Homecoming election tally nullified

The Student Programming Council and Undergraduate Student Government, which called a Student Programming Council meeting Wednesday to announce the cleanup of four candidates who were receiving complaints from voters, decided it was against its rules to nullify the elections.

"The preliminary elections held Tuesday night were conducted according to the rules laid down for the Student Programming Council and the Undergraduate Student Government," said Kris Fabian, SPC homecoming chair, who were the candidates who were strictly not allowed to campaign in the Student Center during voting.

"The candidates who were found guilty of violating the rules included candidates running for Student Programming Council and the Undergraduate Student Government," said Fabian. "They didn't know what to do when they saw the candidates campaigning inside the Student Center," Fabian said.

" Мне upper-level management - cleanup of four candidates and the Student Center during voting, preliminary homecoming king and queen elections, and the extension of the Student Center for the upcoming term."

Amie Rieber, executive chair of SPC, said, "Both the Undergraduate Student Government and SPC were receiving complaints from voters." Fabian said, "It was one word against another, so myself and three other SPC officials agreed to nullify the entire election."

"According to Christina Varots, SPC homecoming advisor, some of the SPC volunteers working at the election tables were unsure of the rules involving campaigning in the Student Center during voting."

"House votes down portion of Medicare Catastrophic illness coverage reconsidered"

WASHINGTON (UP) - The House voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to repeal Medicare catastrophic illness coverage, erasing the landmark law after only a year because of opposition from senior citizens it was intended to help.

The Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act, the largest expansion of benefits in Medicare and the third to pass in 24 years, adopted last year with bipartisan support, was killed by resistance to a surtax paid by higher-income beneficiaries.

The House voted 360-66 to repeal, and a proposal to restore some benefits - including one for prescription drugs - died on a second vote of 269-156.

The action followed months of protest by the elderly supported by nearly Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and other House leaders. It was supported by House district by angry senior citizens.

The program, intended to protect an extended illness from wiping out an older person's savings, was in high demand among President Ronald Reagan's second term. At his insistence, all costs were paid by the beneficiaries. Noriega regime: U.S. troops blocked efforts to stop revolt

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Gen. Manuel Noriega appeared to be consolidating his power Wednesday and the governments renewed charges that the United States instigated Tuesday's coup attempt and blocked efforts to quash the revolt. Noriega, the de facto ruler of Panama indicted on U.S. drug trafficking charges, raised his arms in a victory salute Wednesday as the bullet-scarred military headquarters building where the uprising was centered. There was little evidence in Panama City that the failed coup attempt did any harm to downtown areas, which were filled with shoppers and vehicles and most shops were open.

BERLIN, (UPI) — Eighteen East German refugees who were sheltered at the U.S. embassy in East Berlin agreed to leave Wednesday after the communist government promised to consider their wish to emigrate to the West, a U.S. spokesman said. The 10 adults and eight children were said to be the first group of refugees to leave the U.S. embassy.

Bush offers Polish additional $200 million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush increased his offer of economic aid to Poland by $200 million Wednesday, responding to a plea from the Polish government as Democrats in Congress urged greater support for reform in Eastern Europe. Pressured to do more to promote political and economic change, the White House announced that Bush would seek the $200 million for a $1 billion economic stabilization fund sought by the new non-communist government in Warsaw. Moreover, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Bush would work with leaders of other countries to raise the full $1 billion by the end of the year.

Senate prepares to pass flag legislation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate prepared Wednesday to pass legislation making it a crime to desecrate the American flag, brushing aside protests that nothing should be done or that a constitutional amendment is needed. Reaching to a June 21 Supreme Court decision that a flag burning in political protest in Texas was protected free speech, the legislation was voted to outlaw defacing, burning or trampling the flag or placing any object on the ground. A conviction would be punished by a maximum $1,000 fine, a year in jail or both.

Man apprehended on I-57 carrying 90 lbs. of marijuana

LOUISVILLE, Ill. (UPI) — A Chicago man, stopped on Interstate 57 in southern Illinois authorities called a major traffic stop, was found to have 90 pounds of marijuana worth an estimated $200,000 hidden under the front seat of his car. The man, identified as Pedro Ortiz, 21, was charged Tuesday with possession of marijuana in excess of one pound and marijuana paraphernalia. Ortiz's attorney, the State's Attorney backhanded the man and said the man would be arraigned in a St. Louis Circuit Court in Clay County. Another Ortiz was stopped Tuesday morning near the Edgewood exit on Interstate 57.

