1945.

Some of the more recent examples include:

— Jan. 10, 1984: At a Minuteman nuclear missile launch control center at Warren Air Force Base in Wyoming, a computer indicated a Minuteman missile was about to launch itself.

— Jan. 10, 1987: A British military truck transporting nuclear depth charges to a Royal Navy storage depot crashed on an icy road and overturned. Armed soldiers and police enforced a one-mile security radius around the vehicle — a cordon that stayed in effect for 11 hours.
Dean named to national council

By Edward Raha
Staff Writer

Nancy L. Quisenberry, associate dean of the College of Education, is one of 300 education specialists chosen by the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education to serve on the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

The council, comprised of classroom teachers, education specialists and university experts in teacher education, is responsible for reviewing and granting accreditation to university teacher education programs across the country.

Quisenberry, a College of Education faculty member since 1971, earned her bachelor's and master's degrees at Indiana State University, Terre Haute, in 1960 and 1962. She earned her doctoral degree at Indiana University, Bloomington, in 1971.

Quisenberry served on the previous accreditation council administered by the AACTE. She said the present council has established higher standards for university teacher education programs.

Quisenberry said teams of education experts and university teachers visit a campus for nine days to review its education program. The process begins with the review of a self-study report prepared by the university.

The team also reviews the governance and content of programs and examines libraries, students' transcripts and advancement programs, faculty qualifications.

According to Quisenberry, "We make our students aware they are in an accredited program." She said, "When a transfer student comes from an institution that doesn't have complete accreditation we sometimes don't accept their classes.'

The council is responsible for reviewing each university's three-year term on the board. Quisenberry said she expects to begin reviewing one institution each semester.

Although she will not be part of the team evaluating SIU's program, Quisenberry said her tenure on the board will make her more aware of what evaluators will be looking for when teacher education at SIU is evaluated.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Attorney General Edwin Meese, announcing new data that shows how many people arrested for serious crimes test positive for illegal drugs, said it's up to local governments to fund necessary treatment programs.

At a news conference to announce the results of the new study, Meese said, "Overwhelming evidence now exists that the drug use to criminal activity."

"According to the data, from January to October 1987, 70 percent of the 35,000 men arrested for serious offenses in 11 major U.S. cities had used drugs. The urine tests were administered voluntarily to more than 2,000 people arrested between last June and November."

But, Meese said, it falls to local governments to shoulder the burden of increasing need for drug treatment programs. According to the study, most of those tested were charged with such drug crimes as burglary, grand larceny and assault, leading officials to believe they were breaking the law to fund their drug habits.

"The responsibility for treatment... is at the state level," Meese said. "The main responsibility is at the local level."

Meese, despite complaints in Congress that the administration is not spending enough on drug interdiction efforts, said the federal government has vastly increased its own contribution to the war on drugs, including doubling the spending on enforcement efforts, and increased research and information.

"We believe this is something that both levels of government have to cooperate on," he said, "And we're certainly doing it."

"But with all the law enforcement in the world, you're never going to stop the use of drugs," Meese said. "I would hope that if local agencies would increase on the same percentage basis... if there was a comparable effort to the federal government's, then there would be great strides made."

The continuing testing was sponsored by the National Institute for Justice. The tests were performed in Washington, D.C., San Diego, New Orleans, Chicago, New York, Portland, Ore., Los Angeles, Detroit, Houston, Phoenix, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Indianapolis.

The study also showed: - Cocaine use has surpassed that of marijuana in New York City and the District of Columbia.
- Heroin remains a significant problem, 10 percent or more, in New York, Washington, Detroit, San Diego, Chicago, Portland and Los Angeles.
- Those who tested positive for multiple drugs usually showed marijuana as one of the substances. But in New York, Washington and San Diego, at least 30 percent of those arrested were found to be positive for two or more drugs other than marijuana.
- The use of barbiturates, methaqualone, Valium, benzo- and illegal methadones in most of the cities was less than expected. Methadone, however, was found in 10 percent of the tests in New York, and Valium in 13 percent of the Indianapolis samples.

