Carbondale supply of fuel oil down, distributors report

By Randy McCarthy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Carbondale residents may find it as cold inside their homes as out this winter if the weather takes a turn for the worse. Most of the local fuel oil distributors say they are expecting the winter months to be long on demand for fuel oil and short on supply. Fuel oil distributors are selling only to customers who bought oil from them last year. None interviewed were accepting new customers.

A spokesman for Cruse Mobil Oil Distributors in Carbondale said the company also was selling to persons renting a house or whose landlord bought oil last year.

John Armstrong, vice president of Martin Oil Company in Carbondale, said his company "just doesn't have enough fuel oil to last through the winter." He said in the months to come it would be a first come, first served situation.

The city of Carbondale is seeking bidders on a new six-month contract to replace the present contract with Wides Oil Company, Inc. which expires Oct. 31. The bids must be returned by Wednesday and will be submitted to the City Council for approval Oct. 15. The city wants 6,000 gallons of diesel fuel and 3,000 gallons of fuel oil for the winter months.

John A. Love, director of the President's Energy Policy Office, announced Tuesday that a mandatory allocation system for home heating oil will be put into effect in the near future. The mandatory allocation system will be based on the distribution pattern of the fuels during the past year.

SIU should escape the fuel oil shortage because the dormitories and buildings on campus are heated by steam generated from burning coal. Only a few outlying buildings use fuel oil for heating.

Bidding starts Saturday

Auctioneer Dick Hunter said that although the bidding starts at 10 a.m., there will be space available anytime during the day for anyone who wants to set up a booth. So far there are "way over 100" booths rented at $5 a stall.

There will be anywhere from 75 to 100 booth space and good weather are guaranteed to anyone participating in the third annual Carbondale Chamber of Commerce auction and yard sale at the Arena parking lot Saturday.

Radio station WCIL and television channel 7 is scheduled to take place at 3 p.m. The Carbondale Fire Department has challenged any fraternity or group to a water fight with a keg of beer, and the winner will be the one that has the most water left.

There will be refreshment booths serving sno-cones, lemonade, coffee, sandwiches and assorted snacks.

New spelling plan aids grade schools

Denny McGowan and Roy Flannagan (both 10) learn spelling-made-easy.

A student takes a pre-test to a unit to see how much he already knows in it. Then he does exercises to help grasp the details of the concept he or she is learning. The lesson ends with a retest over the same words given in the pre-test. "Theoretically the student should get a hundred (perfect score) on the re-test," Mrs. Zunich said. If not, further instruction is prescribed before the student moves on to the next lesson. According to Mrs. Zunich, one of the concepts is the ability to "read" in a compre- hension test, given using words not given in the previous lessons or similar in concept. The real determination of success, Mrs. Zunich said, depends on whether a student can not only spell the words in the booklets but also apply what he has learned in spelling to the different group of words on the comprehension test.

Mrs. Zunich said the independent approach is helpful in maintaining an optimistic self-image in each of her students.

Under the traditional teaching methods, every test handed back to the class as a whole would be compared among students, and the "good" students separated from the "bad." Mrs. Zunich recalled, "she, the pupil could "pursue his unit without having to judge himself according to others." The program was set up to gain self-esteem because he has no fear of being wrong.

Students in Nancy Hoffman's fifth grade class have accepted the new spelling routine with enthusiasm, and expressed relief that the old ways have been replaced. They especially liked the way they could move along at their own pace.

"Last year you had to work on a lesson even if you knew it," added Stephen Marcce, also 10.

Annie Tran's comment indicated that the concept method of spelling is catching on fast. "It's easier. spelling makes a lot of sense now, I guess," was my worst subject. This year it's my best subject by far,\n
In addition to Mrs. Zunich and Miss Hoffman, the pilot program was planned and compiled by Linda Wilson, sixth grade teacher, and Marcia Sinnott and Dorothy Montgomery, both fifth grade teachers.

Strict smoking ban in Arena renewed

By Debby Ratermann

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The ban on alcohol, drugs and cigarettes in Arena concerts is being strictly enforced this year, Dean Justice, Arena manager, said Thursday.

"We were successful in bringing these problems under control last year and do not expect to have the same problems again," Justice said. "It's important to let people know now that the same rules that applied last year also apply this year."

Justice said the tense situation last year when the administration feared to cancel concerts because of heavy smoking and drinking "should not occur again."

