'One Seeing Is Worth a Thousand Hearings'

By Cliff Edom
School of Journalism
University of Missouri

Among the many good things which have come my way is the privilege—for nearly a quarter of a century—of having had an active part in the Picture of the Year Competition. This contest was born as twins—on the University of Missouri campus and in the offices of the Encyclopedia Britannica—in 1943. Now jointly sponsored by MU's School of Journalism, the National Press Photographers' Assn., and World Book Encyclopedia Science Service, Inc., it is the oldest and largest of its kind. It drew more than 8,000 entries from the nation's topflight cameramen in 1964.

For 23 years, those of us who sponsor this event have reviewed the best—and the worst—in photojournalism. Trials and tribulations, tears and triumphs all have been recorded on film and bar's paraded before our juries.

During this same period we were introduced to the out-dated cigar-chewing news photographer with his ponderous 4x5 or 5x7 Speed Graphic. We have seen this fellow give way to the modern cameraman with his miniature, and even sub-miniature equipment. Color, the picture essay—and three-dimension photography in magazines and newspapers—all have come to life within easy memory.

Recall, if you will, the dramatic picture of the Hindenburg disaster, the Raising of the Flag on Iwo Jima, the Surrender of the Japanese Aboard the Battleship Missouri, and more recently, those events leading to the assassination and funeral of the late President John F. Kennedy. These events—and many, many more—are stamped indelibly in our memory because of the alertness and the skill and the dedication of camera reporters.

But all entries which earn awards in the Pictures of the Year Competition are not of such heroic or flamboyant proportions. Some are so subtle they are appreciated to the fullest only by the more perceptive heart and mind. But—subtle or obvious, a winning picture is a living picture—one which was conceived in validity; one which was born in spirit and in truth.

Look's Photo Director, Arthur Rothstein, once defined a great picture as "one which has immediacy today; historic significance tomorrow, and artistic or aesthetic significance—on the walls of a museum, perhaps—fifty years from now."

A Chinese philosopher, legend tells us, once said: "One seeing is worth a thousand hearings." To put that simple yardstick to the test, examine the cover picture and those on this and the facing page. Although we do not claim they are great, we do believe these pictures from the 22nd Pictures of the Year Competition, fragments though they are, will help historians, economists and sociologists interpret the tensions, frustrations and exuberance of our day.

Wall Plaques From Wood Crates

By Larry Lorenz

Art in the home takes many forms. It ranges from pictures clipped from magazines and calendar reproductions tacked carelessly on a wall to vast collections of original oil paintings and sculpture.

For most persons, clip-and-hang pictures are too tawdry; originals are too expensive. But there is a happy medium, both inexpensive and tasteful, a delight to the eye as well as to the pocketbook.

The solution is to be found in wall plaques that the home-owner or apartment dweller can make for himself but which appear to be much more expensive antiques.

The recipe is simple. Remove one end from an ordinary wooden fruit crate; soften wood by soaking it in water; beat surface and edges with a hammer; scrape surface on a concrete block or with coarse steel wool; rub on stain; varnish; bake or broil in oven until varnish cracks; paint a picture or design on the surface and varnish again; tack a brass holder to the top; hang on wall.

The process is called "distressing," according to Norman Slack of the SIU Department of Clothing and Textiles, but the result is quite pleasing—a low-cost wall decoration similar in appearance to much more expensive plaques so highly prized by antique collectors.

The plaques shown here were "distressed" by interior design students in Slack's class in decorative arts. They followed the above recipe, with slight variations, using only the simple materials listed.

Other would-be decorators can do the same. Most of the materials can be found around the home. Even the kitchen stove can be used for the baking or broiling—although the smoke and smell will differ somewhat from that produced by a steak or roast.
George Ill's correspondence, especially Admiralty records, has been written about the mutiny and pruned materials. More fundamental solutions to the problems of restlessness among the crews were provided by the admirals in command of fleet units on distant waters. These admirals, through the exercise of vigorous command techniques, prevented dissatisfaction from reaching mutinous proportions. Thus, when Admiral Jervis, "Old Jervy," to his salariers, of the Mediterranean Fleet, sensed restlessness in his crews, he tightened discipline and required observance of naval rituals.

