Grid tickets boosted
SIU to challenge price freeze

By Mike Kleio
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Will it be $3 and $4, or $3.75 and $4.50?

That is the question as the SIU athletic department and the federal government head for what appears to be an almost certain confrontation over President Nixon's price freeze. The athletic department intends to go ahead with plans to charge $3.75 reserved seats at some football games and $4.50 at the Homecoming game. The prices last year were $3 and $4.

Marlin Clark, director of the local Office of Emergency Preparedness (OEP), said Thursday, however, that the cost of Living Council likely will hold the line on last year's prices. The OEP is administering and enforcing the price freeze for the Cost of Living Council.

Donald Boydston, head of intercollegiate athletics, said he believes the higher prices were well publicized before the wage-price freeze was announced Aug. 14 and therefore are legal.

"Since tickets were ordered and priced well before the freeze, we're going ahead on that basis," Boydston said.

However, the Cost of Living Council is guideline issued Aug. 9 indicates that the prior publicity won't exempt SIU football prices from the freeze. The Council said: "In response to many inquiries about season tickets and single event prices for entertainment and other forms of entertainment, the Cost of Living Council today announced that the wage-price freeze prohibits such price increases."

"The Council stated that admission prices for events occurring during the freeze period may be no higher than charges made for those programs taking place during the base period. On the case of football or the 'World Series' this will generally be the price charged last year."

"Those who already have purchased tickets at prices higher than those permitted should be reimbursed."

Information on how many tickets have been sold at the higher prices was unavailable from the athletic ticket sales office.

Preparations for sale of tickets at the new prices went ahead at McAndrew Stadium where signs on the ticket booths were re-lettered to list the higher figures.

Student Center expansion nears finish

By Courtland Y. Milloy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In 1961, SIU boasted about its $4 1/2 million University Center with 100,000 square feet of floor space. This fall the scene will be somewhat different. As the mud dries, the dust settles and the noise that has accompanied years of planning and construction subsides, one will notice that the "University Center" has changed not only its appearance, but its name as well.

The Student Center, as it is now called, will be in the final stages of a $9 million expansion project. The project itself is coating twice as much as the original center.

"However, the size of the Student Center has tripled and there is a variety of new facilities and services being offered," says Jim Sheppard, associate director of the Student Center.

The basement of the Center holds another first for SIU. Construction of the Big Muddy Room is under way and is expected to be completed by the end of fall quarter.

The Big Muddy Room, with its rustic decor and dim lighting, will feature 18 vending machines, a centrally located stage and will seat 225 people.

The ground floor includes the new cafeteria area with two expandable room areas that can seat 900 people compared to 500 under the old arrangement. The cafeteria service area employs the "scramble" system designed to eliminate long waiting lines by spreading food out and letting people shop around.

Adjacent to the dining area is the snack bar. It will seat 240 people for short orders and snacks.

On the same floor is the 24-hour, self-service, fully automated postal station.

At the other end of the floor is the new bookstore, three times as large as the old one.

The first floor of the Center has 12 meeting-dining rooms with seating capacity ranging from 10 to 40. Two lounges, one with a vending area, are also located on the floor.

The first floor dining room seats 150 and includes waitress table service. A second bathroom, located next to the lounges, should be completed by the end of fall quarter. This separate facility will add to present meeting and dancing capacity and will allow more than one event to take place at a time, unlike before.

On the south end of the first floor a 300-seat auditorium is being constructed. The floor will also house administration offices, study lounges and storage spaces.

A unique feature of the second floor will be the music and library room. At the other end is a library, usually browsing room, where students may scan periodicals or read local newspapers while listening to special selections of piped in music.

According to Sheppard, the entire project should be completed by January, 1972.

Canut-Amoros charges case report inaccurate

By Sue Roll
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Martha Canut-Amoros, former professor of applied science who has charged SIU with sex discrimination, said Wednesday that inaccuracies undermine the value of the Faculty Council's report concerning her case.

"I would think there has been enough mess concerning my case without misleading the people with more errors," she said.

The report was drawn up by a three-member panel of William Hardenbergh, associate professor of government; Christian Moe, professor of theatre; and Joanne Thorpe, associate professor of physical education.

Hardenbergh said Ms. Canut-Amoros' response to the report was "considered and measured" and that it was "very useful to the council to have it."

Although there are numerous smaller problems with the report, Ms. Canut-Amoros said, there are four major points that are "fundamental" to her case.

A letter of her objections has been sent to the council. The report and faculty reaction to it is the main item on the council's agenda for its Tuesday meeting.

She cited the lack of mention of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) involvement in her case. She said that two of that A.A.U.P. representatives including Charles Stenl, then AAUP chapter president, had met with President Robert G. Layer and Willis E. Malone, vice presidents, who was then also in charge of academic affairs.