Conditions in Germany topic of international author's talk

By Mario Millikin
Staff Writer

Internationally recognized author Johannes von Thadden addressed current political and economic conditions of Germany Tuesday as part of a two-week lecture tour of various U.S. universities.

"If I'd been here a year ago, I don't think I could have told you too much," von Thadden said. "The situation in East Germany has changed drastically over the past 12 months."

Identifying the situation in Germany as more than an internal problem, von Thadden said Americans don't have a clear understanding of the extent of hardship encountered. For an East German family, giving up a nice home and stable job in exchange for human rights is a rough but necessary condition.

"The von Thadden lecture was sponsored by the Alliance Speakers Program of the Atlantic Council, a national center for education and formulation of policy recommendations on the problems and opportunities common to developed democracies.

The von Thadden lecture was hosted by the Columbus Club of Commerce here. His talk was an in-depth look at the situation in East Germany as well as a glimpse into the future of the nation.

The film shows the complex relationships between a husband and wife (played by Peter Gallagher and Andie MacDowell), the wife's sister (Laura San Giacomo), who is having an affair with Gallagher, and an old friend of Gallagher's (James Spader), whose mysterious behavior attracts both women.

As far as cast goes, this is it. MacDowell's therapist appears briefly at the beginning and end of the film but otherwise no one else is shown; no old friends, no family members, no waitresses in the restaurants and no house pets with cute spots. The production is so small one almost expects a company how at the end.

This is also a quiet movie. There is no loud and obnoxious soundtrack and very little background noise. Long pauses in the conversations between people show the silence is unsettling at times, but generally it is realistic and effective.

The film also manages to get by without a significant body count, a car chase or an exploding warehouse. The whole focus is on the four people, but the film always maintains an edge. Despite the simple premise, the movie doesn't become as complacent or as sweet as TV's "thirtysomething."

There's a new fare on the Horizon:

In celebration of our new Horizon trains, we're introducing Horizon Fares. They're some of the best fares we've offered in the Midwest. It works like this: Buy a one-way ticket at the regular price (with no change of trains) and we'll bring you back home for just $7. That's right, $7. Go ahead, surprise Mom and Dad. Make Mom and Dad happy. And return for just $7.

Because the Horizon fleet is brand new, you'll enjoy modern, up-to-date equipment. Really comfortable seats. Spacious aisles. Terrific snacks and meals. Horizon Fare seats are limited, so call your travel agent or Amtrak at 1-800-USA-RAIL. And start expanding your horizons.

From: good report. October 13, 1989 through December 14, 1989. From good on selected routes. Some restrictions may apply.

Student unrepresentative of campus on Halloween, football issues

Well the answer that is commonly given is "your Assistant Academic and Student Government are here to help you." Then I turn around and see that the Student Government supported the Halloween Bagpipe Statement. They did say a few good justifications for their support, but like many other things I did not look to securing the student body that there will be something to replace this event—that is, something that would remove the�Crow or the Bows, Bugs Bunny!"

Then I wanted to see what other actions would be taken by groups, particularly student groups and I found that not only would the USG support these actions, but they decided that they would help make it public.

They approved a media campaign that would post up flyers in college campuses across the state that I know potential potential potential potential Halloween victims that the "party is over."

The campaign would also include television public service announcements. In fact, this past Oct, 3 DE they tell us exactly what we are about this part of the deal. So not only did they enjoy what for the potential potential Halloween victims but they were excited about killing the word. Why don't they just get up there and say "hey America—look what we've done to SIU-C, and we've just begun!"

The student government stated some more attention when the Graduate and Professional Students Councils wanted to strengthen their system. They wanted to eliminate our football team last month.

Their justification for this was in part based on the fact that this is a costly program, $500,000 a year according to their report.

"Nothing is more important to us than the way of life that would be created. We're going to cut tuition! Never!"

They're probably going to decide to tear down the football stadium and expand the parking lot instead.