"It got out of hand last year, but this year I'm going to inform students and returning students that there will be no more alcohol allowed and there will be removed from the concert," Justice said.

"A ticket, is a license to enter the Arena. If someone breaks the law, his license is revoked," he said. Justice said peer pressure is the most useful force in curtailing smoking and drinking. "I don't want to have to tell the fans to sit down on the lights on during concerts," Justice said. "Because I think it breaks the mood. If we can get them to have the same type of people want them, they're going to have to apply peer pressure."

Justice said the lights were left on at intervals at B.B. King's performance last year, and people were unhappy with the arrangement. "I hope we never have to do that again," Justice said. "We won't go that way unless we have to."

Ushers have been instructed to show flashlights into the faces of suspected violators. "This should contribute to peer pressure, too," Justice said.

"We're not just concerned with marijuaana smokers, but with cigarette smokers as well, because of the fire hazard," Justice said. "We'll prohibit smoking and drinking at all Arena functions, including basketball games."

Justice also will ask performers to cooperate in the smoking and drinking ban. "Tell them it's in the plans to distribute handouts at the door during concerts, informations, including basketball games."

Suggestions of ban on alcohol in Arena concerts were made by many local residents and businesses.

The Greater Carbondale Area Chamber of Commerce has begun accepting recommendations of prospec-tive candidates for their "Man of the Year" award.

Ray Lech, executive secretary of the Carbondale chapter, said the chamber presents the award at the annual banquet usually held in January.

A candidate's name is submitted to a committee of past "Man of the Year" recipients for consideration.

Lech added that the candidates are recommended by community residents at-large who are felt to be worthy of the award.

A member does not have to be a Chamber member.

According to the "Man of the Year" award program, the Chamber's Third Annual Auction and Yard Sale to raise funds for special projects will be held October 6 at the SIU Arena parking lot.

Surplus and non-moving merc-chandise, personal items, gift certificates, furniture, appliances, tools and other useful items for the sale have been given by many local residents and businesses.

All donations are tax deductible. Funds raised through the sale will be used by the Chamber as contingency funds for community projects and other special purposes not covered by the regular dues of the group.

Work Release Center
House of Glass adds recycling to program
By Sam Denoms Daily Egyptian Staff Writer
Residents of the House of Glass—the Southern Illinois Work Release Center—have added a new phase to their program community work.

The men recently began contributing their time and labor to the Jackson Community Workshop recycling program, Dave Carson, House of Glass resident, said.

Carson came to the House of Glass from Menard State Penitentiary, where he had attempted to begin a similar recycling implementation program. When Carson came to Carbondale, he joined the Therapeutic Community, which is a group of six-house community, who are committed to a program of self-help.

The members of the Therapeutic Community, Carson said, decided to include an outreach phase in their program: To reach out and show an interest in the wider community around them, the group volunteered their aid to the Jackson Community Workshop.

Quarreled in Murphysboro, the workshop oversees employment training and social programs for physically and mentally handicapped persons living the the county. Recycling is a part of the workshop's vocational instruction program.

Derge attends Grad Council meeting to comment
President David Derge will attend a special meeting of the Graduate Council Monday at 2 p.m., in the Student Center Mississippi Room.

The agenda calls for "Comments from the President," but Philip Davis, chairman, said he does not know the details of Derge's talk.

The Graduate Council met in regular session Friday and began moves towards selecting nominees for a search committee for a dean of the Graduate School.

Davis said action on the nominees and discussion of converting to a 4.0 grading scale will be considered at the next regular council meeting.

IPIRG to continue taking local business surveys to aid student consumers
By Randy McCarthy Daily Egyptian Staff Writer
The Illinois Public Interest Research Group (IPIRG) at SIU will continue, its surveys. The Carbondale business fair quarter as an aid to new and returning students. Herb McMeen, president of IPIRG, said Friday.

IPIRG hopes to release Monday the results of the 28-page questionnaire administered spring quarter. The survey, was given in an attempt to pinpoint problem areas in the University and will be followed up by a brief questionnaire later in the year, McMeen said.

He said the Internal Revenue Service rule Friday on IPIRG's complaint against 11 Carbondale pharmacies for refusing to disclose the prices of brand name prescription drugs, or the price of the same drugs under generic names. The group filed charges against the pharmacies Aug. 28 when they failed to respond to a IPIRG survey.

