More victims seeking help at center

Number of assaults reported to Women’s Center doubles

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

The executive director of the Women’s Center said the center set a record in July that is not only nothing to be proud of, but is rather alarming.

Julie Clausen said the center made 22 contacts — twice the monthly average — with rape victims or the friends and relatives of the victims in July. She said this is the highest number for any month since the center opened in 1973.

The number of contacts for rape victims was above average, with 13 contacts as of Aug. 22. Kris Weszell, Rape Action coordinator, said the number of contacts in July 1988 was 7, with 47 contacts from July to December 1988. The average number of rapes per month for the past year was 11, Clausen said.

“It must have something to do with the heat,” Clausen said.

“Every summer, rape goes up.” One possible reason for the higher numbers is more women are reporting sexual assault, Clausen said. She credited Carbondale police with handling victims of sexual assault in a compassionate manner.

Clausen said she was happy they have been three arrests made for the July assaults and two arrests for the August assaults reported to the center. Clausen said there has been an increasing trend for victims to go to the police. She said it is recommended that victims have a physical exam and go to the police. But if victims choose not to, workers at the center don’t push them.

“Our philosophy is not to tell anyone what to do. We are just here for (the victims),” Clausen said.

“Women are afraid of the hospital to see if they are OK and collect evidence to use if they decide to press charges,” Clausen said. “If they don’t want to, they don’t want to.”

The Women’s Center, which also operates a crisis hotline, is a shelter for abused women and their children. Clausen said there are currently 12 people in the shelter. Half are children.

Most, rapes are committed by relatives, Clausen said, adding that men can promote respect for women by influencing others.

“Men can help by using peer pressure to convince other men not to act that way,” Clausen said.

Preserved districts proposed

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The Carbondale Planning Commission is considering a proposal that would establish regulations for the creation of preservation districts throughout Carbondale.

“This proposal has three different types of zoning provisions: historic, neighborhood preservation and landmarks,” Tom Redmond, city planner, said. The main goal of the zoning ordinance is to set up standards for appearance in designated areas.

Redmond said the ordinance would not dictate how the area would be used. It would only designate how the area looks.

Non-citizens from the West Central Carbondale Neighborhood Association and the Central Carbondale Historic Area have been working in conjunction with the planning commission since February to draft this Historic Preservation Ordinance, Redmond said.

In response to this proposal, the Carbondale Planning Commission conducted a public hearing Aug. 16 to discuss the ordinance Redmond said.

The impetus to create the proposed ordinance stemmed from a request by the Central Carbondale Historic Area Association, which is concerned about the impact the east-west couple would have on the West Walnut Street historic district.

Acid rain reduction project underway

SIU-C researchers creating bacterium to eat coal sulfur, decrease emissions

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

Researchers at SIU-C are working on developing a “super bacterium” that would eat the sulfur from coal, thus reducing the emissions that cause acid rain.

Microbiologist David Clark has been working on the project since 1984 with Brian Klubek, of the Plant and Soil Department.

The researchers said they hope to develop a sulfur-eating organism by isolating an already-existing bacterium that breaks down sulfur and then using gene-splicing techniques to combine the bacteria with mutant bacteria being created by Clark.

Clark said, “I’m working on making mutations in the lab and modifying the bacteria in the lab.”

The sulfur-eating bacteria would convert the coal sulfur into sulfate. The sulfate would be removed by rinsing.

The process would be done after the coal has been crushed and mixed with water. Researchers said the use of the bacteria will be little added expense since power companies already use the coal and water mixes as fuel.

According to Clark, the research group recently was awarded a $114,000 grant from the Center for research on Sulfur in Coal. The group is also being supported by the U.S. Department of Energy, which is currently funding the group with a three-year $180,000 grant.

The project has been going on for the past few years, but the two said they believe it will receive added attention in the wake of President Bush’s proposal to reduce sulfur dioxide emissions in half by 2001.

Coal Miners Workers officials said Southern Illinois would be hit hard by reductions because the coal in the area is sulfur rich and the “ree economy is heavily reliant on the coal industry.”

Park alcohol ban affects University

Safety, upkeep reasons for park’s ban on drinking

By Doug Tulee
Staff Writer

The recent ban on alcohol in parts of Giant City State Park could have an impact on at least one University activity previously held there.

Joe Muller, chairman of the anthropology department, and the department’s annual picnic, organized mainly by students, may go through some changes this year because of the ban. He said the activity could cause in- students to move the location of the picnic to another site.

Rob Meser, president of SIU-C’s Interfraternity Council, said he didn’t think an alcohol ban in Giant City would affect the Greeks. Meser said said academic and community service are the primary goals of the Greek system, and there are numerous alternatives to holding alcohol-related social activities on the park.

The ban will be in effect from Sept. 1 to Oct. 31 of this year. He said the reasons for the ban are to ensure health and safety, Giant City City Superintendent Bob Krustof said. The ban is the result of the growing size of the crowds going to Giant City Park over the years. He said the resources of the park are being abused and the number of accidents involving people at the park.

WARSAW, POLAND (UPI) - Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev said Tuesday Poland's problems cannot be solved without a key role for the Polish Communist Party in a Solidarity-led government, a Polish party spokesman said. In a conversation with Communist Party leader Mieczyslaw Rakowski, Gorbachev said the Polish Communist Party should be represented in the incoming first non-communist government in four decades, the spokesman said.

Czechs not releasing data on protest arrests

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — Czechoslovakia refused to release information Tuesday to Poland and Hungary about several of those nations' citizens who were detained at a rally on the 21st anniversary of the Warsaw Pact crackdown on the "Prague Spring." An editorial in the Communist Party daily blamed foreigners for provoking Monday's demonstration in which club-swinging police drove thousands of protesters from Wenceslas Square and arrested 370.

Senegal cuts ties with west African nation

DAKAR, Senegal (UPI) — Senegal announced it will shut down its embassy in the Mauritanian capital, formally severing diplomatic ties with the west African nation after it declared the Senegalese ambassador possessed a gun and gave him 24 hours to return home. Monday night's declaration effectively formalized a break in relations that occurred earlier in the day.

Begin released from hospital after week stay

JERUSALEM, (UPI) - Former Prime Minister Menachem Begin left Sha'arei Zedek Medical Center Tuesday following a seven-day stay and was discharged after a brain hemorrhage. The 76-year-old leader, who suffered a stroke in July, was discharged from the hospital's intensive care unit on Saturday and moved to a regular ward on Monday. The hospital said Begin's condition had improved and he was in good health.

Gorbachev rates best statesman over Bush

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is the better statesman and the best economist, but U.S. President George Bush is the better economist, according to a poll of Danish perceptions of the Superpower leaders. Asked which of the two was the better statesman, 45 percent of Danes voted for Gorbachev and 15 percent for Bush. The Soviet leader also won as the most charming with 53 percent to 15 percent for Bush.

Police arrest couple on child abuse charges

NEW YORK (UPI) – A reclusive Bronx man and his wife were charged Tuesday with beating and sexually abusing nine of their children in the family's filthy two-room apartment and authorities were digging for the bodies of two of the couple's infants, police said. Detectives said the children, ranging in age from 4 months to 16 years, had suffered beatings, sexual assault and other physical abuse in the cramped apartment that the family rarely left.

Corrections/Clarifications

The new bad checks policy story in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian was incomplete. The policy points are printed on Page 15 of today's Daily Egyptian. Tynae Bell's name was spelled incorrectly in Monday and Tuesday's Daily Egyptian. Intrasual fall officials' meeting is at 5 today. Three second-place times for Mary Pohlmann were state records. Larry Good is an associate professor. Good also placed first in the 200-meter backstroke. This information was incorrect in the Saluki Masters swim club story in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian.