Back to the question of our potential Halloween victims, what will students do on the weekend of Halloween if they don't feel like attending a "Horror" show? What will we do when the campus is going to be closed around next fall? Will the USG and GPSC suggest that we give up our potential Halloween victims or any Halloween Bagpipe Statement?"

Cubs are not even close to being a 'dynasty,'

In Friday's DE, Daniel Wallenberg predicts the Cubs dynasty and a Cardinal slide. It appears that he has some support from the SIU fans (few Cubs fans) are existing in 1984 and using tony syntax at appropriate. Before really enrolling at SIU-C for football, many do have the chance to attend the annual Spring Fest, and I can see the grass field that overlooks the Napier and the Rock Tower. What is the first question I asked was "What about the student(s) accused of the potential Halloween victim(s)?"

The students denied the charges therefore the matter was under the jurisdiction of the University Ombudsman Ingrid Clarke and Jackson, in accordance with the Student Conduct Code. The code provides adjudication at the dean's level with a formal hearing in cases of alleged academic dishonesty where guilt is disputed by the student or where the department chair recommends the case be dropped.

VAROL HAS written a letter to the Faculty Senate concerning the lack of authority the conduct code gives an instructor to give the grade he or she feels is merited by the student's work before such cases are resolved. Varol was displeased that the students received an incomplete grade instead of a failing grade during the course of adjudication proceedings.

The students were found guilty of the plagiarism charge by the panel that Jackson appointed to consider student's work during adjudication, where guilt is disputed. Varol's letter to the Faculty Senate stated that he and the faculty members of the computer science department "believe that the grading of faculty members is given the grade of a failing grade during adjudication where guilt is disputed."

Varol's letter to the Faculty Senate stated that he and the faculty members of the computer science department "believe that the grading of faculty members is given the grade of a failing grade during adjudication where guilt is disputed."

Excuse us, but what about the student(s) accused of the misconduct? Are we not living in a society where a person is innocent until proven guilty? We are not trying to take away anyone's civil liberties, but the issue is one of fairness and students feel as though they are being treated unfairly.

Denise E. Gale, associate legal counsel for the University, said that a faculty member is given the right to assess the classroom performance of the student however, he dies appropriately, but the instructor does not have a right to review the work of the student. It is a question of academic misconduct without the adjudication process.

We agree wholeheartedly with this procedure and applaud the Student Conduct Code. If the Faculty Senate decides to review the code we urge them to not make any changes concerning the issue of a fair hearing before the guilty verdict is handed down.

If a student is found to be guilty through the adjudication process then penalize him or her. However, let us not forget that the right to a fair trial is secured to every American under the Bill of Rights.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of the authors and do not necessarily represent the viewpoints of the Daily Egyptian Board, whose members are the student editors-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the student business manager and a faculty advisor, the Student Conduct Code. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 300 words. Letters from students will be given precedence for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-students by their full names. Letters for which verification of authenticity cannot be made will not be published.

Those changes would include raising standards for undergraduate admissions; adding more courses and programs; cutting weaker programs; and adding programs.

"The Faculty Senate wants to make sure it plays a leading role in these changes," Don Paige outlined other programs the committee will examine.

"It seems to me like the library will go to electronic retrieval systems instead of periodicals as a way of exchanging information," Paige said.

Everyone in the movie has a problem, and everyone has an emotional relationship. The main point of the movie is showing each person's unhealthy behavior, self-destructing, and sexual promiscuity and how these problems finally get resolved.

"This is a remarkable film," is similar to "Green Wingwood's The "Raimaker" and George Kaufman and Marc Connelly's "Who Came to Dinner" in that an outside character (in this case James Spader) enters the other characters' lives and acts as a catalyst in changing these lives.

Where this story is different is that (as in 'battman') the main character is unhealthy himself, and here the "catalysts" change his character to open eyes to examination and change by the other characters.

Dialogue is fresh, mature and natural. Not everything is earth-shattering, but these are everyday people.

Overall, it's a good movie. There isn't a lot of action, but the story is good. The characters are strange, yet believable, and the whole thing comes across well. This may not be an ideal film to see after you've just hit the Strip, but there's enough erotic material that it makes for a good date movie. Go see this one.

Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Dare, Quain, said no legislation was sponsored by Thompson. Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro and Rep. David Price, R-St. Louis, could not be reached for comment.