The groups, complaint contends that under Phases 3 Wage and Public Guidelines the druggists must disclose the base prices of the drugs.

McMeen said some brand name drugs are priced 60 per cent less when listed under their generic names.

"They are at it again to keep their physicians pharcaceusts," McMeen said.

IPIRG surveys will continue regardless of the decision on the complaint, he said.

McMeen said there was a chance Ralph Nader might visit the IPIRG office at SIU when he comes to Illinois. Sam Long, adviser to IPIRG, visited the Washington, D.C., offices of the group last week and several inquiries about the record of the SIU branch, McMeen said.

IPIRG's affiliate is one of the most active in the United States, McMeen said.

"We get inquiries all the time from other groups."

Sisters being held in murder of father
CHICAGO (AP) — It was a cool, calculated murder, say authorities, said by two sisters, age 15 and 13. It succeeded. Their father. Axlme, the older sister, and Sharon was held Friday in the Cook County Juvenile Center. They are charged in a delinquency petition with killing their father, John Thomas, 40, a cab driver. The police said the girls told of hatching the murder plot Sunday at the father allegedly beat them following a quarrel over some missing money in their South Side flat.

The weapon was available—a .28 caliber revolver the father kept under his bed.

On Tuesday, according to police, the plan was put into action. Axlme got the gun while the father was eating an evening meal at the kitchen table. He usually sat with his back to the stove instead of facing it. The girls could approach him easily from behind.

Then came the first hitch in their plan.

This particular evening, the father faced the stove and Axlme said this prevented her from coming up behind him. If, after dinner, the father went to the living room to watch television, maybe, there would be another chance.

He did.

Police said Axlme told them she stood behind the chair as her father watched the screen. She signaled Sharon to go to the record player and turn the volume as high as it would go. Then, according to the police report, Axlme stepped in front of the surprised man, pointed the gun at his head and pulled the trigger.

The bullet struck him in the forehead. He staggered up. She fired again. The bullet hit him in the chest.

He fell to the floor. She fired once more, but missed.

Then the girls, a high school fresh man the other a 7th grader, told police they went to the home of an uncle and aunt in the night.

The father's body was not found until Wednesday evening. The girls returned to the apartment with their mother, Mrs. Berthold Harris, 34, the father's former wife.

Police were called. The girls at first insisted that their father must have been killed by robbers as they broke down under questioning and confessed.

The girls said that after the shooting, the revolver in a paper bag and threw it into a garbage can in a parking lot. Police found it there.

Correction

In the coming weeks the group plans to resurvey its surveys of grocery and liquor store prices as well as a survey of doctors' visits, safety medicines and cosmetics, McMeen said.

"Deodorants, tissues and such cost more in some stores than in others," he said. Some items cost more in stores which are close to campus, McMeen said. Higher taxes and operating expenses may be the cause for the higher prices, a IPIRG wished further information, he said.

Results of IPIRG surveys will be run after the results of these three surveys are published, McMeen said.

Carbondale heating oil supply down the distributors doubt even allocations equal to last year will ever reach the demand.

Armstrong said there was little chance of the allocation plan helping large shortage. Allocations will spread the shortage among customers, but it won't increase the amount, he said.

Stroud and Sheret, Phillips 66 Petroleum Distributors in Carbondale will receive only 96 per cent of the amount of oil it received last year, a spokesman said.

Cruse Mobil will receive 106 per cent of the amount of fuel oil it ordered last year.

Independent distributors, those not affiliated with a refinery, must order fuel oil from other distributors but have no guarantee that they will be filled. Martin and Wides placed orders last spring but neither order is guaranteed.

"There's no way possible to get a guaranteed figure on any product," Armstrong said.

One independent distributor was skidded over allocation plan which isn't linked to a mandatory allocation plan. Unless independent distributors are assured a percent of the existing supply, customers may have ration cards but no fuel, said a spokesman for Wides. If Wides receives only a percentage of its order, each customer will receive a proportional share of its order, the spokesman said.

Armstrong agreed that increased fuel cost shortages will boost the price for heating oil. Under provisions of Phase 4 Price controls, distributors are allowed to pass on to consumers increases in the cost of oil for heating.

"The price will definitely go up, as much as 30 cents more per gallon of fuel oil," said the Wides spokesman.

Enrollment tops 18,000 at SIU were "pretty slow" at Woody Hall Friday.