News Sources protected by new state law

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) - Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie today signed legislation protecting confidentiality of news media's confidential and privileged sources, a small but vital step toward guaranteeing freedom of the press.

The bill requires that before a court can order a reporter to divulge the names of his sources, the judge must find that "all other available sources of information have been exhausted and disclosure is essential to the protection of the public interest."

"It allows reporters in Illinois to perform their tasks without undue harassment from overzealous policemen anxious to 'get a handle on their hard work,'" the governor said.

Sponsor of the bill, Rep. Arthur L. Berman, D-Chicago, said Illinois "has now taken an important step to further guarantee freedom of the press."

Berman said "one of the important elements in effective reporting is the news media's sources of information."

Co-sponsor Rep. Thomas Ross, R-Jacksonville, said the measure would be "a guarantee to the responsible newsmen of the freedom in his reporting without harassment."

President pickers still searching, interviewing

An SIU Board member expressed hope Thursday that the committee's search for a new president will soon bear fruit but admitted that a candidate had not yet been selected.

"We have not selected a candidate and have nothing close to report at this time," Ivan A. Elliott, Trustee and chairman of the Board's Presidential Selection Committee, said following a closed meeting of the Board committee and the Campus Presidential Selection Advisory Committee at Anthony Hall. The advisory committee consists of faculty, students and civil service employees.

Elliott said he wished people could know what the two groups had done over the last three months, the procedures followed and the high quality of persons interviewed. But he said that to talk about it at this point "might jeopardize everything we've accomplished.

"I hope we can announce a recommendation reasonably soon," he added. "I for one am tired."

Power shortages not from blown fuses

It is 8:00 a.m. outside and your air conditioner is keeping you as cool as possible, the rest is in the electric range, you’re watching your favorite program on television, your wife is sitting under the electric hair dryer and suddenly, everything stops.

For a number of years now, CIPS has continued to expand his services just as many people add an extension cord after another to their household outlets. The result is an overloaded circuit and a blown fuse.

The company, of course, part of the problem. There are more of them now than ever before and, unfortunately, the additional appliances and gadgets that Thomas Edison ever dreamed possible.

But the real problem involves supply, not demand. CIPS thinks that expansion is adding extra file cabinets for bills and not gain profit for you. If they had planned on more money, they might have saved money.

The problem of a power shortage originates at the source of electricity, the power plant. The plant must be able to supply the necessary amounts of energy needed. After that, lines over which customers are transmitted must be made available. But all this takes money, and is where CIPS has failed.

The company is very good at collecting money. Its rates are considerably higher than those of other companies in the northern part of the state. It is also one of few companies which requires a $10 deposit before service is started with each new customer.

The supply chain is the problem. A power company must be prepared to build practices.

It is time CIPS began practicing better business ethics and used the money legitimately by investing it in new equipment to bring more energy to its customers. CIPS should begin to realize its responsibility to its public and improve its service.

The can companies pollute our hallways

Recently, while I was returning to my local residence, I had the pleasure of seeing some of the residents of this neighborhood movement here at 81st.

Passing through the hallway which connects what was once called Hall, I noticed that a new soda machine had been installed. On the ledge directly opposite of the machine sat 26 nicely decorated and empty cans. I immediately thought this was another attempt at student obedience. Past attempts had been to install the machine in one of the hallways and railroad tracks, highways and park areas.

It appears obvious that the company or companies involved in making the cans should have legislation passed against them. These establishment groups are the unquestionable source of our pollution problem.

Maybe, I have stretched a point too far. It is probably only a minority of students who are not seriously concerned with our ecology, but when dealing with a large number of students, this minority presents a problem for all of us.

At times, we have all probably criticized the Establishment for its double standard. Are we to follow in the same direction?

Vandalism is costly pasttime

Vandalism summons up the specter of miscreants who move in furiously when no one else is about. Yet it is taking on new vestiges of violence. In early July this year, two unarmed Pinkerton security guards were found shot to death in a racially troubled Wilmington, N.C., junior high school they had been hired to protect from vandalism.

The school window, probably because it is so easy to reach with stones or other projectiles, long has been the prime target of the vandal. School window breakage in New York City amounted to more than $1.2 million in 1969 and the cost is mounting each year at the rate of $20,000.

Windows shattered by vandals in New York's hundreds of buildings and government buildings cost more than $5 million to replace annually.

Today the school window is becoming passe as the chief target in most large cities.

Teen-age students have learned how to break into school buildings so they can vandalize classrooms. In Philadelphia, two youngsters, aged 12 and 14, on a Sunday afternoon forced open a door to Webster Elementary School. Three hours later when police arrested the boys, the school literally was a mess.