University Police reported that an 18-year-old Neely Hall resident filed a complaint for breaking and entering Tuesday night in Thompson Woods.

Police said two white males approached the University student and tried to kick him, but he gave them his leather jacket. The student turned to walk away, was tapped on the shoulder and then struck in the face by one of the males, according to police.

Police said the 18-year-old kicked the assailant in the groin and then again in the face. He then walked away and later reported the incident to police.

Sherwood Rochelt, R.N. "We are going to walk away from this because we have a box full of postcards.

The crisis the House was given was to put $1 billion senior citizen benefits — out of 32 million beneficiaries — to pay more than $500 million for the President's program. Saying the crisis had been perverted, they predicted future health proposals would be hoarded by the congressional leaders.

But advocates of repeal said it would open the way to considera­tion of broad national health plans and defended themselves against charges they were caving in to special interests.

"We're not in business of passing bills that don't work," said Rep. Barbara Kennelly, D-

Corn. "I wish we didn't have to do it, but we made a mistake."

The repeal proposal, which took form of an amendment in the 1990 budget reconciliation bill, was sponsored by Rep. Brian Donnelly, D-Mass., and Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, and was backed by House Republican leaders.

The amendment wiped out the tax except for Medicaid benefits that prevent the financial ruin of spouses of nursing home residents and pay Medicaid costs for poor senior citizens and pregnant women.

The House then considered another amendment, supported by Democratic leaders, that would have repealed the surtax and benefit­ting doctors fees, hospital stays and added nursing home care, but would have retained a flat monthly premium paid by all beneficiaries to keep some benefits.

One benefit covered most pre­scriptions. It has cost since it had paid $80 a year in 1991 and $90 in 1992. The others included home-health and respite care, the Medicaid benefits and mammogra­phy.

The administration has said it opposes repeal because it would increase the "deficit budget deficit in the short-term."

As part of its move Wednesday, the House decided changes in the deficit resulting from repeal would count against targets in the balanced budget law.

The state has not acted on the issue but is considering proposals ranging from repeal to eliminating the deficit benefit and reducing the surtax.

Debate team wins opener

University keeps pace with quest for another championship

When the smoke cleared Sunday night, SIU-C, the National Cross Examination Debate Sweepstakes Champion for the past four years, had claimed its first place in both divisions.

SIU-C debate team coach Jeffrey T. Bile was "very pleased," according to Greg Simerly, assistant debate coach. "Initially we were a bit apprehensive," Simerly said. "We came in with several new squad members who had not debated as a unit before, but they worked hard and are incredibly talented."

The SIU-C debate team has won the national championship the past four years.

Simerly said other schools seemed to be surprised by the team's strength in what had been a rebuilding year.

SIU-C varsity debaters Todd A. McGowan and T.J. Wolfe beat Minnesota's Macalese College in the finals for first-place honors. McGowan also won the tournament's fourth-place speaker award.

Junior varsity members Peter M. Hoogerwoord and Lisa D. Krug defeated two different teams from the University of Miami in the quarterfinals and semifinals, and went on to take first place.

Two other SIU-C teams also advanced to the finals and were defeated.

Christopher F. Carey and Kevin M. O'Leary lost to Arizona State University in the quarterfinals and Nick J. Gribbs-Pain and Laura A. Pagano lost to the University of Miami.

New system to benefit geography

By Dale Walker

The purchase of a computerized Geographic Information System will enable the geography department to do research, update courses and provide public services to governmental bodies and planning agencies, the chairman said.

"It modernizes our facility," David Sharpe, chairman of the geography department, said. "This is something new for SIU."

The system was funded by two grants from the Coal Research Center and by contributions from the dean of the College of Liberal Arts, Sharpe said.

"The system is a great help for the Lion's share of the cost, which was about $25,000," he said.

The purpose of the Coal Research Center's project is to create a data base of subsurface mine locations, Craig Strus, research associate, said.

"The need for the system is to perform research that relates to subsidence from coal mines," Sharpe said. "The system gives you maps and computers so you can map the locations of the kinds of rocks that are especially prone to subsidence."

A class facility for the system's terminals will be developed so the students can use the system, Sharpe said.

"Students in any of the environmental sciences or the environmental management fields will benefit from the GIS," he said.