Mediators may be used in polygamist standoff

Kathryn Collard, both former Singer family lawyers. Singer’s widow, Vickie, and her son-in-law, Adam Swapp, both charged in the weekend bombing of a Mormon chapel, are “mystics,” Spence said. “They’re totally foreign to the FBI. They believe they’ve got revelations from God.”

Janice K. Stoner, 31, Wife jailed; admits killing her husband

Outside mediators should be brought in to talk with members of a polygamist family who barricaded themselves in a farmhouse to avoid arrest, two former family lawyers say.

The armed standoff between the 15-member family, including one child ranging in age from 10 months to 17 years, and scores of lawmen entered its ninth day Thursday with no movement toward a settlement or surrender of the two bombing suspects indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury.

Wife jailed; admits killing her husband

MOUNT CARMEL (UPI) — Janice K. Stoner, 31, of Mount Carmel, pleaded guilty to first-degree murder Thursday in the Oct. 22, 1987, shooting death of her husband, Kenneth, as he lay in bed in their trailer home.

Investigating officers said she told them she walked into the bedroom carrying a .22-caliber rifle and told her husband “sometimes you get in one of these moods, and I feel like shooting you.” She said she fired two shots.

Kenneth Stoner was struck in the chest and back.

Circuit Judge Robert W. Whitmer accepted the plea agreement presented in Wabash County Circuit Court Thursday by public defender Leonard Koger. Under terms of the agreement, Mrs. Stoner was sentenced to 20 years in prison, to be followed by three years’ mandatory supervised release.

She could have been sentenced to life imprisonment, but Koger appealed for leniency, saying she has expressed remorse, that it was unlikely she would commit another serious crime.

Toy cat dolls ‘hot’ in L.A.

LO S ANGELES (UPI) — Detectives are baffled by a new crime spree where burglars are snatching out cat windows with a .22-caliber rifle and stealing expensive stereos or the cats themselves but instead going for Garfield dolls.

Four of the five furly likenesses of the popular cartoon character complete with suction cup feet are being stolen from cars along residential streets every week, police Detective Patrick Green said Thursday.

“Can you believe it. In all my years on the force I’ve never seen anything like it. They never broke into cars to steal pet rocks,” Green said. “Garfield dolls have become the latest fad.”

The detective said he has seen two Garfield dolls sell for about $10, began disappearing from cars the first week in January.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The most divisive foreign policy issue of Ronald Reagan's presidency — the Contra guerrilla war in Nicaragua — entered or death struggle in Congress this week.

Reagan says the decision on aiding the Contras will determine if the Soviets effectively plant a communist flag on the American mainland — "another Cuba."

Congressional leaders warn the decision amounts to a choice between a prolonged, inconclusive war in Central America and a reasonable chance of peace under a framework not made in Washington, but one which won the Nobel Peace Prize for President Oscar Arias of Costa Rica.

"This is a gut issue for the president," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., the point man in the House opposing Reagan. "The administration will pull out every stop to win."

Secretary of State George Shultz said last year the administration was considering asking for $700 million in military aid to the Contras.

The White House, aware of the split between President and Congress, is pressing for $400 million in military and other aid. The president, Hamilton said, "probably" has no more than 40 swing votes on the issue in the House and Reagan's decision to cut down the aid figure is an apparent attempt to pull in their support.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said Reagan cut back his aid request to encourage the peace process, but also maintain the Contras as a legitimate force during months of negotiation.

"My impression is generally it is a very, very close vote," Hamilton said. "My guess would be the extent to which Ortega implements the concessions that he made in San Jose will be critical in determining the outcome of the vote," Lugar said.

Reagan said in his State of the Union address Monday, "Without the freedom fighters, the hope for democracy in Nicaragua will be lost. The consolidation of totalitarian power will be complete and the Soviets will have already succeeded in establishing another Cuba, this time on the American mainland."