More fundamental solutions to the problems of restlessness among the crews were provided by the admirals in command of fleet units on distant waters. These admirals, through the exercise of vigorous command techniques, prevented dissatisfaction from reaching mutinous proportions. Thus, when Admiral Jervis, "Old Jervy," to his salariers, of the Mediterranean Fleet, sensed restlessness in his crews, he tightened discipline and required observance of naval rituals.

Each morning he stepped briskly from his cabin in full-dress uniform and remained on deck before his crew while they ate breakfast. He did this to "The King." On one occasion Jervis jumped headlong from the poop onto the deck of the ship, shouting, "You are all my ship, and I will have you in order!"

More drastic action occurred when the sailors resisted the execution of two seamen, Jervis called immediate compliance with the sentence and then led his fleet on an attack on the French homeports of Cadiz, "to employ the minds of seamen." His assessment of the temper of the crew was affirmed by a sailor who wrote, "Duncan was the best ship's officer I ever knew in my life." James Duncan's account of naval affairs in the harsh and brutal circumstances of war leaves little doubt that much more than the will to win of the officers and seamen at Camperdown and Trafalgar was the proverbial "rum, women, and the lash." Martinis Better Buy Than Phony Exposure

Long search for some justification for printing this book proved labor lost. In 1963 the "Retirees Trap," the authors coyly imply an "expose," of sorts, of the retirement scene that might have been "Freeloading on Public Pensions for Profit and Profit." If there is a fraud crying foul, the book itself is a good starting point. Any elderly citizen with $4.50 to spend on guidance in planning his retirement would be better advised to spend the first 50 cents on a road map and the remainder on maritima.

The book, which was not the least informative is as the book and much more flimsy. At the outset, the authors seek to dazzle the reader with the discovery that people approaching or beyond 70 are sensitive to impending death. To fulfill the "promised exposure" the book is used to describe the golf courses, country clubs, community centers and other recreational facilities retirees have provided their clients. From the cruise of a country club (yacht club, tennis club et al) house committee it is inferred that the upkeep of same is never known and yet the reader will have the leisure to use what he pays for, a factor that probably irritated him during his active years in business when he paid the freight but had not time to enjoy the product. From the above and-a-half list of public relations offices, sources of information for the book, it is clear that the selection of references beyond the authors as "model" cannot bear the same objective scrutiny as do the hotels and restaurants in Guidie Michelin. In human terms, the act of buying a retirement home, the word is still "caveat emptor."

Twilight

Twilight, with her threads of spires many days, Various incredibly sense of responsibility by the Salvation Army to help the helpless under the worst possible circumstance has and will continue to leave its mark on history as an undeniable service to all mankind. However much some deplore methods used by the Salvation Army, one has to recognize its great contribution to bringing the Christian religion literally into the streets, the bars, the houses of ill-repute, to the places abhorred by higher society. Indeed, the success of these efforts was summed up in Harper's Weekly in 1880, "Energy and perseverance in any undertaking are apt to bring their reward, and there can be no questions that the labors of the Salvation Army have met with great apparent success. They seem to seek out and take into their organization persons from the very worst classes, and yet the work does not fall to pieces."

The leader of the Salvation Army is worth knowing.

Some Things Old Still Good Today
By Phillip H. Glanson
American School of Fine Arts

Being new doesn't necessarily make something good. Going back to recent and not-so-recent times, here are classical and jazz releases that are worth hearing again.

In the classics, the Philadelphia Symphony and the Boston Symphony offer major works by Roy Harris. For the jazz, there is an all-star group in a fine session, and Doc Severinsen and his orchestra at work.

CLASSICAL
HARRIS—Symphony No. 7, the Philadelphia Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy, and the Boston Symphony in 1935; Harris' torch song "Modern Music" put it: "Here is music of the bleak and barren expanses of western Kansas in which Roy Harris possesses musical scholarship of a very high order, which gives him complete freedom in expressing himself. Still more remarkably, he is scholastic in his esthetic, not academic, but individual and imaginative. That is why a Harris record is immediately distinguishable from other music. Melody, harmony, counterpoint, instrumentation, are in Harris' usage not separate entities, but different expressions of a creative whole." These two recordings cover the major portion of the productive life of Roy Harris, both works are American from Harris' "Modern Music." That is why a Harris record is immediately distinguishable from other music. Melody, harmony, counterpoint, instrumentation, are in Harris' usage not separate entities, but different expressions of a creative whole.