Programs such as forestry, anthropology, archaeology and engineering will be among those to benefit from the system, Strus said.

Sharpe also said the system can benefit local governmental bodies and planning agencies.

"If you plot where school kids' houses are and where the highways are, you can find the most efficient routes for the national highway," he said.

If a city wanted to have a map drawn or analyzed, the geography departments could use that as an opportunity to train students on the new system equipment, Sharpe said.

"The short-term goal for the GIS is to work on the Coal Research Center project, SIU-C, and get the system ready for the GIS course and to do a couple of service tasks," Sharpe said.

Long-term goals include increasing the number of courses using the system, expanding the research and introducing the system to a faculty in a variety of departments that will find it useful for research, he said.
Local residents object to housing program cuts

The women have been living in Washington since late September and this week is the culmination of activities with lobby days on the fifth and sixth and the march on the seventh," said Kathleen Washington office.

"We love the homelessness small communities you’ve never heard of," she said. "There is a systemic problem and it is not a problem of any particular county... or of big cities...

The suit was filed Friday in U.S. District Court and made public Wednesday on behalf of the Planned Parenthood Association of Champaign County as well as certain doctors and women.

The ACLU charges the Certificate of Live Birth, the Case Index and the Case Closure forms required by the state for women to provide information about themselves as a condition of getting care.

ACLU spokesmen Jay Miller said the ACLU Privacy Act of 1974 states it is unlawful for any state agency to deny any right, benefit or service without a survey by law. However, failure to comply with the state’s mandatory reporting requirement is cause for the IDPH to discontinue funds or terminate the grant.

Miller said the state uses the forms to collect information on women purportedly for research but has no way of guaranteeing the information will remain confidential. He called the action a violation of the women’s rights under the U.S. Constitution and the Federal Privacy Act.

The ACLU said its Certificate of Live Birth form has been used by the IDPH’s Office of Vital Records to ask women who give birth in the state to complete the form which includes:

• Marital status of women at conception;
• Number of pregnancies which did not end in live births due to miscarriage, stillbirths and abortions;
• Women’s use of alcohol and cigarettes during pregnancy;
• Number of prenatal visits; and
• Date of last marriage, stillbirths and abortions.

Defendants in the case include Bernard Tumock, IDPH director, and Steven Sanders, Division of Family Services chief.

Accompanying McGuire on the trip are Esite Speck, director of Good Samaritan House, and Lisa Bova, a student at SUU-C.

"The case in the concentration is being funded by ACSCs," McGuire said.

"We are marching because, through the Reagan years, there was a continual slashing of funds for domestic programs and there was fewer and fewer dollars allotted for lower income housing," she said.

According to the Network, a National Catholic Social Justice Lobby publication, appropriations for subsidized housing programs have been cut from $32.72 billion in fiscal year 1978 to $9.96 billion in fiscal year 1988. This represents a decline of more than 80 percent, after adjusting for inflation, the publication said.

Friday morning we will attend a briefing session coordinated by Network to make sure that (we the lobbyists) know the status of housing legislation and budgeting priorities," McGuire said.

Later we will be lobbying in both houses in congress and meet with Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carbondale, and Senators Paul Simon, D-Makanda and Alan Dixon, D-Belleville, explaining to them what they are demonstrating for, she said.

Saturday morning there will be a pre-march rally at McAsley Institute in Silver Spring, a suburb of Washington, McGuire said.

"The rally is at 7 a.m. and the march is at 9 a.m. We will march from the Washington Monument up the mall to the Capital Building," she said.

Homelessness in U.S. on the rise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Homelessness is increasing in all areas of the country and families account for a growing proportion of it, according to an Illinois Department of Public Health to obtain personal information about concerned women.

The suit is filed Friday in U.S. District Court and made public Wednesday on behalf of the Planned Parenthood Association of Champaign County as well as certain doctors and women.

Illinois ACLU files lawsuit against state

DANVILLE (UPI) — The American Civil Liberties Union of Illinois has filed a federal lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of four state laws with the Illinois Department of Public Health to obtain personal information about concerned women.

The suit is filed Friday in U.S. District Court and made public Wednesday on behalf of the Planned Parenthood Association of Champaign County as well as certain doctors and women.