WIDB seeking new workers

Interest meeting will be held for students who want hands-on radio experience

By Doug Toole
SIU Writer

WIDB radio will have a meeting for students interested in joining its staff at 6 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center Auditorium.

Alan Brostoff, assistant promotions director of WIDB, said students wanting hands-on experience in promotions, production, sales, news, engineering and sports should attend the meeting. No prior experience is required.

LONDON (UPI) — Authorities implemented new safety measures Tuesday for charter boats plying the River Thames following the weekend collision of a pleasure boat and a barge that police believe killed 57 people.

A Scotland Yard spokeswoman said 57 people are believed to have died and 79 people survived the early Sunday accident that occurred when the 1,745-ton barge Bowbelle rammed the 80-ton cruise boat Marchioness.

Investigators said Monday they believed the accident was due to a navigational error but refused comment on what boat was to blame. Police said they were considering criminal charges in the accident.

Three bodies of 26 people, including a Pittsburgh native, have been recovered since the crowded pleasure boat was rammed and sent to the bottom of the Thames, police said.

The search continued for the bodies of 31 other people believed missing, police said.

"Well, it's my experience that Father Thames delivers them up eventually," Superintendent Rod Allen said. "It is very, very rare indeed for a person to go on and never be recovered. That's very, very rare indeed."

As of noon Tuesday, charter boats were required to record the number of passengers and leave a copy of that record ashore.

The absence of such a list complicated efforts to compile a definite death toll.

Pleasure boat operators are now also required to instruct passengers on what to do in an emergency under the new regulations issued Monday by Transportation Secretary Cecil Parkinson.

The London port authority has said it will increase river patrols and a panel will examine others ways to improve river safety because of the accident.

Testifying at a Westminster Crown Court inquest, Detective Chief Superintendent Michael Purchase said the Marchioness had exceeded its 150-person capacity at Scotland Yard initially believed.

However, it became clear that more than 110 people the number operators estimated were aboard — had embarked on the deadly cruise.

Purchase said blood tests for alcohol conducted on the skipper and six crew members of the Marchioness were negative.

WIDB radio will explain what the staff in their individual departments will do and what kind of people they are looking for. Following the introductions, department heads will meet with those students interested in joining their staff.

Brostoff said WIDB is more like a club than a business, so students shouldn't bring resumes or demo tapes to the general meeting. He said people who have an interest in radio work will find the WIDB experience rewarding.

"Everyone will have something to do and everyone should have a good time," Brostoff said.

"Anyone can be a disc jockey," Brostoff said.

When politicians leave Washington the town becomes a wonderful place

The week before Labor Day was a wonderful time to be in Washington, wonderful because nobody else is. It is a brief respite of a happier time when the federal government used to clean up dopo for the summer to escape Washington's stifling heat. Congress would go home in June, the president would relocate his office to his summer retreat and the federal agencies would all go into vacation until September.

Think of it: no gossip debates on Capitol Hill, no cloche-ridden statements churning out of the White House even the media would become quiet, only silence. The American people didn't talk much about government in those days, just quiet summers and it got them.

Air conditioning conditioned all the trees, it became too good to endure the insufferable Washington summers by artificial means, politicians started to lengthen the legislative year to prove that we couldn't get along without them. Now government is virtually a yearlong job, there aren't any better but there are more of them and, when the president goes on vacation for a week people get keekee press.

But in summer, our conditioning or no, the town begins to empty out, like it did every year Washington becomes again a sleepy, provincial town of no great gravity, it's heaven.

The only做到 of those who make a living writing about public affairs is that nothing is happening. As a matter of fact in the whole of the United States today, there is really only one significant story, one story with the reach and scope to capture the imagination, one story that fills the mind.

Malcolm Forbes '70th birthday party

You've read of it, of course. Forbes, who would be thought a watch if he weren't so rich, and his loans loaded half the celebrities of the corporate world, with a few media stars sprinkled in, onto a fleet of jets and flew them off to Morocco where they were wined, dined and entertained in sufinicid for the weekend. Then they were flown home.

| Donald Kaul |
| Tribune Media Services |

The whole gang was there: Barbara Walters, Henry and Nancy Kissinger, Lee Iacocca, Walter Cronkite, Calvin Klein, Abe Rosenthal, Beverly Hills, Betsy Bloomgarden, Ann Landers, her sister Abby, Helen Gurley Brown, the Gettys, Al Neuharth, Bill and Pat Buckley, as well the heads of Western Union, Air France, the Hearst Corp, Fia, Soul were all, of course, in Washington.

They say the bush cost in the neighborhood of $2 million. Naturally the spotlights of the press immediately began abusing Forbes for his wretched excess.

"What about the starving..." they, in effect, shouted at him, a question for which he had no completely satisfactory answer.

On the other hand, neither does anyone care. This is the kind of thing where you can get so saucy that a large portion of our incomes could not be spent for four weeks and they're hungry. Why pick on Forbes? People should be able to spend their money any way they want to, no matter how rich they are, which is not to say I am not in favor of enforcing a certain social responsibility. That's why God made progressive taxation.

Rich people should be relieved of some of their excess cash before they are tempted to spend it foolishly.

It is a Republican myth that people shouldn't be taxed because they know how to spend their money better than the government does. Forbes' party, $50 designer jeans, $60 sweat shirts with polo players on them, and $100 gym shoes all prove that there are a lot of people walking around with more money than they know what to do with. We should take some of it away and put it to good use, like getting to the moon.

It's not as though this is a new phenomenon. The rat pack, the robber barons of the Gilded Age made Forbes seem like a piker. Alisair Cook, in his delightful book "America," reports that one New York baron bedded down his horses on monogrammed linen sheets while another gave a dinner at which guess were invited to bid for favors with tiny silver shovels in a long, this sandbox, if it turned out to be filled with rubies, sapphires and diamonds. Mrs. Vanderbilt once threw a hall for her addled husband, who couldn't get along with them, just the impression that he was the Prince of Wales. The most you can accuse Malcolm Forbes of is being under the impression that he's Richard Burton.

Family, education takes determination and work

THE AVERAGE student working toward an undergraduate degree knows the time, work and dedication it takes to succeed. Being married and raising a family is something that the typical student puts aside for the future. However, nontraditional students do just the opposite. They begin a family, then either resume their studies or postpone or even drop out where their student fees are allocated. The list goes on. Can you?
Chaos is normal for semester start

Traffic jams, long lines are the rule

A Staff Report

Each fall butterflies flutter in the stomachs of all students—from kindergartners to Ph.D candidates. And so, do, those same butterflies are in the stomachs of parents, seeing their children off to that first day of grade school—or college.

In Carbondale, many students return during the week before classes begin to move into their housing and figure out where their classes are. The streets are jam-packed with overloaded station wagons, rented moving vans and trailers with drivers unfamiliar with the maze of city and campus streets.

Possibly the most dramatic sight is in the high-rise dorms on East Campus where students and their helpers (parents, Student Life Advisers) lug stereo equipment, computers, microwaves and clothes up as many as 17 flights of stairs (fake the elevator? Look at that line! Are you kidding!).

There is a lot of activity during that week before school starts. The football team and the marching band are practicing their moves. Fraternities, sororities and other student organizations work to drum up new members. SLCAs are giving campus tours. There's also a Watermelon Fest (Where's the watermelon?).

And who could forget the time it took standing in never-ending lines to register or make last minute payments? Students fight their way through the Woody shuffle to get in lines to buy books also are the norm.