Aquariums were smashed in every classroom, desks were ransacked; slide projectors and other electronic visual aids were battered beyond repair; one a closed-circuit television camera. When the bill was itemized it came to about $10,000 in damages.

Both youngsters are from respectable, working-class families. So are thousands of other young vandals who daily assault their schools in growing numbers.

Each year the Baltimore public school system conducts a survey of vandalism in major city school districts. It has become so serious that a U.S. Senate Education subcommittee investigating juvenile delinquency used it during a recent inquiry.

A subcommittee staff member says the Baltimore study "reads like something out of a World War II movie."

"It is one of the first indications we have that the problems of school vandalism and those who are getting out of hand."

The annually updated Baltimore study is being used as a guideline by many school districts across the country in their efforts to combat vandalism.

Last year O. P. Furino, Baltimore superintendent, recommended that more state education departments begin collecting such data for more ammunition in their battles to control it.

The subcommittee aide's reference to World War II movies apparently stemmed from these survey findings.

Some of the nation's largest school districts are using barbed wire, floodlights, police dogs, barb wire grilles on plastic windows and an array of alarms and electronic surveillance devices to combat vandalism—at a cost of millions.

Furino says Baltimore undertook the survey to give its schools the benefit of experience other districts have had with efforts to control vandalism.

State legislatures, too, are growing concerned over what is happening to schools. Gordon Zieg, an assistant to the superintendent of Los Angeles city schools, recently told a California Senate Education subcommittee that the district spends $50,000 a year for daytime school security—compared to only $25,000 five years ago.

"Five years ago our damage due to vandalism, burglary, theft and arson was about $42,000," Zieg told the subcommittee studying student behavior. "Last year our damage in those cases was about $21 million."

Art gallery founder, John R. Mitchell, dies

By University News Services

Funeral services were held at Mt. Vernon Thursday for John Russell Mitchell, 64, Southern Illinois businessman whose philanthropies included the Mr. and Mrs. John Russell Mitchell Art Gallery at SIU.

Mitchell, one of the area's most successful independent oil producers during the 1967-68, owned furniture stores and a Mt. Vernon radio station and television company as well as other businesses. He and his wife had been world travelers and he was an avid big game hunter.

Sorority rush

set Monday

Sorority rush for fall quarter will begin Monday with a general meeting starting at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Center, Ballroom A, the Panhel- lenic Council announced Thursday.

Open houses are scheduled for Monday from 7-10 p.m. at Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Omicron Pi, Alpha Sigma Alpha, Delta Zeta, Sigma Kappa and Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority houses.

Mickey Keithley, Panhel- lenic rush chairman, said if a woman is unable to attend but is interested she should call her at 453-2200 or Nancy Hunter at 453-5728.

The Panhellenic council requires a 3.0 grade point average from a continuing student. A first quarter freshman must have a "B" average. However, individual sororities may have high grade requirements.
Movie mags alive, well without stars

HOLIWOOD (AP) — "It's Andy leading Ethel any day," said Nancy Anderson, West Coast editor for Photoplay. "If Liz Taylor isn't Debbie Reynolds' husband, she gets fat and suffers."

That's the way it is in the fan magazine world. In a curiously sort of way, it is one of the last bastions of morality, husband-stealing, or smoking and babies out of wedlock are still considered no-no's.

Even with the movie business in rocky shape and the number of stars at an all-time low, the fan mags go on.

The three leaders, Photoplay, Modern Screen and Motion Pictures—four of the last bastions of morality, husband-stealing, or smoking and babies out of wedlock are still considered no-no's.

Circulation is not up much, but sufficient for survival. One method of survival is to do stories about political figures, especially the Kennedy's.

"It started with Jack Kennedy," explains Helen Weller, West Coast editor of Modern Screen all of the magazines are edited and printed in New York. "It was the first time that an American president had star quality. With the death of stars in films, whom have you got to write about?"

Whose indeed? And so Caroline Kennedy receives as much attention in the magazines as Debbie Reynolds.

What about the Hollywood figures?

Says Photoplay's Nancy Anderson: "Our list hasn't changed much. We print mostly to the Old Hollywood John Wayne, Lucille Ball, Robert Young, Barbara Stanwyck or the All-American types Marlo Thomason Rock Hudson, Debbie Reynolds, Shirley Jones."

"The New Hollywood has produced some good actors, but no appealing stars."

Welfare costs skyrocketing

WASHINGTON (AP) — National welfare costs skyrocketed a record 27 percent in the fiscal year ending last June 30 despite a shrinking of relief rolls in the last two months, the government said Thursday.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said states, local and federal expenditures for all forms of public assistance, including medical aid and welfare, increased $3.4 billion to $16.5 billion in the 12 months. The total is almost double the $9.4 billion four years ago.

"These are the largest increases in the history of the program," said John D. Tierney, administrator of HEW's social and rehabilitation services.