"This is a gut issue for the president. The administration will pull out every stop to win."

— Lee Hamilton

The showdown vote on resuming or denying military aid to the Contras comes in the House on Feb. 3, in the Senate the next day.

If Reagan loses, he can ask for it again this year, but not under rules governing this vote, which allow a quick, up-or-down verdict. The lame-duck president's second request would likely be stalled indefinitely.

As for the showdown vote, Hamilton said, "There are possibly no more than 40 swing votes on the issue in the House, and Reagan's decision to cut down the aid figure is an apparent attempt to pull in their support. He enjoys strong support in the Senate, and a victory in the House should ensure a final decision there."

But the real swing vote may be cast by President Daniel Ortega during the peace talks in San Jose, Costa Rica. At a meeting of Central American presidents last week, Ortega agreed to the primary demands of the Contras — direct talks on a cease-fire.

Ortega has lifted the state of emergency under which thousands of opponents were jailed, although White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said he is still rounding up others.

The talks are planned about the time of the congressional vote.

"My guess would be the extent to which Ortega implements the concessions that he made in San Jose will be critical in determining the outcome of the vote," Hamilton said.

Reagan said in his State of the Union address Monday, "Without the freedom fighters, the hope for democracy in Nicaragua will be lost. The consolidation of totalitarian power will be complete and the Soviets will have already succeeded in establishing another Cuba, this time on the American mainland."

PHOENIX (UPI) — Embattled Gov. Evan Mecham will plead not guilty to felony charges that he concealed a $350,000 campaign loan and then lied about it, his attorney said Thursday.

Mecham, 47, was indicted Jan. 8 on six felony charges of perjury, fraud and filing false campaign contribution and expense reports, to be arraigned Friday in Maricopa County Superior Court.

The governor's brother and campaign bookkeeper, Willard Mecham, 67, was indicted on three counts on the same charges and is to be arraigned with his younger brother.

The brothers will be tried jointly, said Murray Miller, who represents them.

Also on Friday, a state House select committee will resume hearings on the possible impeachment of Mecham. During the committee's first session Wednesdy night, Arizona's top police officer testified he disobeyed Mecham's order not to cooperate with the attorney general's investigation of an alleged threat made by one Mecham aide against another. Mecham, who is expected to testify before the committee later, declined to comment on Milstead's testimony.

The governor, who also almost certainly will face a recall election in May, had said he would not comment on his conversation with Milstead until his DFS director produced tape recording.

In the financing matter, a state grand jury indicted Mecham for allegedly hiding a loan.
Mom charged with neglect; daughter will lose both feet

GARY, Ind. (UPI) — A 24-year-old woman was charged with child neglect and ordered held on $90,000 bond Thursday as doctors in Chicago prepared to amputate the feet of her 9-year-old daughter, who was left locked in an unheated, garbage-littered house for days.

Darwin Britt, 34, appeared in Lake County Superior Court and was charged with neglect of a dependent — a felony that carries a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison.

Judge Richard Maroc ordered her held on $90,000 bond and scheduled a hearing in the case for Friday.

Britt appeared before Maroc just hours before her daughter, Darlwin Carlisle, was to undergo surgery at the University of Chicago's Children's Hospital.

A hospital spokesman said Thursday that there was no longer any hope of saving the child's feet, which had become gangrenous because of frostbite.

"They found that there was no blood at all going to her feet," hospital spokesman John Easton said.

He said both of the child's legs would be amputated at mid-calf. Surgery was scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

Doctors said, because the amputation will be below the knee, the girl will retain enough flexibility to participate in most normal activities after her recovery.

Nurses at the hospital said young Darlwin's room was packed with gifts and cards from well-wishers — including a dozen teddy bears and a menagerie of stuffed animals.