Classes started Monday and confusion still reigns. You know you are a true SIU-C upperclassman when you can explain to a newcomer where the Suburban goes.

The proposed ordinance would not stop the east-west couple, but would regulate neighborhood appearance.

Clyde Forest, a consultant with the Central Carbondale Historic Area Association, said the West Walnut area was on the national registry for historic areas and the couple would destroy the residential character of the area. Installing a zoning ordinance would be a step in the right direction to preserve personality of the area.

The Carbondale City Council compiled the request and ordered the planning commission and city staff to set up a committee to draft such a proposal.

"If the clean air proposal as proposed by Bush stands, it would be absolutely devastating to the Illinois coal industry," Taylor Penzone, vice president of the Illinois Coal Association, said. "It's safe to say that at least half of the industry as we know it would go down the drain within relatively few years."

The researchers said they believe that the creation of the "super bacterium" is successful, the project would be a boon for the area economy as well as reducing acid rain.

Kristoff said he had seen groups as large as 1,200 people go to areas serviced by only two outdoor toilets. Over one weekend in the early spring three people were injured by falling off bluffs in the park. Kristoff said all three accidents were alcohol-related.

"We had to take some sort of action. We had to try something," Kristoff said.

Kristoff said he regrets that the ban will affect some traditional university functions, but the overall safety of the crowd at the park is his main priority.

The signs included slogans like "Stop drinking and smoking" and "Be sober and fair." The park is for play, not for drinking. Harris said the march had given the teens some positive feedback from the community. She said she can't be sure if the adults' drinking and smoking habits have changed.

"I think it's wonderful that the teens are taking the initiative in cleaning up their community and that they're putting the labeling where the blame belongs," Harris said.

Harris said the signs are planning to have another march late Saturday afternoon. She said she hopes to see the process and the efforts to clean up the park continue.

Agriculture college plans roast reunion

By Phil Peterson
Staff Writer

All faculty members, students, and alumni of the SIU-C College of Agriculture are invited to attend a pig roast on Aug. 29, James Tweedy, dean of the College of Agriculture, said. Tweedy said Athletic Director John Bretzlaff will speak at the gathering, followed by a brief update by Tweedy on the college before allowing time for those in attendance to mingle.

"People really enjoy the interstate," Tweedy said. "They get a chance to renew old acquaintances with faculty members and friends and that's really what it is designed to do.

The committee also advocated for student issues, including a tuition freeze until 1992, a permanent income tax, funding accessibility for the handicapped and child care for everyone in the University. Other ideas included financial aid to match the student-to-student grant program, funding for safety programs on campus, voter registration with driver's license renewal, student voting power or governing boards and equal bargaining rights for graduate employees.

The committee also advocated support for State Senator Miguel DeValle's, D-Chicago, report on increasing minority enrollment and keeping minority students in universities.

ISA will be doing the promotions on the ideas and circulate the Agenda to legislators, Hildebrand said.
Plan to evaluate Exxon Valdez damage attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Environmentalists criticized the government's plan for assessing the impact of the Exxon Valdez oil spill on Alaskan wildlife Tuesday, saying it is likely to understate environmental damage.

The Natural Resources Defense Council said the proposed federal review assessment plan called for only one year of wildlife studies - through February 1990 - but that damage from the massive oil spill in Prince William Sound probably would not fully manifest for years.

"The assessment plan tells only part of the story," said Susan Wicks, a council attorney. "Oil will not disappear in a year and the environment will continue to feel its pernicious effects for years to come."

"This one-year plan could lead to a serious underestimation of harm to environment," she said.

Exxon began firing up the barge-mounted oil incinerator and that made the native Aluts hot enough to threaten a blockade of the barge, preventing deliveries.

Chasis said damage assessment studies must be conducted over several years to evaluate damage to migratory animals that may have left Prince William Sound after being affected by the oil spill. For example, she said salmon spawned during the oil spill may not return to the sound for two to four years.

Chasis charged scientists originally wanted to stretch studies out over five years, but federal officials insisted the draft plan announced Tuesday call for only one year of studies.

The council also questioned whether the plan would give Exxon too large a role in assessing environmental damages from the 10.9 million gallons of oil spilled from the supertanker Exxon Valdez March 24 when it ran aground on a reef outside the port of Valdez, Alaska.

"This would be like asking the fox how many chickens he ate," said Bob Adler, another attorney for the council.

The assessment plan, which is now subject to public comment until Sept. 30, will be used by the government to determine how much Exxon will have to pay to help restore Prince William Sound, which is located on Alaska's south coast.

Tom Wilson, an Interior Department spokesman, declined to comment directly on the council's criticism of the assessment plan, but said the department considered the proposal "reasonable" and "useful." He also noted that state officials in Alaska - not just federal officials - had prepared the plan.

In another development, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Washington challenging an April 1987 Interior Department report to Congress that recommended lawmakers open up the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska to oil drilling.

The lawsuit charged the report failed to meet legal requirements that Congress be fully informed of all possible harmful environmental effects from offshore development in the refuge, a huge nature preserve on the north coast of Alaska.

Exxon furnace broken to delight of Alaskans

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) - Mechanical problems have done what prosecutors could not - stop Exxon from burning the oil spill debris waste this week near a small Kodiak Island fishing community.

Exxon touted its floating furnace as a safe, state-of-the-art burning machine capable of turning 125 tons of debris into ash every day, but the incinerator broke down before Exxon could burn the first load of oily waste, much to the delight of nearby residents.

"Thank you, you made my day," Port Lions Mayor Peter Sparksoff replied when he learned of Exxon's inability to start burning waste 8 miles from his village.

Exxon began firing up the barge-mounted oil incinerator and that made the Native Aluts hot enough to threaten a blockade of the barge, preventing deliveries of oily waste.

Protestors in fishing boats sailed to Viekoda Bay, where the incinerator had been anchored, but the Coast Guard imposed a 100-yard security zone to keep them away.

High winds Monday kept 15 boats away but then came word that the incinerator broke down.

Voyager 2 solves Neptune mystery

Planets existence originally proven with mathematics

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) - NASA's Voyager 2 probe discovered a complete ring around Neptune Tuesday, proving a previously known partial ring is a continuous swath of debris around the frigid planet, elated scientists said.

Hurtling through space at nearly 20,000 mph - 2½ times faster than an M-16 rifle bullet! - Voyager 2 was 2.5 million miles from bluish Neptune early Tuesday, with its aging systems "go" for a long-awaited low-altitude flyby, expected about 8:55 p.m. PDT Thursday.

Now, 143 years later, NASA's Voyager 2 probe is racing toward a close encounter with Neptune following a trajectory based on those very same laws.

Voyager 2 discovered two partial rings, called ring arcs, around the planet Aug. 11 and overnight, the spacecraft beamed back 55 pictures of the space around the planet in a concentrated search for more of the incomplete rings.

One of those ring arcs, discovered earlier this month has not been photographed since and one goal of the search Tuesday was to find the "lost arc."

"More than one ring (arc) could be seen even in the raw images," astronaut Bradford Smith said at a news conference. "It seemed reasonable that this was indeed the lost arc that our imaging team were looking for. The answer to that is yes and no.

"It is indeed in exactly the right place. The no is, it's not an arc, it goes all the way around! So it is Neptune's first complete ring."

Smith said the other, partial ring may be complete as well, but like its counterpart, the material making it up is too distant to be monitored.

"The inner arc, the one that we were unable to find since the discovery images, is there," he said. "It is continuous, all the way around, but with very low optical thickness."