Paradoxically, a downturn toward the end of the record 1970-71 welfare year may signal the beginning of a period of public-assistance austerity.

With eleven states curtailing welfare eligibility and payments, relief rolls dropped (Continued on page 23)

Board picks called stacked deck

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. (AP) — A state senator Thursday attacked Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's appointments to the Judicial Inquiry Board for "not including a clearly identifiable Democrat."

Sen. John Knuppel, D-Pe tersburg, centered his criticism on the Republican governor's choice of Mrs. Anne Willer, of Hillside, who served with Kuppel as a delegate in the 1973 constitutional convention.

Knuppel said he would seek the board's $100,000 appropriation because the requirements of the constitution for membership of the board indicate the delegates intended it to be bipartisan.

Nixon weathered seige of economic questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon headed toward Michigan Thursday to submit his economic and energy policies to a crossfire of questioning by members of the prestigious Detroit Economic Club.

Flanked by an array of political and other advisers, Nixon was making his first appearance as President in the Detroit area, in a state he lost in 1968 to Hubert H. Humphrey by more than 220,000 votes.

The Economic Club has a membership of 2,500, including big names from industry, labor, business and banking.

And augmented by a guest list of 1,000 persons, the club's annual luncheon meeting will be the first major national appearance for Nixon since his re-election.

Salukis March on St. Louis

For the seventh straight year, the Marching Salukis will perform at a St. Louis Cardinals football game.

Their 1973 performance at Busch Stadium will be Monday night during the halftime of the St. Louis-Jet game. As in their first appearance, the Marching Salukis will perform at a nationally televised game.

Michael D. Hanes, director of the Marching Salukis, said the program will be "A Tour of the Musical Stage in St. Louis." He said a special version of "St. Louis Blues" will be the main feature.

Joining the 100-member band will be the Saluki Twirling Corps. In addition to their halftime show, the Marching Salukis will play "The Star-Spangled Banner" in the pregame ceremonies.

The game can be seen locally on WSMV-TV, Channel 3. Game time is 8 p.m.

Biological breakthroughs worry scientists

By Robert Bates
Copley News Service

"The potential for good or bad that new biological knowledge is producing must not be allowed to come upon the public unawares, as some scientific knowledge has." That is the paramount concern of Dr. Jacob Bronowski, the mathematician and philosopher who is a resident fellow at the Salk Institute, the great grey-walled structure in La Jolla, Calif., where many of the far-out feats of modern biology are being performed.

He also is director of the Council for Biology in Human Affairs, an international organization of top scientists (five of them Nobel Prize winners) who share a deep concern for the responsible application of science to human problems.

The last two decades have seen a revolution in the life sciences, and its impact on human affairs is increasingly being felt. The unlocking of more and more of nature's secrets has brought new knowledge and new power that already are changing the pattern of social behavior.

Biological breakthroughs have enabled man to keep much disease at bay, to perform medical wonders like human organ transplants, to intervene in the reproductive process with simplicity; inner methods of birth control, to put an own seed in cold storage for later use in artificial insemination. But the discoveries also have raised new social, legal, ethical and political problems.

Such issues as premarital sex, parental responsibility, child legitimacy, family planning and population control have aroused widespread controversy.

Dr. Bronowski, caught off guard by biology's rapid advance, has recently been faced with questions regarding the legitimacy, parenthood and inheritance rights of a child born by artificial insemination, the rights and responsibilities of donors, recipients and surgeons in cases of organ transplants. Old familiar terms like abortion, conception and death are having to be redefined for legal purposes.

More complex and challenging questions are anticipated as man increases his ability to manipulate the basic structure of life and take a hand in his own evolution.

The social and political aspects of world population control become more complicated as biologists foresee the ability to control not only the number but also the sex of the offspring, and, through "genetic tailoring," to breed desired qualities into new generations.

The questions scientists ask themselves as they look ahead to these possibilities are: How shall the process be regulated and who shall responsibility lie? "Closing" the assembly-line production of individuals all breed to the same pattern might be possible, but is it desirable? And who would decide which qualities are to be bred?

Research into the structure of the brain is affording a greater understanding of human behavior and, in addition, a potentiality for altering behavior in defined ways. This raises frightening questions for a society that could one day be subject to mind, mood and memory control.

A host of other questions present themselves — international questions concerning chemical and biological warfare and control of the environment, problems requiring a reexamination of ethics and values.

Traditional religion also is being profoundly affected, and the church is being challenged over age-old concerns concerning marriage, birth control, abortion and other beliefs — down to the basic question of where does life begin and where does it end?

At an international conference of scientists, theologians and politicians called by the World Council of Churches last year, Dr. Eugene Farmon Blake, the council's general secretary, said today there is a great doubt about the future.