The ACLU charges the Certificate of Live Birth, the Case Index and the Case Closure forms required by the state for women to provide information about themselves as a condition of getting care.

Computer discount for faculty, students

By Sean Hamnigan
Staff Writer

University students, faculty and staff have the opportunity to buy Apple Computer products at a 40 percent reduction off the list price through a new campus program.

Apple, in conjunction with SIU-C, is offering the discount under the Higher Education Purchasing Program.

"HEPPU is a contract between Apple and the University which enables students, faculty, and staff to purchase Apple and Macintosh equipment at substantial savings," Ken Pavlick, HEPPU coordinator, said.

The group recently opened a Macintosh Campus Support Center at 809 S. Illinois Ave., next to Kopies & More. The center will work in cooperation with Computer Corner, located in the University Mall, but will concentrate on the University.

Pavlick said the program began at SIU-C in September 1988, though the school has always had discounts available to it. Pavlick said the idea behind the program is to offer discounts to individuals as well as supporting the campus system.

"Dealers can not buy from Apple at this cheap," Pavlick said.

Pavlick said the largest retailers barely approach the discount rate given to people through HEPPU. The store has a full line of computers for domestic sale.

"It's sort of like instead of faculty and students going to the mountain, we've brought the mountain to them," Pavlick said.

If a student or University employee wishes to purchase equipment they have to fill out forms that will be verified by Computer Affairs and sent on to Apple.

Apple then will send the equipment to Computer Corner, which will review the equipment and set up a training session for the customer.

Pavlick said the center will assist in further training and aid after the initial purchase. "The warranty still goes through the dealer," Pavlick said.

He said there is a financing program to help students secure a loan. "They will be able to make payments around $30-$40 a month," Pavlick said.

Studying abroad increases with demand for experience

By Irene Oplas
Staff Writer

A change in focus is happening across the nation in study abroad programs, from Saville, coordinator of the University’s study abroad programs.

Students who study languages, history, English and other liberal arts disciplines have traditionally studied abroad, but now are being joined by students from all ranks, he said.

The change follows an increased interest of students in international experience, Saville said.

“Students are more likely to hire someone with international experience because they stand out from others, he said.

In recent years, a University agriculture student studied in Tanzania, an administration of Justice student in Mexico, a zoology student in Finland, and many others, Lisa Felix, study abroad assistant at international programs and services, said.

Knowledge of a foreign language is not required to study abroad, Felix said.

About one third of the programs through the International Student Exchange Program offer opportunities in English, she said.

“The program is the most varied student exchange program. There is a variety of opportunities in terms of different fields and countries,” Saville said.

ISEP, which has nearly 100 institutions from different countries, is based on a one-to-one exchange of students between institutions, he said.

“It is exciting and a good opportunity to study abroad,” Jari Pournune, an exchange student from Finland, said.

Pournune, a junior in history, came to the University with his wife, Anu, who also studies through the exchange program.

“Programs in universities in the United States offer so many different things,” Pournune said.

“The university system in the United States offers programs similar to those in Finland, but studying abroad is much more demanding because of arrangements that have to be made and other details,” Pournune said.

Sharon Casey, a graduate student in French and education who studied through ISEP, said the system in France was much easier.

Casey studied in a program called French for foreigners, similar to the University’s Center for English as a Second Language.

“Studying in France was like being a freshman again—living in the dorm and getting a check each month. It helps you manage your money,” Casey said.

University exchange students pay their normal fees and tuition at their home institution, including room and board, and apply credit earned toward their degree, Saville said.

Information about ISEP will be held at 3 p.m. on Friday at 803 S. Oakland. The meeting is open to students from all colleges.

Soviet involved in A-bomb project recalls Jose Stalin’s obsession

Students Mingpi Suo and Chyi Shyu will spend one of their nation’s biggest holidays. Taiwan’s National Day, celebrating its formation as a separate country, and their families for the first time.

Mingpi, a junior in interior design, and Shyu, senior in visual communication, came to the University five months ago.

Like many other new students from Taiwan, Mingpi and Shyu will find comfort in sharing their celebration with Americans and other students from Taiwan through activities at the international student group.

“I have my country,” Shyu said, “but I am very happy to help in the celebration by designing the display, which the Student Center is going to show others what it is like in Taiwan.”

