SIU Plays Host To 24 Educators

SIU has again selected by the United States Office of Education as one of the 24 universities and colleges to participate in the 1960 International Teachers' Conference Program. The program, a part of the United States Office of Education, Department of Education, is designed to promote the exchange of ideas and information among educators, students, and other professionals interested in educational processes, including instruction.

One of the main activities of the conference is the visitation of the Southern Illinois University campus, where the visiting group is to be given a general tour of the campus, including research facilities, classrooms, and dormitories. This tour will allow the group to see the various educational programs offered by the university and to meet with members of the faculty.

Another activity of the conference is a workshop on outdoor education, which will be conducted by Dr. Robert B. Sharp, the new director of the Southern Illinois University Natural History Museum. This workshop will provide the educators with an opportunity to learn about the latest developments in outdoor education and to share their ideas and experiences with other educators.

In addition to these activities, the visitors will have the opportunity to attend a number of lectures and sessions on various topics related to education. These sessions will be held in the University Union and the Memorial Auditorium.

The conference will conclude with a dinner at the University Union, where the educators will have the opportunity to meet with each other and to discuss the various activities of the conference.

The SIU Plays Host To 24 Educators is an event organized by the Southern Illinois University to attract educators from around the world to explore and learn about the university's educational programs and facilities. The event provides an opportunity for educators to network, share ideas, and gain insights into best practices in education.

Area Children Throng
To Outdoor Classroom

By ROBERT ABDUR

The lake front counselor's whistle sweeps around Little Grassy Lake, signaling the end of the first swimming session for the summer.

Fifteen youngsters are in the pool, splashed from the water, and begging in line for the counselor, and begged for free minutes in the main water. This was the last hour for the children of their two-week stay at the camp.

The camp was the second week of the eleventh annual Little Grassy Lake Summer Camp for boys and girls from eight to fourteen years of age.
The camp is sponsored by the Little Grassy Lake Campers' Association, the local high school.

Area high school junior and senior students serve as junior counselors.
In addition to help in projects and activities, the campgrounds serve as a summer recreation spot.

Approximately 1,500 children are expected to participate in the summer camp during the eight-week session.

BAGPIPES

During the two-week camping session, the children have enjoyed tours over open camp fires, canoeing trips, and the daily swimming sessions.

At the Little Grassy Camp, Number Two, the activities are directed by Mrs. Gerald Seabrook, a teacher at the Little Grassy Elementary School.

Seabrook's philosophy is that all campers should have a chance to participate in different activities at the camp.

Equipment and new facilities are being added to the camp. This year several new cabins are being constructed and a new "food hall" is contributing to the facilities.

The camp is located on the south end of the lake.

The camp is known as a training ground for field workers interested in rehabilitation and special education.

The camp has been conducting outdoor recreation programs for handicapped children and adults since 1958.

The camp is under the everyday supervision of the camp director, who is assisted by a number of counselors.

The camp is served by three buses and a number of private cars.