TORCH SONGS FOR TRUMPET—Doc Severinsen and his orchestra. To the listener, the trumpet is still the foundation instrument of improvised jazz and Doc Severinsen is "Mr. Trumpet." To emphasize the fine qualities in his trumpet playing, Severinsen decided against the usual dance band groupings of trumpets, trombones and saxophones ("Actually, solo trumpet does not come off very well in that set-up," he revealed). Instead he used only a single set-up: "I don't need to do over one tune "Coronado" on side one and "You Go to My Head" on side two. If you dig sessions and real creativity, this one's a must. These two long-sized performances—The jump riff blues tune "Coronado" and "You Go to My Head" were recorded in Los Angeles on August 10, 1954. Since more than a quarter of an hour is devoted to each tune, it will come as no surprise to you that every minute of this wonderful group is given ample opportunity to express his ab lib feelings with no holds barred and no restrictions of any kind, whatever. What the results can do is justify the appropriate description of these sides as "Best Coast Jazz." (EMARCY MG 36039)

ALEJANDRO CASONA

Sal y Pimienta Española

Casona Ha Muerto

Ha muerto Casona, Alejandro Casona, Tenfa sesenta y dos años de los cuales se había pasado en formada emigración en Cuba y en la Argentina casi la mitad.

El 17 de septiembre último murió en Madrid escritor español Alejandro Casona. Al siguiente día, unos cuantos amigos, con el ritual de acompañar sus despojos a cementerio Calle de Alcalá arriba, Plaza de la Alegria... la soledad busca del Conscripto del Ente.

¿Qué años hace que yo asisto en Madrid al frente de nuestra Nuestra, el dramaturgo del talento grupo en una parte española interna en colegio para señoritas? Casona forma ya parte del legado espiritual del muchacho de los que han fallecido en su vida, Cantenares de estudiantes de español han leído comentado el "Origen de un niñito" en la vida de Antonio Machado, de Juan Ramón Jiménez, de Pedro Salinas, de Días-Candado, de Lute de Tapial...

Ciento cuarenta y seis años hacen que se sepa para siempre en esta diáspora cruel de los días que vivimos... Ha que vivimos... Falla, los Bollvar, Ruiz Funes, Giral, Piy-Sufer...

En tiempos pasados era costumbre anunciar la muerte de los reyes con la frase de "El Rey ha muerto ¡Viva el rey!" porque las instituciones no mueron, la antorchas pasan a nuevos manos más vigorosa tal vez. En España, la República republicana, no cesa de seremuir extranjeros "¡Falla ha muerto!" "¡Ha muerto González de la Cuesta!" "¡Ha muerto Salamanca!" "¡Juan Ramón Jiménez ha muerto!" Y así cerca de treinta años ya, Pero ninguno de ellos ha sido sustituido en la España espiritualmente apagado de los días que vivimos, ¡Los vivimos realmente!—Ningún gran músico, solo gran poeta ha surgido para ocupar el puesto de Manuel de Palla o de Juan Ramón...

No hay más remedio que recordarlos por años, y Nadie viene a llenar el vacío de su dejado...

¡Casona ha muerto! ¡Viva Casona!

Our Love Affair

Our love affair... Wild pursuit of an elusive balloon. Our friends told hopeless. Neither of us stable, depended on our hopes. To the other side frame.

These friends told us We should seek steadier supports, founded on strong and solid rocky foundations; By grinding rocks and driving winds.

Neither of us survived, alive or together.

My arms reached madly for the straw; Yours, for jelly.

Strange wonder: Where we come from.

Johnson to Postpone Decision On Urban Affairs Secretary

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson will leave a new Cabinet post vacant until January. That's some two months after the Department of Housing and Urban Development comes into existence just after midnight next Monday.

During the gap, the Texas White House said Friday, the Housing and Home Finance Agency under Robert C. Weaver, a 57-year-old Negro, will start operating automatically in the leadership new department, under the same leadership, with the same personnel. Weaver, 60, will have a key role in the new department — most of the agencies that go into it are in his domain now — and he is on the list of possibilities for secretary.