Mager said trends indicate universities will concentrate on graduate and professional education in the future and that the trend will hit SIU in two years.

Some 18,000 students will register in the fall of 1974 and 18,500 in 1975. Freshmen will be at about 2,000 with 17,600 returning students will register in the fall of 1974 and 18,500 in 1975. "Things should level off after that about 15,000," he said. "That improves student-teacher ratios. If we have a good faculty, improves education." He said.

Original predictions set 1973 fall enrollment at 18,000. Last fall about 18,000 students were enrolled, but 18,400 were enrolled in the fall declining to about 18,350 by spring quarter.

Final registration figures will be available next week.

Financial assistance programs are often proposed to make it easier to obtain a college education. Regardless of intent, however, they usually prove detrimental to the middle-class student.

In a recent report, the Committee for Economic Development recommended that college tuitions be doubled, but at the same time, student financial assistance should be increased.

The report, titled "The Management and Financing of Colleges," was compiled by a private organization supported by business and industry, and is similar to proposals of the Nixon administration, the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education and the College Entrance Examination Board.

What all these organizations fail to realize, however, is that their proposals to achieve quality education and equal opportunity would only result in hurting the student body, particularly middle-class student bodies.

The proposed increase in financial assistance would go mainly to lower-class students. It is a grant system based on need and would allocate an average of $1,350 to students from families with less than $4,000 annual incomes, $2,000 to those with less than $6,000 annual incomes, $675 to those with less than $8,000 and $328 to those with less than $10,000.

But what will be done for those students from families with annual incomes greater than $10,000, but still a far cry from wealth—all those commonly known as the middle class?

To put it simply, nothing.

This is the isolated group of students that usually suffers from the raising costs of education, thus squashing any attempts at real equal opportunity.

The upper-class student can always absorb the increases in tuition. His parents can, anyway. Many don't even notice the difference in their fee statements.

The lower-class student would reap the benefits of the grant system and avoid any financial problems caused by a tuition increase.

It's the middle-class student that would feel the strain on his pocketbook. He can't turn to his parents, because tuition increases don't figure in their budget. And it won't help to take on a part-time job, since chances are he's already working.

So he's forced to drop out of school, at least until he can work at a full-time job long enough to save sufficient funds to come back.

When a country stresses education as much as the United States, something is definitely wrong when students are forced to quit school as a result of financial proposals designed to help keep them there.

We need to re-evaluate the entire educational system and find out exactly what it will take to achieve quality education.

If higher tuition is the answer, it should be accompanied by a well-planned financial assistance program designed to help both lower and middle-class students, one that will enable everyone to absorb the extra cost deemed necessary to cultivate quality education.

Our Air Force bombs again...

By Arthur Hoppe
Chronicle Features

While our attention has been diverted elsewhere, our beloved American foreign policy has been shaken to its very roots by appalling developments in Cambodia.

As you know, Congress made the fateful mistake last August of cutting off all aid bombing missions in behalf of our staunch ally General Lon Nol, who, in keeping with Cambodian custom, spells his name backwards.

At the same time, the capital of Phnom Penh was surrounded, all major highways were cut, supplies were cut off short, the entire country held more than country-side and the situation was, in a word, "inexplicable.

Our military experts grimly predicted that without our B-52s and fighter bombers blasting the bejebbers out of the enemy night and day, General Lon Nol (that's the correct spelling) would be a goner in a week.

Since then, of course, the General's been winning the war hand over fist. Not once, for some reason, has he asked us to send more bombers back. What he asked instead was that we kindly airmail him the $1 million a day our bombing had been costing us.

Naturally, all this had caused consternation in Washington. The President still wants to know how he can achieve peace with honor if Congress won't let him bomb anybody. The Air Force is working on a new manual, "Defeat Through Air Power." And President Nixon has been the Bath Air War Permits in the basement of the State Department.

Actually, the Bureau hadn't had a customer in months. American policy was to hang a "not available" notice to be.

So Bureau Chief Homer T. Petiphone was happy to be asked to look up some and find the hereditary Riff of Phynxia standing at the wicket:

"You want to apply for a War Permit?" asked Mr. Petiphone, rubbing his hands. "Where do I put them? Ah yes, here we are. Now then, are you a Baptist of Democracy?" "The Key to All of Wherever You Are! A Domino!"