"Technical change is coming too fast, our social institutions and systems seem unprepared for the challenge and our human imagination seems unable to grasp the immensity of the change which is in store for the world."

The other major accomplishment that led to the formation of the Council for Biology in Human Affairs, one of its main purposes, is to help in the process of education, particularly in leadership elements, on the social and humanistic consequences of continued biology.

Its stated functions are:

To identify these developments, current or impending, in the life sciences which are most apt to influence profoundly the values and conduct of man; those human and social problems or attitudes which could be rendered more comprehensible by, or are amenable to, biological research; the means by which the human relevance of new knowledge in the life sciences may be made more explicit, understood and managed.

To facilitate and sustain cooperative efforts among scientists, humanists and men of affairs and among established institutions, primarily those of higher education.

To communicate to the public and its leadership findings of the commission established by the council and of the scholars cooperating with this work; policy recommendations, substantiated by the work of the commission and endorsed by the deliberations of the council.

Some of the subjects on which studies are now in progress include the use and abuse of drugs; the moral and legal implications of prenatal diagnosis and of genetic engineering; an accurate assessment of the present threat to the environment; the methods for prohibiting biological warfare; an engineering approach to the needs of minority communities, and the place of human biology in university studies.

"The human being has evolved as far as this by being the first creature which has shaped its environment instead of allowing the environment to shape him," said Dr. Bronowski. "Every other creature has lived in circumstances in which nature has selected for him a niche in the environment.

Now, he says, we have "to create values to elucidate our own conduct, and to learn from it so we can direct it into the future."

Cities' woes worse now than in 1968, says study group

WASHINGTON (AP) - The one ray of hope in a worsening crisis of the cities is the growth of grass-roots, self-help organizations, the National Urban Coalition said Thursday.

But the organization's follow-up study to the 1968 Kern- ner Commission report warned that if racial isolation continues, "most cities by 1980 will be predominantly black and brown and totally bankrupt.

"Our basic finding is that, despite the Kern-ner report's widely accepted finding that one major cause of the ghetto disorders of the '60s was the shameful life in the cities, most of the changes in these conditions since 1968 are at least in the cities we visited - have been for the worse," the Urban Coalition report said.

Sen. Fred R. Harris, D-Okl., and New York Mayor John V. Lindsay were co-chairsmen of the 13-man task force that assessed progress since the report of the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders, headed by Gov. Otto Kerner of Illi- nois.

Harris and Lindsay are considered possible contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

The report titled "The State of the Cities" offered these conclusions on post-1968 developments based on visits to Atlanta, Detroit, Los Angeles, Phoenix, Newark and El Paso, Tex.

"Housing is still the national scandal it was then. Schools are more tenous and turbulent. The rates of crime and unemployment and disease and heroin addiction are higher.\n
"Welfare rolls are higher. And, with few exceptions, the relations between minority communities and the police are just as hostile," the re- port said.

"In short, the expressions of sympathy and concern that the Kern-ner report elicited from a large number of these, who, privately or publicly, wielded the power that governs America, did not signify that they were willing to take the drastic action to make American cities liveable again.

"But the report said the "state of mind on the streets is some cause for hope."

Although the anger of city residents appears to be great- er now than in '68, the task force said, their "anger no longer seems to be the helpless kind that can express itself only by smashing and burning."

"We found people banding together, speaking the lang- uage of brotherhood and reaching for the levers of power," the report said.

McGovern: Saigon rioters included Thieu's own men

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Sen. George S. McGovern charged Thursday that Saigon rioters who stormed and burned him in Saigon last week included members of Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu's civil defense forces and said he had evidence that a Thai intelligence officer was also involved.

The South Dakota Democrat blamed the charge of a news conference called to report on his 11-day trip to Paris, Saigon and Tokyo.

McGovern declared that it appeared likely that there had been a successful way to prevent anybody else other than himself from running for president in South Vietnam, without questioning the value of anything here in the United States. The State Department said it had no independent account of the incident. McGovern, who lost his status as the only formally declared presidential candidate when Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma entered the race Friday, said he considered the issues in Vietnam a Choral clinic slated Oct. 16

At least 1,000 high school choristers are expected on campus Oct. 16 for SU's annual High School Choral Clinic. Guest conductor will be Norman Hair, chairman of the fine arts division at Coral Coast (Fla.) Junior College.

The massed choirs will rehearse under Hair's baton during the day and will present a free public performance at 8:30 p.m. in Shrybuck Auditorium, Robert King- huber, director of choirs at SU and chairman of the clinic, said preparatory material is being sent to all schools in the state's 35 southern counties.

Murder decrease

NEW YORK (CBS) -- New York City's crime rate dropped last week, and police said Thursday seven of 23 people killed were murdered last year, but none so far this year.

and U.S. economic difficulties "inexplicable" in his quest for the presidency.