White House press secretary Bill D. Moyers announced this on a day in which:
- Johnson kept silent on a price boom: by the nation’s biggest aluminum producer, Aluminum Co. of America. Moyers said the administration has been talking with representatives of the industry since January on disposing of excess aluminum in the government’s stockpiles and any sales will be made with a view to preventing a depression on the market.
- The immediate sale of 200,000 tons of zinc worth $50 million, made possible under a bill signed by Johnson.
- The President decided to start operating the Department of Housing and Home Finance after midnight next Monday. That's some new Cabinetpostvacant untill January. That's some two months after the Department of Housing and Urban Development comes into existence just after midnight next Monday.

Weary of the Vietnam War, Johnson signed into law a bill that will allow the sale or loan of 11 U.S. warships to six friendly countries.

Morrissey Asks That Nomination Be Withdrawn

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — Francis X. Morrissey of Boston, whose nomination to be a U.S. District Court judge attracted a storm in the Senate, asked President Johnson Friday to withdraw his nomination. Johnson said he would comply.

Morrissey, a long-time friend and political ally of the Kennedy family, told Johnson in a letter received Friday: "To prevent further anguish to my family a celebration of my nomination, I do not want to have my name associated with my nomination to the federal bench be withdrawn."

"I shall always be grateful for the confidence you showed in nominating me, but, notwithstanding the merits of that nomination, I do not want to be the cause of diverting your time and energies from the important programs of your great administration."

Retired Navy Corpsman To Reenlist on Veterans Day

JOLIET (AP) — Nicolet Massarelli of New York, a retired Navy corpsman, was sworn in Thursday as a chief hospital corpsman. He signed a chief surgeon's order for duty Nov. 11 at a chief hospital corpsman.

Massarelli had his gripe, too. "I needed a place to live near my thatched cottage 30 miles south of Saigon. A guerrilla fired on him from about eight yards away and then fled. Those grenades, six inches long and two inches in diameter, are normally fused to explode at 12 yards."

"I guess you couldn't paint it on a placard, it's just that they need experienced hospital personnel now; they told me, I don't mind," he said.

Like any realist with experience in the armed forces, Massarelli gave his gibe, too. "They didn't give me much time. You don't like to leave a job on such short notice. And there's the furniture to sort and ship."

Living Explosive Surgeons Remove Grenade From Viet Farmer's Back

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Two U.S. Air Force surgeons disarming six grenades from a chief hospital corpsman, showed in nominating me, but, notwithstanding the merits of that nomination, I do not want that nomination, I do not want to be the cause of diverting your time and energies from the important programs of your great administration."

"I shall always be grateful for the confidence you showed in nominating me, but, notwithstanding the merits of that nomination, I do not want to be the cause of diverting your time and energies from the important programs of your great administration."

"I shall always be grateful for the confidence you showed in nominating me, but, notwithstanding the merits of that nomination, I do not want to be the cause of diverting your time and energies from the important programs of your great administration."

Blood dripped from the long incision in his back as stretcher bearers took over, but medical men said it is only a flesh wound now.

Six-foot-long tools specially designed for the job were used to handle the scapul and pluck out the grenade, one of a ton type notoriously unstable, that lodged beneath Chin’s 12th rib.

Those instruments impressed viewers variously as like a billiard cue, a giant mountain gun or "those mechanical monsters clawing around atomic piles."

The creator was Capt. Jack Faircloth, New York, Humphreys' aide. The general had given him 48 hours to come up with something that would work.

The team was made up of Humphreys, a chemical specialist; Col. Daniel Campbell, Inlet Beach, Fla., another chemical specialist; Capt. Tony Brown, a British anesthetist attached to the U.S. mission. They volunteered after Vietnamese doctors threw up their hands at Chin’s plight.

He was hit last Sunday morning near his thatched cottage 30 miles south of Saigon. A guerrilla fired on him from about eight yards away and then fled. Those grenades, six inches long and two inches in diameter, are normally fused to explode at 12 yards.

The danger was that even delicate handling might stir the grenade to burst, showering hundreds of ferrele steel fragments that would have killed Chin and anyone else in close range.
Rusk Reaffirms Need for NATO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk, clashing with French President Charles de Gaulle, declared Friday that integration of U.S. and allied forces in Europe, is an operational necessity to avoid "complete confusion at a moment of crisis."