"All three," said the Riff, "and a Bulwark of Freedom to boot."

"Good, good. Let's Sex, Purpose of War? I'll just stamp that "Eradicate Communism.""

"Right," said the Riff. "Two Princes, the ex-Riff and my mother-in-law, who still is one. All known Communists, I know it.

"Fine, fine. Now then, would you like strategic bombing, tactical bombing or saturation bombing?"

"How much will it cost you?" said the Riff. "Oh," said Mr. Petiphone, "I think we could give you a nice little round-the-clock bombing pattern for $12.5 million."

"Good, I'll take it," said the Riff. "In Swiss francs, if you got them. No offense."

Mr. Petiphone, aghast, reported this strange request to his superiors. A top-level meeting was called. One young Assistant Secretary briskly suggested a compromise, had him sign us to be. "a fighting chance," he said. "So we'll go for the traditional, please. Half a million, and one deputy, "this is not time to tinker with our cherished American Bombs for Peace Program."

The Riff signaled when Mr. Petiphone broke the bad news. "Okay, I'll take the bombs," he said, "but only because I desperately need a big win."

"Don't worry," said Mr. Petiphone, stamping the permit. "Our bombers will be there in hours, seeking your enemies and bombing them and...

Learning to bite the bullet

by

Oliver J. Caldwell, Emeritus

Washington today appears to be the corrupted capital of a dying world empire. Externally, the city is more beautiful than ever. Monumental new buildings are rising on the Mall to house the new White House, while the new subway system blasts and shudders its way through the District from Maryland to Virginia. But within, the city is perilously divided, black against white, party against party, liberal against conservative. It is infected with distrust by day, and violence by night.

The several crises which today confront Americans are concentrated in Washington. If Americans are to overcome today's difficulties, they must be willing to understand and to correct what is happening in Washington. And to do this, they will have to start curing the evils in their own communities. The sickness in Washington is symptomatic of the sickness in our whole society.

This is the painful and shining time for a proud and traditionally honest nation. Members of the White House staff have been convicted of felonies. Two recent members of the Cabinet, and other high officials are under federal indictments for felonies. The Vice-President stands accused of accepting bribes. The Executive and Legislative Branches of Government are engaged in a bitter struggle for power. It is possible that our top leaders may face impeachment. The poor and the old are already suffering from a major inflation. Abroad, American prestige, and the American dollar, have never been lower.

The long summer of 1973 has revealed wounds in the American body politic which are urgently in need of surgery. The economy is in a coma. No one is quite sure of what to do. In the private sector, no known aesthetic for the operations needed to restore what we seem to have lost. Perhaps we should name these wounds after some of the ancestors of Americans of an earlier generation.

After Shosh-Jetskyberg, and Chichemakauga the supply of whisky and chloroform can run out. Men were prepared for surgery with a slug of bourbon and given a bullet to chew on while arms and legs were sawed off. It was thought by some pacifists that such sacrifice and suffering actually prolonged the war. But the 1973 war is different. It is not a war in which we have to present predication correctly, and it honestly the result should be a better nation.

A. The Mafeafto-Quanah movement, which were fought to a standstill by certain earlier presidents now seems to be a dying cause. A radical cause its aims and goals may be corrupted by the desire to eliminate the evil that has overtaken us that man could be Butz. Millions of people in this country have never had a decent diet. Millions of children have in the past had only one good meal a day—a free or cheap lunch in a school, or an egg and two cups of surpluses. Now Butz smirks about rising food prices, and glosses about rising sales of essential American goods urgently needy of home.

There appears to be a carefully orchestrated campaign to exaggerate the Calvinistic portrait of thrift and useful. Congress recently passed, and the President signed with pious platitudes a law granting a five per cent rise in the social security a year from now. Meanwhile, the wire services are reporting that many people are too depressed to celebrate Thanksgiving day and are staying alive.

B. The real and lasting values are human values. Somehow these seem for the time being to have been forgotten. Meanwhile ITT and other corporate predators are poisoning our food and the poor and the weak suffer. As Senator Weicker said of the Watergates, “These fellows almost stole the country from under our noses.” But Weicker was only one symptom of the sickness which afflicts us.