Thursday's flyby of Neptune will be the fourth and final planetary encounter for Voyager 2 since launch 12 years ago from planet Earth on a lonely space odyssey carrying it past Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and now Neptune.

If all goes well, Voyager 2 will sail 3,000 miles over the cloudtops of Neptune at close approach, and five hours later the probe will pass within about 25,000 miles of Triton, one of Neptune's six known moons.

Spectacular color photos were released Monday showing details of a giant storm system in Neptune's frigid atmosphere.

Neptune rings visible: Closeup on the way

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) - The year James K. Polk was elected president, two young European mathematicians set out to solve a problem that had puzzled the scientists of the day: why was the planet Uranus not moving in its orbit as predicted?

Mathematicians Urbain Jean Joseph Le Verrier and John Couch Adams both calculated that Uranus, discovered in 1781, did not move in its orbit as one would expect according to Isaac Newton's first law of motion, which states that an object will continue in a state of uniform motion unless acted on by an external force.

Given that astronomers were having trouble predicting the location of Uranus in its orbit, some other force must have been acting on the planet.

Newton's universal law of gravitation states that all bodies pull on one another with a force that depends on their mass and distance from one another.

To predict the future location of a planet, then, an astronomer must take into consideration the pull of the sun and the known planets. When this was done for Uranus, the answer still did not fit.

"By the early 1800s, the difference between where Uranus was predicted to be, taking into account the other known planets, and where it actually appeared was getting to be quite noticeable," according to "The Voyager Neptune Travel Guide: A document published by NASA.

"As early as 1829, Friedrich Wilhelm Bessel suggested that a new planet must be pulling on Uranus, causing the un-predicted motion."

In 1845, British mathematician John Couch Adams completed a series of calculations and submitted the result to Astronomer Royal George Airy, who promptly chose to ignore the prediction.

French mathematician Urbain Jean Joseph Le Verrier, meanwhile, completed the same calculations the following year and published his work. When Airy saw the paper, he realized the results were similar to those submitted by Adams and he ordered a search for the new planet.

But out-of-date star charts and other problems combined for a "comedy of error," and misfortune that "prevented the English astronomers from following up on Adams' predictions," according to the "International Encyclopedia of Astronomy."

Both Adams and Le Verrier had discovered a new planet by applying the laws of motion to the movement of Uranus. It was a remarkable intellectual achievement.
Family of Leland companion will file lawsuit

HOUSTON (UPI) — The family of Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Tex., has hired a prominent New York attorney to prepare a lawsuit in the wake of a new newspaper report Tuesday.

Jacob Fuchsbach, a former New York State Court of Appeals judge, told The Houston Post he was hired by George and Irene Leland, the mother and father of New York philanthropist Ivan Leland, to sue whoever is determined to be at fault for the deaths of Tillem and his companion.

"We're just at the beginning of our investigation, and very often you start out with little and you find insurance in all kinds of places, and you find financially responsible people who have some control of the situation," Fuchsbach said from his New York office. "So this is all part of the ongoing investigation."

Fuchsbach said he was not retained by Leland's family, but he said he expected that they and the survivors of other passengers eventually would become part of the Leland's wife, Alison, said Monday night that she had not heard about the pending suit.

"I don't know anything about it, and I'm not a party in the suit," she said. A woman answering the phone at the home of Leland's mother, Alice Rains, said Rains also was unaware of the pending suit.

Word of a lawsuit came as officials arranged the return of the bodies of Leland, Tillem and seven other Americans. House Speaker Thomas S. Foley is scheduled to lead a tribute to Leland Wednesday when the bodies are returned to Washington.

Foley, D-Wash., will head a congressional delegation when a military plane bearing the nine flag-draped coffins lands Wednesday at Andrews Air Force Base.

Leland, Tillem and others were killed Aug. 7 when their chartered twin-engine bush plane, buffeted by a storm, crashed into the side of a mountain in remote southwestern Ethiopia.

About the plane were Leland, Tillem, members of Leland's staff, other congressional and government officials and guests and an Ethiopian crew.

The State Department will hold a memorial service at the Wednesday morning at the Lincoln Memorial for the State Department and U.S. Agency for International Development workers killed in the crash.

Leland's body is expected to reach Houston late Wednesday.

Report says television portraying unreal world without racial conflict

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prime-time television programs with minority characters portray an artificial world of racial harmony where whites and blacks almost always get along and no one is poor, a report said Tuesday.

The report, sponsored by the National Organization for Women, also concluded that the networks had a troubled last spring of the 30 networks showed fewer minority characters in recurring roles.

It found that improvements have been made in the number of minority characters since the Kerner Commission concluded two decades ago that television was "almost totally white in appearance and attitudes."

But the report said Hispanics, Asian and American Indians are rarely seen in prime time and the issues of racial conflict are evident. At the same time, it said, whites remain in charge behind and in front of the cameras — constituting 93 percent of the producers of programs with minority characters and nearly all of the bosses depicted on such shows.

"For the most part, TV's world, especially in its prime time, is one of white bosses and willing-helper minorities who are treated well," the study said.

"What viewers glean from all of these programs ... is a world with little or no racial friction," it said. "Where it does exist ... racism is rarely called by its name, but is reduced to a personal quirk that needs correction."

"As a result, TV's world of harmony does not present viewers with a picture of an ideal society where racism has been fought and overcome. Instead, it portrays an artificial universe where racial differences and realities are downplayed."

Of the 78 minority characters in prime time, 65 were black, nine Hispanic, three Asian and one American Indian, the report said.

NEW YORK — It won't be long until they start yelling "getcha sosiskis!!" when Nathan's Famous opens its first hot dog stand in Moscow's Red Square.

Nathan's, which has been peeling its famous red hot since old man Nathan opened his stand in Coney Island in 1916, announced Tuesday it has signed a deal with Russian officials to start serving the frankfurters.

"Nathan's hot dogs have been hailed as a most succulent slice of America democracy ... and we are confident that Muscovite shoppers and tourists will feel that same sensation," said Chairman of the Board Stuart Benson at a press conference complete with tasties in Russian vodka and lots of hotdogs.

Outside one of the chain's restaurants in Manhattan's theater district sat a bright green and yellow hotdog cart with "Nathan's" — Russian for Nathan's — printed on it in big letters.

Benson said Nathan's is negotiating with GUM's, the Soviet department store in Red Square.

"We anticipate that we will be opening there in mid-November," he said.

He said the hotdogs would be manufactured in the United States and the rolls baked in Russia.

On a recent trip to Moscow, "we brought over our hot dogs and gave them away," he said. "They loved it."

The deal was arranged by Shelley Zeiger, chairman and president of Zeiger Enterprises Inc., of Trenton, N.J., an entrepreneur who specializes in arranging American business ventures in the Soviet Union.

He said the Soviet side of the arrangement is with Moscow's Lenin District Food Trust, which oversees more than 300 eateries and cafeterias.

"We hope to be selling Nathan's hot dogs at the USA '89 Exhibit in Moscow," Oct 17-25.
Columbia studies request for drug lord’s extradition to U.S.

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — A top Colombian government panel studied a formal U.S. request Tuesday for the extradition of a senior member of the Medellin drug cartel to stand trial in the United States on money-laundering charges.

In the first major arrest in Colombia’s widest dragnet of narco-traffickers, Eduardo Martinez Romero, who reportedly evaded arrest in March on charges of laundering Medellin cartel cocaine profits, was arrested Saturday at his plush ranch near Tol, 356 miles north of Bogota.