"We have a very substantial force in the heart of Europe — if my friends in Europe would forget me surrounded in a sea of foreigners," Rusk said. "Integration as imposed upon us by the de facto situation. Our responsibility for the effectiveness of these forces in Europe is such that we must know who is going to do what, when and where, if there is trouble."

His strong defense of the allied integration system at a news conference immediately raised a question of whether if De Gaulle succeeded in breaking down the system the United States would pull its forces out of Europe. When this question was put to Rusk he declined a direct answer, but replied: "With these troops in the heart of Europe, there is a certain de facto impulsion toward integration of strategy and command and arrangements and logistics and all sorts of things. This is something that is required, it seems to us, by the operational necessities of the situation."

De Gaulle, who announced Thursday that he would stand these troops in his chopper, was quoted specimens of the de facto situation. As France is concerned.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Embattled nudists of Tennessee argued Friday that a state law requiring them to keep their pants on is a violation of their civil rights.

The nudist position was set forth in an action before a three-judge U.S. Dist. Court asking that the law be declared unconstitutional.

"Nudism is not my cup of tea, and I suspect it is not the day marked the joining of the struggle."

Rhodesia In State Of Emergency

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — The government decreed a state of emergency Friday controlling the movement of persons throughout Rhodesia, saying it was necessary to head off a possible wave of African sabotage.

Caught by surprise, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson met with his top adviser in London as speculation spread that the white government of Rhodesia was about to take the fateful step of declaring independence for this British colony.

Prime Minister Ian Smith denied this, however, telling reporters: "When we are going to declare a state of emergency for a unilateral declaration of independence we will tell you about it."

To the north in Zambia, however, people rushed to buy up food and gasoline just in case. Zambia, hostile to the Rhodesian government, is dependent on Rhodesia.

Nudists Bare Discrimination Complaint

"I know all about General Electric. They make toasters and irons and things like that."

"Right. Things like the world's most powerful jet engines, the world's largest turbine-generator, the world's first Man-Made diamonds. Things like nuclear power plants, suitcase-size computers and a whole new family of plastics."

"Yeah, yeah. Things like that."

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Embattled nudists of Tennessee argued Friday that a state law requiring them to keep their pants on is a violation of their civil rights.

The law resulted from an unplanned piece of helicopter peeping tomism by a pilot-policeman named Gaines Morton. Morton, a member of the state legislature, was cruising over a wooded area north of Knoxville in his chopper in the summer of 1964 when he spotted specimens of the sexes frolicking about without a stitch on them. Morton introduced a bill outlawing nudist colonies and the practice of nudism. It was enacted into law last March.

Churches Plan To Help Refugees

NEW YORK (AP) — Church organizations and citizen groups across the nation geared Friday to deal with tens of thousands of Cubans who soon will pour in by the million from Castro's island.

The Cuban center in Miami reported it already had more than 10,000 applications from Cubans all over America naming more than 140,000 relatives who want to leave. Prime Minister Fidel Castro's island. Such Cubans, with family members already in exile, will receive priority.

The New York metropolitan area, where 92,000 displaced Cubans have settled in the past five years, can expect to receive almost half of the new wave of refugees.

The largest number of applications apart from New York and New Jersey from California, Illinois, Massachusetts, Texas, Pennsylvania, Louisiana, Ohio and Connecticut, in that order. Msgr. James J. Murray, supervisor of the Catholic Cuban center in New York, estimated that "at least 25 per cent will come to the metropolitan area of New York."

Put those big juicy steak back men, and try this new liquid meal!

A juicy steak with potatoes has long been considered the ideal meal to serve football players prior to a game, but Dr. Kenneth D. Rose, of the University of Nebraska, has trainers taking another look at the pre-game menu. Those grown that players sometimes emit when coming out of the huddle may not be only for their opponents, but from poor digestion and nervous stomachs.

Dr. Rose has found a solution to this gastrointestinal catastrophe, allowing athletes to expend all their energy playing instead of wasting it trying to digest that meal still in the stomach. It is a liquid meal similar to that given patients recovering from surgery.

Dr. Rose said he used the liquid diet as a test at the request of one of the trainers of the Nebraska football team.

Players were experiencing pre-game nausea and vomiting.

The Cornhuskers had been following the steak menu recommended by many leading trainers. Although it normally takes four hours to completely digest a meal, it was found that under tension, it could take as long as six.