The child was left locked and barefoot in a second-floor bedroom of a garbage-strewn, abandoned house in Gary for at least two days, authorities said. Utilities officials said the house had been without heat, water and electricity for several days.

The girl was found Sunday by Jeff Griffin of Buchanan, Mich., who was boarding up the house for the Magna Mortgage Co., which had foreclosed on the house.

The house was littered with human waste, drug paraphernalia and broken glass, Griffin said.

Mom jailed for dancer’s suicide

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — A district judge sentenced Teresa Jackson to one year in jail and two years of probation for driving her 9-year-old daughter to suicide by forcing her to dance nude in nightclubs.

At the end of a one-hour hearing, Broward County Circuit Judge Arthur Jackson also sentenced Jackson, 41, to three years probation. The judge said she must continue therapy for what one psychiatrist called a "psychological disorder."

Jackson was convicted Oct. 30 of procuring sexual performances by a minor, child abuse and forgery for changing her daughter's birth certificate to show she was 18 and old enough to dance nude.

She was the first parent convicted in a child's suicide case in the death penalty was convicted of mental child abuse in a criminal trial, also marked the first time the Florida Supreme Court gave Jackson a reduced sentence because her mother.

Jackson testified at the hearing that she missed her daughter to a psychotherapist, very much. Mancini was 17 when she died.

"I don't know how to put it into words, it's such a terrible thing. I can't believe that I don't want to impose my feelings on other people," she said. "I tried hard as I could and I probably made some mistakes and sometimes I wonder whether something I did or didn't do contributed to her suicide."

SIU skydiver places third in collegiate competition

By Steven Walsh
Staff Writer

A member of the SIU Skydivers Club was the only civilian to place in an individual category at a meet dominated by the West Point and Air Force military academies.

David Aut finished third in the novice style category in the Collegiate National Parachute Championships held Dec. 28-30 at the Marana Skydiving Center in Marana, Ariz.

"I really feel we were one of the best and most aggressive teams besides the military academies," club president Roland Aut, David's brother, said.

Roland Aut, with 680 jumps behind him, finished ninth overall and was the highest placing civilian in the accuracy category.

Team members Michael Grubb and Joseph Rokes also competed. Three other members who traveled to Artesia were not eligible. Grubb and Rokes each had 25 previous jumps, which qualified them for the meet.

"They finished about halfway in the overall standings, Roland Aut said. "If we can put those same jumps along with our accuracy, we're going to be amazing." He said the club hopes to return to the championship meet next year.

Swim teams favored against Missouri

By Steven Walsh
Staff Writer

The swimming and diving teams, coming off strong performances against nationally ranked Nebraska last weekend, will face Missouri at 7 p.m. today and Cincinnati at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Recreation Center pool.

The men's and women's teams are favored against the Missouri teams, which come into the meet with identical 1-3 records. Both Missouri squads lost convincingly to Nebraska last Friday, while on Saturday the Saluki women defeated Nebraska and the men lost by one point.

Coach Doug Ingram said he doesn't want the Salukis to get overconfident. "We should definitely be favored, but anything can happen," he said. "Our approach has to be to not to look past them to Cincinnati."

Ingram said the Salukis have a strong swimming program and will be a tough opponent for his team.

"They're (Cincinnati) not ranked right now, but they've ended up in the Top 20 for the past two or three seasons," Ingram said.

Last season, the Saluki men defeated Cincinnati 113-102; the women lost 127-77.

Ingram said the aquatic teams' improvement is a result of a rigorous training schedule. The swimming teams spent three weeks training in Colorado Springs, Colo., during Christmas break, participating in a high-altitude training program in Colorado Springs, Colo.

"The training has definitely helped," Ingram said.

Cornell to use Ohio meet as practice for MVC contest

By Stephanie Wood
Staff Writer

The men's track team will use Saturday's competition against Ohio State and Penn State as a practice session for a conference championship meet that is 24 days away.

"We're preparing for the Missouri Valley Championship," Coach Bill Cornell said. "We look to get a little better every week."