National Turtle, the 10th day of the 10th month, is the day on which preparations for the first atomic test were made. It is a national holiday.

As the collection of U.S. explosions of the world’s first atom bomb... over Hiroshima and Nagasaki... in 1945 and the second World War II, Stalin told Tikria to spare no costs in mining the ore from which plutonium is extracted.

The United Nations was able to control much of the atomic chaos, and most of the world’s atomic power is used for peaceful purposes.

The United Nations played a vital role in the development of atomic weapons, and the Soviet Union has taken a leading role in the field.

The International Atomic Energy Agency was established in 1957 to promote the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

The agency has 173 member states, including the United States, and works with governments, industry, research institutions, and universities to ensure that nuclear technology is used for peaceful purposes.

The agency also provides technical assistance and training to countries seeking to develop nuclear technology for peaceful purposes.

In recent years, the United Nations has been working with countries in the Middle East to promote the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

The agency has been active in promoting the use of nuclear energy in the fields of electricity generation, industrial processes, medicine, and research.

The agency has also been involved in efforts to prevent nuclear proliferation and nuclear terrorism.

The United Nations has worked to ensure that nuclear weapons are not used for any purpose.

This gave me incentive to break the lineup and get back where I was," Peters, who was injured attempting a tackle, says he hasn’t had that opportunity this season.

"Our coverage team has done so well that I haven’t even had to make a tackle this season," Peters said. "That gives us incentive as well to sail the ball even better that I don’t have to attempt a tackle. Things are happening so fast out there that if I had to make a tackle, I really wouldn’t have time to think about it."

While many may take for granted the duties of a kicker, SIU-C head coach Bob Smith is very appreciative of Peters.

Smith says there are two ways to evaluate a kicker: keeping his team out of trouble and putting the opponents in a hole.

"I can’t come up with enough adjectives to describe the job he’s done for us this season," Smith said. "He’s really been superb for us. Dav’d is such an unselfish guy and he comes up with that hang time on his punts to help us win.

"If Dav’d continues to improve, there may be some pro scouts taking interest in him," Smith said.

"You have to set your goals high," Peters said. "But I know that only one choice few make it. The pros are a dream but right now I’m concentrating on some things I still want to do here.

"I think we’re headed in the right direction," Peters said. "There is more togetherness this season than last year. If we keep going like this, things will happen here."

Cubsmobile heading for that Frisco Bay

By Darren Richardson
Staff Writer

When Horace Greeley advised us to take one for the team, he certainly didn't mean for us to make the pilgrimage to see a baseball game.

Yet that's exactly what, I-U-C senior Brian Schroeder and a few color-blind friends went to St. Louis for the final regular season series, fellow Cubs fans gave them such a warm reception that they decide to take their "Cubsmobile" all the way to the Golden Gate.

"Harry Caray saw us in St. Louis and gave us the thumbs up on the car," Schroeder, who studies education and training development, said. "And after Friday's game (Paul) Kilgus, (Mike) Bielecki, (Rick) Sutcliffe and (Joe) Girardi told us they really appreciated our support. They said it would be nice to see us in San Francisco -- so we're going to try to be there."

Schroeder began posting flyers to advertise for fans who wanted to make the trip with him early this week.

"Ifigure the whole trip will cost about $600, or $80-100 per rider if we take five riders," Schroeder said.

As of Wednesday afternoon, Schroeder had found three other hardcore Cubs fans ... who wanted to see action in Candlestick Park. But he was putting a source out there to see if anyone else may make the whole trip a lot less costly -- a Chicago area Oldsmobile marketing firm.

"I talked to a man named Carl Sachs from Oldsmobile marketing," Schroeder said. "When I was in St. Louis, a couple Olds dealers gave me his name. Mr. Sachs wanted to see a picture of the Cubsmobile! and the story that already appeared in the Daily Egyptian, so we're going to send him the information through overnight mail."

Schroeder made it clear that Oldsmobile sponsors the trip, only the people who've already committed themselves will be going. He figures he has about 50 hours driving time -- or five-six hours per person if four make the trip.

SALUKI poster gets his due notice

He is an athlete that could have no outstanding season and go completely unnoticed by the public. The only time he gets any recognition on the football field is when he is involved in an unfortunate turn of events during a game.

A punter is certainly an unappreciated position.