"When we talk about the war," he said, "when we talk about a defense budget which goes up $4 billion while the President's proposals eliminate some $4 billion from the economy, we are talking about all the other issues before this country."

In the Senate, meanwhile, McGovern pressed an amendment that would require President Nixon to give Congress next year, along with his regular defense budget, an alternative budget with a $6 billion ceiling, including plans to stimulate conservation of defense industries to civilian pursuits.

The McGovern amendment was the day's major business as the Senate grappled with the proposals to cut the $21 billion defense authorization bill for military hardware and research. Most amendments are expected to be defeated.

One that is expected to pass, directing total U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam within six months if American prisoners are freed, will be introduced today. Republican leader Mike Mansfield told an earlier Mansfield amendment, with a nine-month deadline, was approved 61-36 as a rider to the draft bill but diluted by Senate-House conferences in the final version of the measure on which congressional action was completed Tuesday.

McGovern told the news conference that his meeting with U.S. and North Vietnamese negotiators, in Paris left him convinced a U.S. announcement of a fixed date for total withdrawal would lead to a grim peace pipe-line and release of the prisoners, regardless of what political arrangements would then be made in South Vietnam.

Fund allocation foils three
Celebrity Series bookings

By Pat Hussman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Uncertain University finances may have killed the potential Celebrity Series shows, and, according to the series' booker, the appropriation system could cause the same problems in the future.

Paul Hibbe, the special programs coordinator, said he was looking to book "Company," "Promise, Promise," and the National Ballet, but couldn't find out in time to book the shows. Now money the series would require to book them is gone.

"I found out later I could have booked them," he said.

The Celebrity Series receives half of its financing from the student activities fees and the admission money, with the other expenses paid by the University. Usually it is in time for the summer before Hibbe finds out what student government has appropriated for the series. Then he has to wait for Board of Trustees approval.

The trouble with this schedule, he said, is that ideally he should start to book plays around Christmas, then come up with arrangements in the next few months.

Hibbe says he could have had the three shows as late as May, but student government didn't make the appropriation recommendations until mid-August. He said he couldn't commit to them until he knew whether the Celebrity Series could foot the bill, he said.

"I don't want to suggest these people haven't been nice-they have," he said. "They've tried to help us all they could." But there doesn't seem to be any way to correct the booking situation in future years, he said, and the Celebrity Series will probably still have problems booking the good shows that go early.

The only way to change it, Hibbe said, would be for the University to go ahead and say "they'll guarantee the financing or else have student government make their appropriations earlier.

"I don't think we suffered, though," he said, "not in bookings anyway. We have a top-notch program—one of the best we've ever had. We got a couple of lucky breaks."

The lucky breaks were the bookings of the Boston Ballet and the St. Louis Symphony, but had breaks came too whom budget cuts prevented him from booking the Vienna State Opera.

"Again I think the students did the best with us as they could. But we just need about twice as much as they gave," he said. "For a while we were just wondering if we could stay in business," he said.

Financially the success depends on the audience turnout, on which also depends whether the Celebrity Series can partially pay for itself.

"We may turn our going to Antica or the state prison," Hibbe joked.

"It's about as hazardous a business as you can imagine," he said. "More fortunes are lost on Broadway than earned."

Second center planned

The local Women's Liberation Front is organizing a second cooperative day care center here for the residents of Evergreen Terrace, Mary Sunghen, project director, said Thursday.

An organizational meeting will be at 1 p.m., Saturday in the Evergreen Terrace Community Room. Once in operation, the center will care for children under walking age while the already established center at the Wedel Foundation will care for the older children, Mrs. Sunghen said. She said the separation would hopefully prevent injuries to the babies by overcurious older children.

The program is entirely cooperative with no staff except the director, a parent wishing his child cared for must also spend time to assist at the center.

SIU network has new series for subscribers

The SIU Radio Network is offering 15 taped radio series to subscriber stations for the coming broadcast season beginning in October, the Broadcasting Service has announced.

Offered this year will be two new series, seven new versions of former series and six repeats.

The new series are: "Jazz, the Blues and Ragtime," featuring recent jazz festivals in major American cities and "Foreign Voices in America," featuring former football player Sam Bilas who will discuss international reactions to American life.

The new versions of old series will deal with editorial comment on controversial issues, agriculture, sports and the history of American music.

Repeats will discuss home-making, consumer protection, arts, music and the campus scene.

Programs are available Wednesday on a non-exclusively basis to both educational and commercial broadcasters, except the new jazz series which is offered to educational stations only.
Welfare costs

In June for the second consecutive month.

The 14.3 million recipients in June were 22,000 fewer than May. The number on rolls four years ago was 8.4 million.