Cornell said he doesn't expect the team to win Saturday's meet, which will be in Columbus, Ohio.

"Winning doesn't concern us," Cornell said. "We'd rather compete against tough competition in preparation for the MVC."

Sophomore Leonard Vance, who placed first in the triple jump last week at Purdue, is expected to be a key performer. The team also placed second and fourth in that event.

"We were outstanding in the triple jump," Cornell said. Cornell said he is also looking for some of his athletes to qualify for the national indoor championships at Ohio. Senior Jon Harrer is expected to qualify in the shot-put, he said.

"Harrer could qualify for nationals this year," Cornell added.

Last week the team competed without several athletes, including senior distance runner Andy Pettigrew who was stuck in England.

The women's track team will be in its first meet since Dec. 12 when it competes today in the nine-team Purdue Invitational in West Lafayette, Ind.

"Our biggest weakness has been that all the other schools have been in school for a week," Coach Don DeNoon said. "I'm looking to basically know where my athletes are after Christmas break."

The team is aiming for a second-place finish behind Purdue, DeNoon said.

"Purdue has to be the favorite because they won the Big Ten last year," he said.

Key performers will be senior Vivian Sineu in the mile and 1,000-meter run, and Christiana Philippou in the long jump and triple jump and Dora Kyriacou in the 400-meter dash, DeNoon said.

The team's weakness will be the shot-put, DeNoon said.

"We have no there this year," he said. "The field is definitely wide open."

Jimmy 'the Greek' Snyder halted syndicated column

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Jimmy "the Greek" Snyder, fired as a television analyst for CBS Sports after saying black athletes are genetically superior, has remained writing his syndicated newspaper column this week, a spokesman at the syndicate said Thursday.

The column, which normally is offered three times a week to about 100 newspapers nationwide, was not written this week, but an accompanying daily sports betting line continued, said North America Syndicate spokesman Ted Hannah.

The column has been in syndication since 1971 and the hall appeared to be temporary, but Snyder did not return calls to his New York office and could not be reached for comment.

A spokesman for the Washington law firm of Laxalt, Washington, Perito and Dubuc, which represents Jimmy the team office and could not, said Wednesday that no clients of the syndicated column had called to discuss the situation.

"Honest ... we have not had a single call from a single newspaper about it," said Allen. "We have not had a single inquiry at all."

Allen said the editorial board at the syndicate discussed the situation, but decided not to take action against Snyder.

Gymnasts in dual meet at Ohio

By Stephanie Wood

The men's gymnastics team is looking to improve its overall score from 262.15 to 264 at its first dual meet of the season today against Ohio State.

"Our success is going to be measured in terms of our improvement," Coach Bill Meade said.

Snyder, an oddsmaker who has a one-year contract with CBS reportedly worth $750,000, was fired last Saturday after saying in a television interview Friday that blacks are better athletes because of their "bigger thighs," which he attributed to slave owners who would "breed his big black (man) to his big woman."

During the interview with local NBC affiliate WRC-TV, Snyder also said if blacks "take over coaching like everybody wants them to, there's not going to be anything left for white people."

CBS said it received hundreds of angry calls about Snyder's comments, and fired him the next day, but Allen said Wednesday that no clients of the syndicated column had called to discuss the situation.

"We have not had a single call from a single newspaper about it," said Allen. "We have not had a single inquiry at all."

Allen said the editorial board at the syndicate discussed the situation, but decided not to take action against Snyder.

Salukis' patience to be tried against Redbirds' defense

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

The men's basketball team's patience will be tested on defense against Illinois State at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Normal.

"The big thing will be our ability to handle their defense," Coach Rich Herrin said.

After facing a Bradley defense that allows the most points in the Missouri Valley, 86 ppg, the Salukis face the league's stingiest defense. Illinois State, playing with Drake, allows a Valley low of 68 ppg. ISU is holding Valley opponents to a conference best .408 shooting percentage.