A Colombian Justice Ministry spokesman said if the National Council of Dangerous Drugs, a five-member panel of Cabinet ministers, approves the extradition of Martinez, it would only need President Virgilio Barco’s signature and he could be on his way to a U.S. jail by day’s end.

In Washington, the State Department said it was discussing Martinez’ extradition with Colombian officials.

“We are consulting with the government of Colombia about the best way to bring him back,” said Department spokesman Richard Boucher.

Colombia extradited 14 nationals to stand trial in the United States from 1980 to 1987 when the Colombian Supreme Court declared an extradition treaty between the two countries invalid because of a wrong signature.

Carlos Lehder was extradited to the United States in February 1987, two months before the court overturned the treaty. He is tried on cocaine smuggling charges in Miami after he was arrested last Friday.

A Colombian Defense Ministry source said a U.S. Air Force C-100 aircraft has been parked in Bogota military airport since Saturday ready to transport persons extradited to the United States.

Martinez, 31, was taken to a maximum-security cell at police headquarters in Bogota, is one of at least 12,006 suspects arrested since emergency measures were imposed to combat drugs following a string of assassinations of political candidates.

Latin America accepts U.S. money, not troops

Latin American leaders of nations where cocaine lords ply their lucrative trade with virtual immunity welcome President George Bush’s $7.5 billion package to battle the drug flow into the United States.

Bush prepares a speech Tuesday to unveil the $7.5 billion to $300 million package to battle the illegal drug lords, a five-member panel of cabinet ministers, approves only need President Virgilio Barco’s signature and he could be on his way to a U.S. jail by day’s end.

In Washington, the State Department said it was discussing Martinez’ extradition with Colombian officials.

“We are consulting with the government of Colombia about the best way to bring him back,” said Department spokesman Richard Boucher.

Kohl suggests meeting over East Germany's defectors

BONN, West Germany (UPI) - Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Tuesday he is willing to meet with East Germany's hardline leader Erich Honecker to discuss the fate of hundreds of East Germans held up in Bonn's diplomatic missions and thousands more flooding to the West.

"We have all been deeply moved by the reports and pictures from Budapest and East Germany showing us how men, women and children, our fellow Germans, seek a way to freedom," Kohl said at a news conference.

"I personally prepared for an immediate meeting with Secretary General Honecker if that can lead to widening and lasting improvements for the people," he said.

Kohl urged the hardline communist East German government to join the reformist movement sweeping through Eastern Europe.

He also reiterated his rejection of East German demands that Bonn fully recognize East Germany as a separate nation and pointed out the reunification of Germany was a goal spelled out by the West German Constitution. But Kohl said the Bonn government would continue to seek dialogue with East Germany.

"We do not wish confrontation," Kohl said.

Kohl urged the hardline communist East German government to join the reformist movement sweeping through Eastern Europe.

The fragile relations between the two Germanies have deteriorated in past weeks as more than 300 East Germans have held up in West German diplomatic missions in Eastern Europe with hopes of obtaining exit visas to emigrate to the West. Thousands of others have fled to the West in recent weeks, many escaping through Hungary, which started pulling down its border installations in May as part of a wide-ranging liberalization program.

More than 600 people, taking advantage of a "Pan-European picnic" organized in Hungary by an Austrian group, fled last weekend, walking across the border, after a gate had been opened to let in the Austrians.

"Accounts from people who arrived in the West in the past few days show us it is mainly the rigidity of the system there and the lack of any hope for change that causes people to turn their backs on the GDR," or East Germany, Kohl said.

"The GDR leadership should not be astonished that this mood has increased to such an extent and continues to increase as all around in Eastern Europe wide-ranging changes towards democratization, openness and reforms are being carried out, giving people more freedom," he said.

West Germany closed its embassy in the Hungarian capital of Budapest this month and its permanent mission in East Berlin to stop further East Germans from joining those already held up.

Bad checks' policy new

The Jackson County State's Attorney's Office has adopted a program to manage and prosecute bad checks in Jackson County.

Local merchants will be called upon to help implement this program, Grace said.

Under this new policy, merchants will be required to:

- give two forms of identification that could make prosecution easier if the check is bad;
- train their employees to match the person with the face on the picture ID;
- wait seven days after the bad check has returned from the bank and send it to the bank again, giving the person a sufficient amount of time to put money in the account;
- contact the person who wrote the bad check at least once before alerting the state's attorney's office;
- sign an agreement stating they wish to proceed with the prosecution;
- report the bad check to the state's attorney's office within six months after the bad check was written.

Merchants must personally turn over bad checks to the state's attorney's office, Grace said.

French aid risks life of hostage

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) —

Moslem leaders linked to Iran and Syria warned Tuesday they would retaliate against France if a French armada steamed into Lebanon to back U.S.-led peace forces as the Islamic coast attempts to back Christian forces. One leader singled out the young French Foreign Minister for retaliatory attacks.

The Islamic leaders as well as Moslem and Christian forces backed by Syrian gunfire battled with rockets and mortars in Beirut and nearby hills, killing at least 200 people, wounding 60 others, most of them civilians, police said.

Hundreds of civilians ran for safety in basements as the foes battled along the Green Line splitting the capital into Moslem and Christian halves.

Earlier Tuesday, radar-equipped Syrian field artillery positioned in west Beirut pounded three Christian ports as several cargo ships attempted to dock, backing the leaders of the Christian enclave, security sources said. The vessels defied French warnings of military action.

The Syrian troops have kept the Christian coastline under sustained siege since April, when they imposed a blockade around the region five months ago.

Revising the casualty toll from the latest cycle of violence which broke out last March, police said at least 700 people have been killed and 3,300 wounded. More than half a million civilians have sought refuge in safer areas.

Tension in the war-shattered nation has increased.

Moslems

warn attack on France

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) —

An Iranian newspaper said Tuesday that French military intervention in Lebanon could trigger a conflict between Syrian-led Moslem forces and the Christian army in Lebanon would lead to the killing of a Western hostage.

The Tehran Times said France should not have been allowed to act as it would not only escalate military and political tension in Lebanon, France has said the vessels were sent to the region to help French nationals endangered by political tension in Lebanon.

"What can happen if anything does go wrong is a result of mischaged French moves is most unpredictable," Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted the Tehran Times as saying in an editorial.

The Tehran Times said any support for Christian leader Michel Aoun by the West would "make it more difficult for Iran or Syria to convince the fighting to stop."

France has been harshly criticized by Syria for backing Moslem forces fighting the Christians.

Any provocation by the West "would lead to the recurrence of terrible events such as the killing of American hostage (Marine Lt.) Col. William Higgins, which the West would have to hold itself responsible."

Hundreds of civilians ran for safety in basements as the foes battled along the Green Line splitting the capital into Moslem and Christian halves.

Earlier Tuesday, radar-equipped Syrian field artillery positioned in west Beirut pounded three Christian ports as several cargo ships attempted to dock, backing the leaders of the Christian enclave, security sources said. The vessels defied French warnings of military action.

The Syrian troops have kept the Christian coastline under sustained siege since April, when they imposed a blockade around the region five months ago.

Revising the casualty toll from the latest cycle of violence which broke out last March, police said at least 700 people have been killed and 3,300 wounded. More than half a million civilians have sought refuge in safer areas.

Tension in the war-shattered nation has increased.

warn attack on France

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) —

An Iranian newspaper said Tuesday that French military intervention in Lebanon could trigger a conflict between Syrian-led Moslem forces and the Christian army in Lebanon would lead to the killing of a Western hostage.