HEW disclosed meanwhile that an army of 80,000 new federal employees in 4,000 offices nationwide would be needed to run the welfare system.

They would replace 81,000 state employees and would almost double the size of the 107,000-man HEW department, according to Richard P. Nathan, deputy undersecretary of HEW.

The job of replacing 200 separate state and local welfare systems with a computer-based federal program would require 18 months after congressional approval of the President's family assistance plan, Nathan added.

He said possibly 25 million persons would have to be interviewed to determine their eligibility for benefits, including re-investigations of the 14.3 million persons now receiving relief.

The family assistance program would replace separate state welfare systems with federal checks totaling $2,400 a year for a family of four. The working poor would be eligible for the first time for supplemental assistance.

The reform plan passed the House but is bogged down in the Senate Finance Committee.

Canut-Amoros says report inaccurate

Ms. Canut-Amoros said it is untrue that she requested two hearings from the University as the report states. She said she was advised to withdraw a letter requesting a hearing from the Board at a time when it seemed as if her resignation was withdrawn.

This letter was restated a month later, on July 5, and sent to the University after it became evident the procedure of her resignation was continuing.

She raised another objection concerning the reasons stated in the report for her requesting a change in the leave so she would finish a report on an Air Force grant.

The complaint she had requested the change because funds remained from the grant which she says she did not want the University to lose.

Another problem, she said, rests with the report's neglect to mention the circumstances surrounding her actions, which failed to achieve full professor rank. Ms. Canut-Amoros said she had retracted a complaint concerning the president of the Faculty Council but that the complaint was never taken up.

She followed the recommendations of the AAUP regarding her case once they became involved.

to the council as a whole.

The biggest defect of the report, she said, is that it is not clear what the council's views were.

Härdgesbergh said the differences between Ms. Canut-Amoros and the council's views of the situation were merely a "question of emphasis," and that the objections were "not appropriate for her to raise."

He said the panel had not felt that the points Ms. Canut-Amoros is now raising were essential to the case.

The other two members of the panel could not be reached.

Thursday for comment.

Ledbetter looks for good year from Saluki fash

It's only been three days since they've been together but the SIU soccer freshmen have given coach Bob Allen something to smile about.

"I got a real good about the team," he said, "so I feel good now. I know it's going to be a good season.

With those words Ledbetter put his squad through workouts Thursday afternoon. It was the first official day on the varsity practice field near the arena.

Much of the session was devoted to fundamentals and learning the SIU playbook.

Later the receivers got together with three quarterback Mike Hanna, Kevin Kane and Kevin O'Boyle and did their thing.

Ledbetter was pleased with the work of all three freshmen quarterbacks. He hopes to use them during a drill in which they were tutored by Tom Tabor, Harold Campbell and "Looks good," Ledbetter said, "looks good."

O'Boyle, who stands 6-3 and weighs 180 pounds, is the younger brother of Mike and Mike who play for the Saluki varsity. The trio of O'Boyles are peers of defensive coordinator Tom O'Boyle.

According to Ledbetter, "Garnes*, who is enrolled at three quarterbacks in Hanna. The four-7-1 junior, stands 6-2 and is listed in the football press guide at 205 pounds. Ledbetter, "he be must up to 200 by now."

The third freshman signal-caller is a local product, Kimm, who played halfback and quarterback for Carlinville. He stands 5-10 and weighs 175 pounds.

Wednesday, the trio showed good ability at punting and the team is in line to hire their receivers.

There was some contact work Wednesday with the first team scrimmage scheduled for Thursday. "We'll have a little scrimmage," Ledbetter said. "Just a little one though because we can't go to hard at first.

The yearlings' first taste of combat for keep-well Oct. 15 against Indiana State at Terre Haute: followed five days later by a clash with Illinois State at McAndrew Stadium.

The schedule is rounded out by meetings with Drake State, Nov. 6, at home and Tennessee, Nov. 15, in Madison.

Earlier in the week, Ledbetter learned that one of his highly thought of recruits, All-American Rubin Carrin Fr., 19, from Chicago's Englewood, Ill., had decided not to attend SIU and enrolled at the University of Miami less than 30 miles from his home.

Carin had signed a national letter of intent, binding himself to the Salukis, but Miami does not honor the letter so Carin is without a college right now.

According to Ledbetter, "Garnes? switched because of the illness of his mother."

Club sponsors trip to game

The Saluki Loyalties are sponsoring a bus trip to the Saluki-Illinois State football game in Normal Saturday. Any interested in making the trip should contact John Holbrook or Al Green at Wilson Hall or call 457-2149.

The bus will leave the Student Center at 11 a.m. and will return to Carbondale immediately after the game.

Kickoff time for the game is 1:30 p.m. at ISU's Hancock Stadium.

"Dick! Dick!" cried excited Spiro.

"I think I know how to find the solution to our problems!"