The real danger is what may happen to this country if inflation leads to food riots in our cities. Then the Wasters and the Kleagulls and the Knucks First boys may try to sell to a tired and frightened American people the false security of a dictatorship. There have been some indications that this was the ultimate aim of some of the scoundrels who have been already flushed out. The trouble is, too many men like them are still in power. One cannot imagine how some of the leaders of the military-industrial establishment opposed by Eisenhower, and men like Butz, Laird and “Cap-the-knife” Weinburger, would react to food riots, if present inflationary food prices are not controlled, riots in our cities in a year are a distinct possibility.

But as we approach our national bi-centennial there are reasons for optimism. The American people are tough and hard to put down. In general, they have been well-served by the news media, although since 1968 there have been strong efforts to muzzle them. This seems to have been a special assignment for Agnew. Another warrior for darkness has been Henry Kissinger, who was put in charge of the Public Broadcasting Corporation. This apparently was part of the campaign to eliminate expressions of dissent with the President's policies. For a while programs as different as Buckley's and Sesame Street were in danger.

Because we have brave and wise men and women in Congress, in the Administration, and writing for our great newspapers, the danger to our traditions and to our future is now less immediate. Our best protection is to reeducate ourselves to those dangerous thoughts incorporated two hundred years ago in the Bill of Rights and the Declaration of Independence. Thoughts about the rights of individuals are as valid and cornerstone as they were two hundred years ago. Military coups are almost always the work of professional politicians. The best policy in defense of democracy is to continue the campaign to eliminate many of these crises. We survived the CIVIL War and the Reconstruction. We survived the Depression, a time of starvation and hardship unimaginable to most of the new generation. It was during this time that certain bureaucrats and politicians rose to power. We once were also too busy building a nation for corruption. We need new visions, new leadership, new challenges. It cannot be too late; surely the soul of a people cannot so easily be corrupted.

The dream of an American empire began to take shape in the Spanish-American War and the Boxer Rebellion. The Pax Americana became a brief reality after the murders of Hirono and Nogasaki. It was founded on military victory, a short monopoly of nuclear weapons, and a paranoid fear of Communism.

It now appears that the American Empire will be discredited in history as the briefest of all world empires. To salvage what we can of our resources and prestige we should withdraw into our own territories as soon as possible all of our military power now scattered around the world. If Western Europe does not care much about defending itself agains a Communist, there is no reason why we should bankrupt ourselves as self-appointed guardians of Western Civilization and feed disastrous Asian wars should have convinced us that we can not continue indefitinitely to defend Japan, Korea, the Philippines, and Thailand.

After all, the whole of Space Ship Earth lies in range of our rockets, and we have the nuclear fire­ power to destroy all of mankind fifteen times over. Whole tanks and cities, and most likely major cities may be created as isolations or worse, but now is the time for Americans to bite the bullet of reality in international affairs.

We have become an X-rated society. Crime in high places, the triumph of pornography and the Playboy philosophy, the poison of racial hatreds, and the rising wave of brutality, are all manifestations of sickness in our society. There has always been violence in the American make-up, but it was offset by a strong sense of community and of national responsibility, and by something which was a very reality after the murders of Hirono and Nogasaki. It was founded on military victory, a short monopoly of nuclear weapons, and a paranoid fear of Communism.

It now appears that the American Empire will be discredited in history as the briefest of all world empires. To salvage what we can of our resources and prestige we should withdraw into our own territories as soon as possible all of our military power now scattered around the world. If Western Europe does not care much about defending itself agains a Communist, there is no reason why we should bankrupt ourselves as self-appointed guardians of Western Civilization and feed disastrous Asian wars should have convinced us that we can not continue indefitinitely to defend Japan, Korea, the Philippines, and Thailand.

After all, the whole of Space Ship Earth lies in range of our rockets, and we have the nuclear fire­ power to destroy all of mankind fifteen times over. Whole tanks and cities, and most likely major cities may be created as isolations or worse, but now is the time for Americans to bite the bullet of reality in international affairs.

B. We have become an X-rated society. Crime in high places, the triumph of pornography and the Playboy philosophy, the poison of racial hatreds, and the rising wave of brutality, are all manifestations of sickness in our society. There has always been violence in the American make-up, but it was offset by a strong sense of community and of national responsibility, and by something which was a very reality after the murders of Hirono and Nogasaki. It was founded on military victory, a short monopoly of nuclear weapons, and a paranoid fear of Communism.
Foundation chief search spiced by confusion

By Marcia Bullard
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

There seems to be a little confusion regarding who is doing the searching for what among SIU administrators.