The Tehran Times said France should not have been allowed to act as it would not only escalate military and political tension in Lebanon, France has said the vessels were sent to the region to help French nationals endangered by political tension in Lebanon.

"What can happen if anything does go wrong is a result of mischaged French moves is most unpredictable," Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted the Tehran Times as saying in an editorial.

The Tehran Times said any support for Christian leader Michel Aoun by the West would "make it more difficult for Iran or Syria to convince the fighting to stop."

France has been harshly criticized by Syria for backing Moslem forces fighting the Christians.

Any provocation by the West "would lead to the recurrence of terrible events such as the killing of American hostage (Marine Lt.) Col. William Higgins, which the West would have to hold itself responsible."

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) —

Moslem leaders linked to Iran and Syria warned Tuesday they would retaliate against France if a French armada steamed into Lebanon to back U.S.-led peace forces as the Islamic coast attempts to back Christian forces. One leader singled out the young French Foreign Minister for retaliatory attacks.

The Islamic leaders as well as Moslem and Christian forces backed by Syrian gunfire battled with rockets and mortars in Beirut and nearby hills, killing at least 200 people, wounding 60 others, most of them civilians, police said.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — One day after a jury was seated for next week’s trial of PTL founder Jim Bakker, the people, the government claims were victims of his allegedly fraudulent money-raising schemes rose Tuesday to his defense.

A jury was chosen Monday for the criminal trial of Bakker, 49, accused of wire fraud, mail fraud and conspiracy stemming from the sale of so-called “lifetime partnerships” at PTL. Bakker insisted he is innocent and his partners agree.

“Jim says he dreads all the ugly things they’re going to say about him,” PTL partner Helen Gordon said. “I received the full benefit of my PTL partnerships. Nobody cheated me.”

Rep. Leland’s remains flown to United States

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (UPI) — The remains of Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, and eight other Americans were flown from Addis Ababa Tuesday on their way to the United States.

An Air Force C-141 aircraft carrying the nine caskets of the U.S. congressional delegation was to make a stop in West Germany before its scheduled arrival at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., at 2:15 p.m. Wednesday, authorities said.

A private boral for Leland was scheduled for Thursday in Houston. Details of funeral arrangements were not available.

Leland, 44, the chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger, eight other Americans and seven Ethiopians died Aug. 7 when their plane — on route to a Sudanese refugee camp in Fugido — crashed during foul weather into the mountains 34 miles east of the town of Gembala in the highlands of western Ethiopia.

The search for the light twin-engine plane stretched over six days and was the largest search operation ever carried out by U.S. troops in an African country.

The remaining members of the American and refugee crew, which numbered more than 300 during the operation, were to leave Ethiopia by Tuesday night, said Bob Hosped, charge d’affairs of the U.S. Embassy in Addis Ababa.

Gordon was one of an estimated 160,000 people who gave Bakker at least $1,000,000 in exchange for a promise of free lodging three nights a year for life at PTL’s Heritage USA Christian retreat.

The government claims those who bought the partnerships were victims of a scam and never received the benefits they promised because the money they gave was used for other purposes.

But Gordon, whose name was included Monday on a long list of partners suspected to testify for Bakker, said she believes he is innocent.

“If I hadn’t got what I promised, I would be testifying for the prosecution,” she said. “But I was never turned down. I don’t believe Jim Bakker ever sat down and said, ‘Hey, I’m going to do this against the partners. I don’t believe he’s going to no prison. Jim and Tammy are just plain people, like we grew up with. They’re not bigoted, they don’t pretend. That’s just the way they are.”

Opening arguments in Bakker’s trial will not be heard until next week, although six women and four men were chosen for his jury Monday.

The television evangelist arrived at U.S. District Court tightly clutching the hand of his daughter, Tammy Sue, 19. His wife, Tammy Faye, stayed behind.

Tammie is just plain down-to-earth people like we grew up with. They’re not bigoted, they don’t pretend. That’s just the way they are.”

The judge warned jurors to read nothing about the case and not even to discuss it with their spouses.

Sea World killer whale dies after fight with other whale

Autopsy reveals nasal passage bleeding; horrified spectators witness altercation

SAN DIEGO (UPI) - Baby Shamu, the killer whale who thrilled crowds by giving birth during a performance at Sea World last year, died to death after fracturing her jaw during an altercation with another female killer whale, an autopsy revealed Tuesday.

The results of the autopsy on the 15-year-old, 6,000-pound cetacean revealed an "upper jaw fracture" that "caused fatal hemorrhaging into the nasal passages," a Sea World statement said.

The death, witnessed by horrified spectators at the start of a performance Monday, was caused by "an altercation which occurred between Kandu and another female killer whale, Corky," said the statement.

The marine park was closed after the incident Monday but reopened Tuesday and drew a regular crowd.

The tragedy occurred as the Sea World chain announced plans to sell the chain of six marine parks.

Hoover-Busch Co. has been among the bidders for the popular attractions, which are estimated to be worth about $1.5 billion. Industry analysts around the nation were stunned by the tragic news.

"The death of Baby Shamu, the 20-year-old, 8,000-pound whale, has left a void in the Sea World killer whale herd," said Scott Trimmingham of the Sea Shepards Conservation Society.

"These are very close, social animals. I've never heard of such an event before," Trimmingham said.

Baby Shamu was born just three days before the death of its father, Orky, the 25-year-old patriarch of the Sea World killer whale herd.

While Orky had a history of bad temper and injured several trainers over a 25-year period, Corky was usually docile although sometimes "uncommonly aggressive," Trimmingham said.

Andre the Giant arrested for assault on reporter

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (UPI) - The boss of a television cameraman attacked by professional wrestler Andre the Giant said Tuesday the wrestler appeared to be genuinely angry and not staging an act.

The wrestler, whose real name is Andrea Roussimouf, 43, was arrested and charged with assault and criminal mischief after the Monday night incident at the Five Seasons Center where World Wrestling Federation Championship Wrestling match had taken place.

Roussimouf had just finished a match with the Ultimate Warrior, who reportedly pinned the Giant in less than a minute, then he grabbed cameraman Ben Hildebrandt of KCRG-TV. Roussimouf put Hildebrandt in a neck hold and tried to get the camera.

Roussimouf later told police he was angry because he believed Hildebrandt was not authorized to film the match.

The wrestler managed to pull the cable out of the camera. Damage to the equipment was estimated at $300. "He obviously didn't like the camera being there," said Glen Gardner of Iowa City radio station KRN.

"I thought at first Andre was putting on an act, but then I think the guy was more serious," said KCRG news director Dean Bunting. "I'm not sure whether this was malicious or part of the act, but I'm inclined to think it was more malicious.

Hildebrandt was taping a special show that airs on KCRG featuring area high school sports, according to Bunting. Gardner said Roussimouf did not apologize and he thought Hildebrandt handled the situation well.

"He didn't give up his camera to the guy. I have to hand it to him," Gardner said.

Bunting said Hildebrandt reported to work Tuesday but was "sore and bruised" and wearing a neck brace.

Bunting said his cameraman was allowed to shoot everything but the match itself. He was filming crowd reaction when he spotted Andre lunging toward him.

"The camera wasn't rolling at the time but Ben didn't want to push the button because it was nearAndre's mouth and he was afraid Andre might bite him," Bunting said.

Roussimouf said a large security officer intervened in the impromptu wrestling match and at one point used a foot on the wrestler's chest to push the two apart.

David Johnson of the Cedar Rapids police said Roussimouf, who reportedly weighs more than 500 pounds and measures more than 7-foot tall, had trouble fitting in the police patrol car.