The Redbirds, 9-6 overall and 3-1 in the Valley, are beginning to play well and are tied for first in the conference after surviving a rocky start.

Before the season began, ISU coach Bob Doane said ISU needed help from his team. A 1-2-2 press was reinstated for the beginning of the season.

After three games, senior guard Todd Starks, who set ISU season records for assists and steals last season, was dismissed from the team for undisclosed reasons. Sophomore guard Sam Starich had knee surgery in November and is out for the season. Senior guard and forward Matt Taylor missed five games with a stress fracture in his right leg.

To make matters worse, the Redbirds played the toughest schedule thus far, according to Jeff Sagarin of the USA Today.

The Redbirds' play has been erratic during the first half of the season. They lost their first three games and then won four.

Their inconsistent play was characterized by their showing in the All-College Tournament in Oklahoma City, Okla. They lost Iowa State's 59-48 in the opening game before losing to Oklahoma, 107-66.

The trouncing didn't phase the Redbirds. In the next game, they beat Bradley, 85-74, in Peoria. Since then they have won two of three Valley games at home.

Before the season, Doane said the Redbirds would be as good as his four seniors played.

Guard Jeff Harris is scoring 15.8 ppg. shooting 44 percent from three-point range and 69 percent at the line. After missing six games because of surgery, Tapborn is scoring 10.2 ppg. Forward Tony Holifield is averaging 14 points and 7.7 rebounds.

"The key thing about Illinois State was the graduation of Amy Hill," SIU-C Coach Cindy Scott said. "Without her they have to play more as a team, with a more balanced offense."

Sycamores' coach Andrea Myers engineered two conference upset, defeating Southwest Missouri 79-70 and Iowa State 85-56. Vaskerko had 24 points and 12 rebounds against the Redbirds.

"Coach Myers deserves credit for a great job," Scott said. "Some questioned their non-conference schedule, but their victory over Illinois State proved they are for real.

The Salukis have won the last past meetings with Illinois State.

Before the women's basketball team had the chance to absorb a loss to Illinois State, it was time to prepare for another Gateway Conference contender.

Indiana State invades the Arena Saturday evening for a 7:35 tipoff.

The Sycamores' 12-2 start is one of its best ever, thanks in part to an imposing front line.

Senior forward Tonsee Kayzer leads Indiana State with a 17.5-point scoring average. She's backed up by 4-foot-11 center Amy Vanderkolk and junior Lori Castetter, who are scoring 10.5 and 14.4 ppg respectively.

It's a bird, it's a plane, it's Rocky Marciano! Hawkins' 42 points propelled Bradley to a 99-85 win over the Salukis Thursday night as the Salukis suffered another loss. Hawkins' 21 first-half points, along with center Luke Jackson's 12 points gave the Redbirds a 53-46 lead at halftime. The Salukis shot 30 percent in the half, while Bradley hit 52 percent.

At times, Hawkins surpassed Mitchell Anderson and became Bradley's all-time leading scorer with 2,757 points. Anderson played for Bradley from 1978 to 1982. Hawkins did it in 500 fewer shots than Anderson. Hawkins is tied with John Shumway for fourth place on the MVC career-scoring list.

Six minutes into the second half, Bradley hit three consecutive three-pointers to stretch the lead to 72-52. With a little more than a minute left, Randy House hit the first of three straight Saluki three-pointers. The third, from Sterling Mahan, cut the Redbirds' lead to 86-53 with 29 seconds remaining.

The Salukis were unable to take advantage of a missed free throw from Hawkins with 19 seconds left. Donald Powell's free throw with nine seconds left ended the scoring. Middletown led the Salukis with 28 points. Kai Nurberger hit 20, including four three-pointers. House scored 14 and Mahan had 11.

Illinois State ran a textbook offense, skillfully switched defensive alignments, and sent the SIU-C women's basketball team reeling before 78 fans Thursday at the Arena.