Dr. Rose substituted a high-calorie liquid meal of a substance called sustagen, usually taken two hours before the game.

"Two hours after taking it, the liquid is completely absorbed and the players experience no cramps or vomiting in pre-game nervousness," Dr. Rose said.

It obviously hasn't hurt Big Eight leader Nebraska, the team ranked No. 3 in the conference with a 7-0 record. In contrast, the Salukis' 1-6 are sticking to the traditional steak dinner before every game.

Wonder if Lentz Hall steak sniffs are causing all those defeats?

Now that last week's storm has died down, the Saluki grid team will have another chance to come up with a win—against Northern Michigan at today's Parents Day game.

The Wildcats of NMU have won six of seven games this season. Their only loss was in a 13-0 upset by Central Michigan.

The Salukis' only win of the season was in their first game against State College of Iowa, a team that the Wildcats also defeated in their first game.

Despite the statistical difference between the Wildcats and the Salukis, Southern may have a chance to win today's game.

NMM Coach Frothy Ferzankas comments on the Salukis, says, "That's a mighty tough schedule that they've had; and remember, only two of those teams, Wichita (27-0) and Tulsa (55-13), beat them decisively. They'll give us lots of trouble."

Southern's schedule has also included some small-college teams as Lincoln and Youngstown that have been traditionally tough opponents. Wildcat quarterback Clair Lambert has been out with a broken thumb since the loss to Central Michigan a month ago. Bill Sauter has been filling in for Lambert, and will be on hand again tonight.

Before the loss to Central Michigan, the Wildcats had national recognition in three small-college polls. Since then they have headed back to high-rankings in the small-college polls by defeating St. Norbert College 13-6 and Findlay College 21-19.

NMM's defense was torn apart in the Central Michigan game when Central Michigan's quarterback made a sieve of the Wildcat secondary with his passing.

Kentucky, SIU to Run 10-Mile Relay Today

A two man 10-mile relay event will be held at Memorial Stadium at 2 p.m. today.

The University of Kentucky barriers will compete against the SIU varsity squad, the freshman squad and the Saluki Track Club.

For the seventh week in a row, Southern will be trying to get back into the winning column when it meets Northern Michigan in the Parente Day game at 8 p.m. today in McCracken Stadium.

The Wildcats have been trying this same thing for just the past six weeks with the same result—failure. As a result, Southern goes into tonight’s game with a six-game losing streak and a 1-6 record for the season.

Northern Michigan is experiencing no such problem, however; its record is just the opposite, 6-1. The Wildcats won their first four games before being knocked off by Central Michigan 13-0, but since then they’ve won two straight, including a narrow victory last week over small-college power Findlay.

The two teams have played one common foe, State College of Iowa. Southern beat the Jaguars for its lone victory, 23-16, and Northern Michigan edged them 10-7 in the first game of the season for both.

Flag Football Title

To Be Settled Today

The flag football championship will be played at 2 p.m. today at field one (east of the Arena). The Animals and Sigma Pi are the finalists. Winner of the championship will receive a trophy from the Intramural Office.

The Offensively, the two teams are as opposing extremes. Southern moves the ball, when and if it does, by passing. Northern Michigan, however, concentrates on eating up yardage on the ground. And the Wildcats have good High School Band

To Play at Half

In Today’s Game

Herrin High School’s Marching Tigers band and drill team will provide halftime entertainment when Southern meets Northern Michigan in the Parente Day football game tonight.

The 170-member band will present “Herrin A Go-Go,” a musical look at current trends in popular music, complete with a four-piece combo and discotheque dancers.

The Marching Tigers under the direction of William Clari-da are actually a combination of twirlers, letter girls, drill team and marching band. Mrs. William Jackson sponsors the letter girls and drill team.

Last summer, the band presented a 45-minute pre-game concert at Busch Stadium in St. Louis prior to the baseball game between Cardinals and Chicago Cubs.

Tonight’s meeting will be the fourth between the two schools. Southern has won only once, in 1956, and lost to the Wildcats 33-

Curb Use of Motorcycles? Student Opinions Differ

By Evelyn Augustin

A suggestion that motorcycles and bikes be restricted to one-way streets and that mixed emotions on campus.

Most students questioned in an informal poll taken by the Daily Egyptian bristled at the idea of a possible curtailment. Although some conceded that stricter controls might be needed.