Poulton said as soon as the NCAA investigation is over in a month or six weeks, Valvano's resignation as athletic director will be accepted.

Valvano declined to comment Tuesday on reports of his impending departure as athletic director.

A spokesman in Valvano's office said he will have no comment on any of the developments, including Poulton's decision to quit or stay that he will step down as athletic director.

"There are no plans for any release or statement," said Mark Bockelman, sports information director at N.C. State. "I've talked to him (Valvano) twice today and he isn't planning to make any statements.

Poulton submitted his resignation, to University of North Carolina system President C.D. "Dick" Spangler Monday, citing only personal reasons.

Spangler is scheduled to release a report Friday on allegations of corruption and academic abuses in the N.C. State basketball program.

In the impromptu news conference Tuesday, the chancellor struck out the criticism of him and the university.

Poulton blamed the News & Observer of Raleigh for part of the controversy surrounding N.C. State, although he did not mention the newspaper.

"Part of the problem is a personal attack directed at me," Poulton told a handful of reporters. "I feel by taking myself out of the picture I might lessen the attack on the university.

"There are some very clear elements that suggest the local newspaper would prefer that I wasn't there," Poulton said.

A spokesman for Poulton's office, Bob McClure, said he was referring to the Raleigh newspaper.

"I'm concerned that there are a lot of people in North Carolina who are beginning to wonder, seriously wonder, if indeed, there is not a scandal at the university," he said.

Gov. Jim Martin said Tuesday he supports Poulton, whom he called a friend. Martin said Poulton deserves credit for N.C. State's achievements.

Cardinals' Pagnozzi missing in St. Louis catching picture

By DAN ONELLE
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

The St. Louis Cardinals' catching situation has been the focus of attention lately. The team's policy has been to avoid discussion of the situation, at least in public, and Todd Zeile is pictured arising.

Pagnozzi has been missing from the picture altogether.

"Basically, it's pretty easy to figure out," Pagnozzi said.

"Zeile's going to catch next year. Pena is going to be somewhere else. I'm going to be the backup again, unless they go out and get another catcher or trade somebody. It's really up to them. Pretty simple."

Simply said, perhaps, but surely enough to swallow for the Cardinals' designated understudy. Zeile, 24, who was considered the Cardinals' prize prospect in 1987, was the recipient of the Cardinals' top farm club. He was one of 313,114 home runs in 20 double plays, drove home 71 runs before joining the Cardinals in 1992.

By comparison, Zeile was promoted from Louisville after batting .308 with 19 home runs and 82 RBIs. The stats aren't all that different.

But the situation is entirely different. When Pagnozzi was "in the picture," it was."In April 1987, the Cardinals acquired Pena, an established, everyday catcher, from the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Zeile, who is behind the plate and nothing left to prove elsewhere, Pagnozzi became a utility player.

Mariners sold for more than $76 million

SEATTLE (UPI) - Seattle Mariners owner George Argyros Tuesday named "Pag" as the chairman of the team to a group led by an Indiana businessman, ending an off-season rivalry with the American League franchise and its fans.

Arty Pag, a California real estate developer who purchased the St. Louis Cardinals for a little more than $31 million, sold the Mariners for a reported $76 million to a group led by Jeff Smulyan, who promised renewal and not to move the team from Seattle.

The two sides did not release the exact purchase price.

Smulyan, an Indianapolis native and owner of 10 radio stations, was one of the leaders of the successful campaign to keep the Cardinals from moving to Phoenix.

"We have had a rocky relationship with the team and its fans. He has been accused by ball fans of being aloof and tight-fisted by not spending the money needed to make the team a winner," Smulyan said.

The Mariners have never ended a season above .500 in their 12-year history.

However, Argyros expressed his pride in the team in his remarks at a news conference in Seattle.

"We knew that we would not own this team forever, and the time for change has arrived sooner than I ever expected," Argyros said. "My foremost goal once we acquired this team was to make baseball a success in Seattle. I'm proud of what this team has accomplished in the past season with the Mariners is coming to an end."

"I will always be a Mariners fan and a Seattle booster. I love this game and I love this team. Parting is not easy."

Argyros purchased 90 percent of Seattle's franchise for $10.2 million, then bought the remaining 10 percent a year later for $2.9 million. While he made a gross profit of almost $63 million, it is believed that Argyros put out an amount equal to his original purchase price into the team.

The most recent rule of a major league baseball line is the Baltimore Orioles, who were sold to a business group in June for about $13 million. The Mariners deal was also the record sale of a Seattle sports franchise in the past.

"Everybody, as far as that is concerned, has been healthy, and we're going to be the guy," Pagnozzi said. "None of us has actually played that much."

"If Tim Jones has what, 60 (actually 59) at-bats, and 30 of those in the first seven or eight games. Denny Walling has about 45 at-bats."

"In the past, the extra men have always had a lot of at-bats because one or two of our positions has been hurt."

On the other hand, Pagnozzi can't say he's been looking forward to the change of scenery at the beginning of the season and was unavailable for two weeks.

Pagnozzi has hit only 48 at-bats this season. He has driven in the game-winning run three times, but is hitting just .154.

"He missed those two weeks because of the arm, and he never really got it going," Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog said. "It's tough on him."

Now comes a new kid on the block. Zeile, 24, and the Cardinals are set to hand him the keys to their catching castle. Infielders, seemingly, have been stamped onto injury.

Pagnozzi says differently. "I don't have a big ego, so it doesn't bother me as far as that is concerned," he said. "If the world is going to come to an end focus of reports it would be purchased and moved to a city that does not have a major league franchise."

"Seattle, the Mariners are your team. They will remain Seattle's and I'm proud of that," he said. "It will be the Seattle Mariners, not the Denver Mariners, not the Tampa Bay Mariners, not the Indianapolis Mariners, but Seattle's."

"We realize there is a lot of suspicion (among Seattle residents). We want to show you that we're going to spend the baseball in town. We invested that money after a tremendous amount of research, and what we found was that the Pacific Northwest can support major league baseball."

Smulyan said he is moving his principle residence to Seattle, and that he and the minority owners that takes away from the fan's desire to maintain and enhancing the Seattle franchise."

"The Mariners are young, exciting and ready to make their mark," he said.

Jerome Walton glad hitting streak halted

CHICAGO (UPI) - Chicago Cub's manager Jerome Walton says, he can get back to the task at hand and his hitting streak was stopped at 30 games Monday night.

"Now I can concentrate on baseball, going out there every day, relaxing and just going out and hitting a baseball," Walton said.

He said it was about to come to an end and I'm happy it's over."

Walton, batting .305 entering Tuesday's game, said despite the streak he hadn't been hitting as well of late.

"The last couple games, I haven't had good at-bats," he said. "A couple of weeks ago I felt I was in a groove."

He said the streak was aided along the way by a few "lucky" hits, like the first-inning infield fly ball Sunday against Houston that pushed it to a Cub modern-day record 30 games.

During the streak, Walton was 46 for 136 for a .338 batting average and 20 RBIs. The 30 games fell short of the rookie record, set in 1987 by Benito Santiago.

everyone's looking up at us,"

The look up, however, is shrinking fast. The Cubs, who lost their fifth straight, saw their lead in the National League East reduced to a game over the New York Mets, who hosted the San Francisco Giants Tuesday night.

Browning's string of victories is the longest by a Reds pitcher since 1986. No Reds pitcher has had five straight complete games since Tom Seaver put together six in a row in 1977.

"The way the wind was blowing today had a tendency to effect the way you're pitching," Browning said of the 17-mph gate blowing toward right field. "I just figured if I kept the ball down and threw strikes, I've had a good chance of winning. The guys also gave me some runs early, put a little distance between us and them."