The Redbirds placed four players in double figures and turned a nine-point halftime advantage into a 79-59 runaway Gateway Conference victory, moving into first with a 7-4 league record.

"I'm pleasantly pleased to be where we are," Illinois State coach Jill Hutchins said. "Certainly this is the best team we've had in three years. This is a beautiful, enjoyable team." The Redbirds are led by Susan Wellman, who won a point guard battle with 18 points and seven rebounds. Russell Charmoney added 16, followed by Amber Lindbeck's 12 and Pam Tanner's 13.

With deadly accuracy, Illinois State dismantled SIU-C's overextended man-to-man defense, shooting 57.7 percent from the field.

"We were coming in they could shoot it, and they proved it," SIU-C coach Cindy Scott said. "They totally outplayed us on both ends of the floor." Wellman was open underneath the basket throughout the game, turning a 7-1 advantage, shooting 77.7 percent from the field.

"We put a screen on the paint and they got a lot of uncontested shots because of those good screens." Scott said.

The Salukis fell to 10-5 overall, 6-2 in the conference. Bridgett Bonds led SIU-C with 14 points and seven rebounds. Dana Friszpatrick and Fonda Seal each had 12 points.

Although Illinois State started the game in a man-to-man defense, it showed none after building a 13-point advantage, 54-41, on Govan's inside bucket at 11:15 remaining in the game. After that, Illinois State alternated defenses, getting 11 steals and causing 20 SIU-C turnovers.

Dave Phillips, Missouri Valley Conference supervisor of officials, will speak to students interested in becoming game officials at 5:30 p.m. Thursday in Room 404 at the Recreation Center.

Phillips will discuss "what you have to do as an official," with a focus on basketball games, after an intramural officials meeting that begins at 4:30 p.m.

Phillips was behind the plate in Game 7 of the World Series when a controversial call was made, which a writer showed on instant replay to be an easy call.

"We make mistakes, everyone does, but most of the time (referees) make the right call," Phillips said Thursday during a phone interview.

"There were six controversial games," he said.

"Sometimes instant replay proves you're wrong, but you work as well as you can, do the best you can." Of all the games Phillips has umpired, he said the best was in 1981.

"The '81 Series was the first time the Cards had been involved with a long time," he said. The 1982 Series also was the first time referring was selected on merit only, Phillips said. "It was a great series, it was special time. Phillips' father, who died in 1983, also attended the game and it was a series Phillips said he would never forget.

Phillips said he plans to start a training camp in October. He said the camp would emphasize training people for careers as officials in the major college ranks.

Some boxing experts have suggested that Mike Tyson will punch Larry Holmes silly. Many boxing fans view this fight as nothing more than a preliminary bout before the 21-year-old Tyson squares off against Michael Spinks.

There is a feeling that Holmes is just getting in the way of a Tyson-Spinks superfight.

People are looking at Holmes as saying that he has no business in the ring. Holmes, 36, is old enough to be Tyson's father. It is not the first time the people have not been in Holmes' corner.

Over the years, Holmes has had to be his own promoter. He has endured charges that he never has fought anyone. While he was on all challenges during his championship reign, the public has always been convinced that he was as good as he said he was.

At times, Holmes tried to be something more than the fighter who mostly stuck his foot in his mouth. Incidents like the time he mowed down former champion Rocky Marciano only worsened Holmes' image.

More than anything, Holmes suffered from a lack of charisma rather than a lack of boxing skills. He didn't have the flair of a Muhammad Ali or the charm of a Sugar Ray Leonard. Holmes was not flashy, didn't have the style the public wanted from a champion. All he did was knock out opponent after opponent in his 46-fight career.

"He collected a whopping $51.4 million for the 62-11-1 record that probably isn't the reason for his comeback. His real appeal will keep him financially successful for the rest of his life. Like so many athletes, Holmes is happy to return to his glory days even though his skills have eroded. Fans don't like to see him lose."