"What do you mean 'our' problems? We hardly know each other," replied Dick, feeling slightly embarrassed.

"No, Spiro, you think you know all the answers, Beatrix you don't know the answer to this one."

"What is black and white, and read all over?"

"Now, Spiro," snapped back Dick, obviously perturbed, "I've asked you not to discuss the race problem with me."

"Dick! Dick!", raised his hands on high. I'm talking about the DE classifieds! We can find the answer to America's problems thru them!"

"Spiro!"

"Yes, Dick."

"I didn't know America had problems."
Harriers meet tough Indiana at Midland Hills course today

By Sam Stewart

The SU cross country team may have to wait until Oct. 2 to begin its second season.

Although the Salukis are a much stronger team than they were in two losing causes earlier this season, Indiana holds the upper hand in a meet at Southern at 4 p.m. Friday at the Midland Hills Golf Course.

SU may have to wait until Saturday when it hosts Illinois State to break into the win column for the first time this season.

The Hoosiers will be trying to raise its record to 2-0 this year following a disappointing 15-49 win over Indiana State. The Sycamores had defeated SU the week before.

Indiana is tough and SU head coach Lew Hartung knows it. The Hoosiers lost only one man from a team that took team titles at the Owensboro (Ky.) Invitational, Big State Meet, USTFF meet and AAC Championships last year besides placing third in the Big 10 Championships and fourth in the NCAA.

Hartung said this week the Salukis should give Indiana a respectable race. He doesn't think SU will face a defeat, as happening in 1979, when Indiana State's last weekend when Indiana took the first six places.

A Southern win Friday is not out of the question but the Salukis will have to run hard.

An earlier opening academic year helped the Hoosiers to their high fly start against SU and the Big 10 title that has eluded Indiana coach Sam Bell in his first two seasons at the Big Blue.

Bell is hoping senior Scott Hiles can help the Hoosiers finish off this year, although Hiles had a disappointing junior year.

Hiles-Bruce-Skeele-Kelly, Bob Sommers, Paul Olsen and Pat Mander--competed in the NCAA last year with Hilles and have made Indiana a cross country power with such experience.

Unlike Indiana, Hartung had very little time to work with the Salukis before the beginning of the season and it has cost them two wins.

What does SU have going for it? A home course advantage and a healthy team.

All 12 Saluki runners are expected to be healthy for the meet although team captain Ken Nelder experienced stomach pains during the week.

Hartung said he doesn't think Nelder's condition is anything to worry about and the ace harrier is expected to run. Nelder was the SU pacebearer at the Indiana State meet, finishing the four mile trek in 26:21.

Juniour Gerry Hinson is in good shape following an Achilles' tendon surgery one year ago.

Replacing hurt Newlands, McAnelly no easy task

By Mike Klein

Seems everytime you turn around, another Saluk is biting the dust with a strained this, pulled that or hurt something else.

Two of the more critical injuries this year have been to defensive starters: linebacker Brant Newlands and top end Ken McAnelly.

Newlands bruised the middle finger of his left hand in about as freaky an accident as you'll find. During a scrimage, he blundered and was tackling quarterback Terry Klein when the finger became lodged in the ear hole on Klein's helmet.

As Newlands threw the sombre note to the turf, the finger bled. McAnelly's injury came in combat against Dayton. He was blocked hard and tore ligaments and cartilage in the right knee.

Newlands is expected back for the Ball State game, Oct. 16 in McAndrew Stadium. But McAnelly is out for the year.

Replacing Newlands at linebacker isn't very difficult, if there's any way to easily replace an Honorable Mention All-American.

Luckily, linebacking is the Salukis' strongest suit with lettermen five deep. Mike O'Boyle, nephew of defensive coordinator Tom O'Boyle, has taken over in place of Newlands.

"We looked to Newlands as a leader and about him, I think the other linebackers have picked up the slack," said the older O'Boyle.

Replacing McAnelly has been a more difficult chore. Defensive end depth is such that junior Mike Kaczmark has been moved from offensive tackle and tight end to help shore up the outside defensive spots.

"I look to Mike to be either a first or second string defensive end," said coach O'Boyle. "Mike possesses one thing the others don't, great range, speed and quickness. This is the type of physical specimen we want at that position."

At 6-5 and 225 pounds, Kaczmark is taller and faster than his competition at defensive end.

But even if Kaczmark should win the spot, O'Boyle is quick to "guarantee you one thing, we're going to miss McAnelly. He played one of his best games up at Dayton and I don't know if we can get it filled right away as well as McAnelly could play it. Maybe later on, we hope."

Kaczmark's strongest competition at defensive end comes from fellow sophomore David Pagen. Dixon is the smaller of the two, 6-4, 195. Pagen stands 6-5 and weighs 200.