The Reds took a 3-0 lead in the second with three unearned runs off Joe Kraemer, 0-1, making his major league debut after being called up from Triple-A Iowa on Monday.

With two outs, Luis Quinones and Joe Oliver singled, with Oliver moving to second on the throw-in. Allen Scotti Madison walked, Kraemer got Browning to ground to third, but Varty Law boot ed the ball for his first of two errors, allowing Quinones to score. Collins followed with a two-run single. The Cubs never got back in it.

"Ordinarily, Lance Vance would make that play," Cubs manager Don Zimmer said. "But when you're going bad, nothing works."

The Reds made it 5-0 in the third on two-out singles by Todd Renninger and Quinones and a two-run double by Oliver. Another unearned run in the fourth put Cincinnati ahead 6-0. With Collins on first and two outs, Eric Davis singled to left.

"Rypien to start at QB for Redskins"

CARLISLE, Pa. (UPI) - Washington Redskins coach Joe Gibbs and Tuesday Mark Rypien will be the team's starting quarterback for the regular season opener against New York Giants on Sept. 11 unless injured Doug Williams makes a miraculous recovery.

Gibbs' statement came one day after he started untested Stan Humphries, a second-year quarterback out of Northeast Louisiana in a 24-13 road loss to the Minnesota Vikings. Humphries, who had been unspectacular in camp, completed 4 of 12 passes for 52 yards and one interception against the Vikings.

"Right now, our starter's going to be Mark Rypien unless something changes with Doug."

Rypien was voted to nine Pro Bowl teams, tying a record which is also held by two of his former teammates.

In fact, it is likely that Webster will be the team's starting center as Kansas City tries to find an anchor for one of the team's sore spots - offensive line.

Webster's competitiveness is exactly what the Chiefs desire. They not only want good players, they ache for players who are willing to fight for a spot. Webster said: "If you want to improve and give something to somebody, including yourself." Webster said. "I used to be able to do it, and I guess that as you get older that is one of the challenges that is added every year, to see if you can rise to that level."

"I see a lot of players here who can do that. There's a tremendous amount of good offensive linemen on this football team and when they get that familiarity with the new system, it's going to be an exceptional group. It's going to be tough for me to make this football team."

Webster, certainly no egoist, said that with all sincerity, but the fact is that, even at 37 years of age, he's the best offensive lineman in Kansas City. Schottenheimer has been experimenting during training camp by moving players around and even out of their normal positions.

Except Webster, He's in there with the first group and always over the ball.

Giants Rypien to start at QB for Redskins.

"Rypien has played erratically during Washington's three preseason games and did not distinguish himself against Minnesota, completing just 3 of 14 passes for 46 yards with no touchdowns and no interceptions while playing part of the third quarter and all of the fourth quarter."

Gibbs said last week that he had not ruled out the possibility of moving Humphries against the Giants, but apparently has changed his mind after seeing Humphries in his first professional start. Humphries played the first period and part of the second before giving way to Bill Kenny.

Gibbs said he does not regret starting Humphries against the Vikings.

FESTIVAL FORTUNES GAME

1. NO PURCHASE NECESSARY. Pick up a Festival Fortunes Instant Win Game Piece from a participating college store retailer in the United States. During the Festival Game Period posted in advance at various locations in your campus area. Limit one game piece per person per day. However, the participating college store may distribute more game pieces at its option as supplies permit. You may also participate by sending a written request for a Festival Game Piece and a self-addressed envelope to the participating college store retailer in your area. A single Game Piece will be sent in response to every request received by the college store retailer during the Festival Game Period, so long as there are undistributed Game Pieces on date of receipt. The participating store is the only outlet distributing Game Pieces for the Festival Instant Win Game being conducted by that college store.

J. HOW TO PLAY. Scratch off the protective coating from the area indicated on each Festival Game Piece to determine whether you are a winner. If the word "Scooter" appears on your Game Piece, you win a motorized scooter. If another of the prizes listed below is named on your Game Piece, you win the prize named. To claim your prize return your winning Festival Game Piece to the college store where you picked it up. Prizes will not be awarded unless a winning Game Piece is presented. After recording your name, address and other information for the major prize winner, the college stores will award your prize immediately. See your store for further rules and regulations.

Basketball's Harvey leaves program

By Daniel Wallenstein Staff Writer

Freshman basketball star Tony Harvey has decided to leave SIU-C for an undetermined reason, according to athletic information director Sid Hart.

"He lead the team," Hart said. "The only explanation I have is that Tony wanted to play closer to home and that she shared those thoughts and in that she would enjoy being able to see him play more often in his future.

Harvey, who is originally from Galesburg, Ill., averaged 6.9 points and 3.2 rebounds per game as a freshman. Harvey also was named a first team selection by the Missouri Valley Conference. Over the summer Harvey participated in the national Olympic Festival and was the offered the position of a North Championship team member.

Head Basketball Coach Rich Herrin said everything was done in an attempt to keep Harvey at the University.

"Tony was an exciting player and we would have lost trouble," he said. "Naturally I like to think our other players will respond to this challenge and we'll be able to fill his spot in the lineup," Herrin said. "We did everything possible to interest Tony in returning, but obviously it wasn't enough."

Fred Huff, sports information director, said Mrs. Harvey requested that the University grant Harvey an official release from the University, which would enable Harvey to receive financial aid from another university.

Hart denied the report.

"We felt we had an agreement with Tony and by him leaving our program at such a late date, we...

Women's coach confident with runners' depth, talent

By Greg Scott Staff Writer

SIU-C women's cross country coach Don DeNoon is one of few people in his profession that can boast of having enough depth to overcome the loss of his number one runner from a year ago.

The Salukis had hoped for a strong performance by senior Lisa Judiscak on the team this year. Judiscak, listed fourth on the SIU-C all-time women's cross country list is engaged to be married and will not take part in the 1989 cross country season.

"It is certainly a loss for us but we have an outstanding group this year that will allow us to take care of the job done," DeNoon said. "We just need to work with what we got and not lose. Lisa has decided to go on with her life and we are just going to have to do the same."

The loss of a runner like Judiscak is critical to the depth of the most teams but DeNoon's Salukis are a mixture of returning runners and new recruits that can overcome the loss of Judiscak.

Cathy Brown, a senior listed fifth on the SIU-C women's all-time cross country list, will probably be DeNoon's top returning runner. Four of DeNoon's runners, including Brown, are now on campus and sophomores Tracy Guerin and Amanda Padgett have all run the 5,000 meters in 19 minutes in their careers.

"They really depend on these four because we know they can get the job done," DeNoon said. "They give us a good depth of returning people to go along with our recruits."

DeNoon believes a few of his recruits could make an instant impact on the team. Dawn Barefoot of Hoffman Estates, Laura Battie of Mahomet and Leann Conaway of Overland Park, Kansas appear to be runners that could help out instantly, according to DeNoon.

"We hope that all of our women can come in and have an impact," DeNoon said. "We would like to see them have success by their sophomore, junior or senior year. It is hard to tell right now because we have runners in different stages of their training."

DeNoon believes Illinois State is the best team from a year ago result-wise with the rest of the teams in the conference going through dramatic changes on their teams. "We have as much returning depth as anyone in the conference with the exception of Illinois State," DeNoon said. "We need the support of our freshman class to offset Illinois State. I think by the first part of October we will see where everyone is coming from."

The Salukis begin their season at 10 A.M. Sept. 2 in Charleston against regular meets with Murray State and Eastern Illinois.