"I think our job is when first noticed our punter David Peters said. "The only time you hear about a punter or an offensive lineman is when they screw up. When you're out there everyone is talking about you because you're the one with the ball. It isn't a glamorous position. It's like a defensive man. It may go unappreciated but it is a hard job.

UNDER THESE circumstances, it is easy to see what a man like Peters does make a name for himself. But Peters has not always been a punter. Peters, a 6-1, 210-pound junior, is ranked third among punter in the Gateway Conference. He has averaged 40.7 yards per punt so far this season. In a game against Iowa State, Iowa's Dan Ruch (4.7) and Western Illinois' Mike Krause (4.1) have pumped for a better average than Peters in the Missouri Valley. Peters' longest punt so far this season is a 69-yarder in a game against Eastern Illinois here Sept. 16. The coaching staff hasn't really pressured me this year," Peters said. "In the past, the staff would have I'd like to go out of the game as long as you get the job done. I feel relaxed out there now and that makes me a really good place.

The BENTON native stepped in as a freshman and handled the job well. He averaged 36.5 yards per kick on 70 kicks. This was a key seson for me last season," Peters said. "I was very pleased with my performance, Peters said.

"I received some valuable experience," Peters said. "The punter before me had been successful and I want to do what he did. But what works for one guy doesn't necessarily work for the next guy. I had to develop my own style."

Peters’ own style includes the same nickel before each game. "I am a superstitious person," Peters said. "I do the same thing before each game. I do the same stretches, kick into the ball and the lane that I think. A punter has to go with any edge he can get.

PETERS WAS all-conference at Benton High School in football, baseball and basketball. An all-around talent, Peters also lettered in track and was a teammate of Saluki quarterback Fred Gibson in high school.

After stepping into the punting duties his freshman season, Peters was off to a fast start his sophomore year as well. Peters put 20 times over 767 yards (38.4 avg.) and he had a career-high 62 punts against Murray State. But as many athletes do during the course of their careers, Peters ran into a little adversity.

Peters suffered a season-ending knee injury in SIU’s third game of the season against Illinois State. Although it wasn’t a serious injury, Peters had a long road back.

"I TOOK A long time to rehab my knee," Peters said. "I took it step by step and really had to work before running again. I just rounded back into shape doing sprint practices and did a lot of work during the summer."

The main obstacles to overcome are mental blocks, Peters said.

"You have to get over things mentally when you come back," Peters said. "But they’re things you just have to block out of your mind."

Tony Guttridge handled all of the punting responsibilities for the final eight games after Peters’ injury. Guttridge put 48 times for a 33.0 average.

"You’re always nervous coming back especially after a serious injury," Peters said. "But I worked hard and I knew there were some things that I still wanted to do out there.,

The 7-6 Saluki volleyball team will play its last non-conference game this weekend as it takes on the 7-7 DePaul Blue Demons and the 7-8 University of Illinois-Chicago Flames in Chicago.

"This break is a good one to go into conference play next weekend," Saluki coach Pati Hartzog said. "We are definitely ready for these games."

The Salukis beat DePaul at the last meeting but the Blue Demons are the new leaders in the league this season. Over the Flames, Southern Illinois has a 9-6 season so far.

"DePaul is, according to their record, a very tough team. We are not a GREAT team but we have a good team. We are not going to get overconfident on the road."

The Salukis begin conference play Oct. 16 when they travel to Chicago to play with Western Illinois. "It’s a second chance for another season," Hartzog said. "We are looking forward to playing these games and we hope we’ll come out with a win."

The Salukis are racking up some impressive state of their own. Nina Brackins, senior middle blocker for the Salukis, has averaged 6.8 assists and 15 kills, 93 digs and is hitting .298. Scottie surface, senior outside hitter, has averaged 63 kills, 13 hits and 14 blocks and is hitting .269. Michael Brandt, senior outside hitter, has averaged 63 kills, 13 hits and 14 blocks and is hitting .269.

Freshman middle blocker Dana Ollen has averaged 10 or more kills in the past six games, 12 total blocks and 42 assists.

Terri Schultehnich, sophomore setter, tops the Salukis in assists with 557 and 493 kills, six of the last came in the last two matches. Schultehnich has a total of 499 assists in her career so far.