Goodman, acting as president of the SIU Foundation, said Thursday, the current president for Development and Services T. Richard Magee has been looking for a permanent Foundation director since Kenneth Miller resigned from that post in May.

However, Magee said his search has been for a Director for Development for SIU who will work closely with the Foundation. He said he doesn’t know how soon he will stop looking for a permanent Foundation director.

In June, Janie Jarrett was chosen to reorganize the SIU Foundation by splitting up into two groups, one at Carbondale and one at Edwardsville. She said this will increase flexibility, making the Foundation more responsive to the needs of the two schools.

The Foundation and its Board of Directors will meet Oct. 19 to review new by-laws, a new set of by-laws. An executive director, treasurer, legal council and secretary will be elected to serve the remaining half of the Foundation. A permanent director may be chosen to undertake the two groups.

This will reduce the number of directors of the SIU Foundation from 11 to 7. Those not appointed to one of the offices will be seated on a board of governors. They will choose the campus with which they want to work.

Goodman, said said he is dividing his time between the Foundation and his responsibilities as assistant to the new president, said he thought Magee had traveled to Chicago last weekend to interview a possible permanent director.

Magee said Friday that in light of the resignation of the SIU Foundation, the permanent director would not be sought "for some time."

The position of Blag is still to fill is a new administrative post authorized more than a year ago by the President’s Management Task Force. The Director of Development will work under Magee to coordinate all fund-raising activities on behalf of the SIU-Carbondale. He will seek funding sources other than those currently covered by the Foundation and Alumni Association.

The position has not been filled yet for budget reasons, Magee said.

"One of the reasons we made the change in the administration of the Foundation was to provide funds for the new position out of University funds," Magee said Thursday.

Magee said fund raisers of this category normally command salaries of $15,000 to $20,000 per year. "Some vice presidents of development are paid from $25,000 to $40,000, but I would venture we couldn’t afford that," Magee said.
Immunity for Agnew rejected

BALTIMORE (AP) — The government argued Friday that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew cannot seek constitutional protection from indictment and trial.

The Justice Department, in a 24-page brief signed by Solicitor Gen. Robert Bork, acknowledged that the vice president’s motion to quash the indictment against him, “poses a grave and unsolved constitutional issue.”

But it rejected Agnew’s contention that he stands equal with the President under the Constitution with the same rights, protection and immunity.

The government said no immunity exists for the vice president “where none is mentioned.”

The government said the President does have such immunity while in office, insisting that the framers of the Constitution “understood that lesser, impeachable officers are subject to the criminal process.”

Agnew’s lawyers suggested in their motion last week that indictment, trial and punishment upon conviction would effectively remove the vice president from office. They claim this can only be done by impeachment. Meanwhile, Agnew’s lawyers subpoenaed several newsmen Friday, trying to track the origin of news leaks about the investigation.

Folk Festival to continue at DuQuoin Fair

The Southern Illinois Folk Festival, and event offering examples of everything from goose-plucking to sausage-making, is being held today and Sunday at the DuQuoin Fairgrounds.

The festival, which is in its second year, opened Friday. More than 150 persons are participating in the various crafts and exhibits and music.

The Egyptian Antique Auto Club will sponsor an antique auto show on Sunday as an added attraction.

Festival gates open at 11 a.m. both days. Admission is free, but $1 car parking fee will be charged at the gate.

The festival is sponsored by the Southern Illinois Arts and Crafts Guild.

Summer fun ends

These young ladies romping along the shore at Campus Beach are having their fun while it lasts. The beach officially closes for winter this Sunday. The boat dock also closes its daily operation Sunday, but will continue to check-out equipment from 1-4 p.m. weekends (weather permitting) until the total winter shutdown, Oct. 28.

Saluki marching band to make trip to Dayton

The Salukis will not be alone when they face the University of Dayton Saturday.

The Marching Salukis will be there too as director Mike Hanes said, “to spur the team to its first victory.”

The band will share the half-time festivities and will participate in a post-game concert which is a regular feature of the games at Dayton, Hanes said.

Hanes explained that the band trip was made possible with the cooperation and financial assistance of Doug Weaver, athletic director, and the athletic department.

This is the first time the band has traveled with the team for years, Hanes said. He added that he hopes the trips can now be continued.

The band trips were eliminated because of budget cuts, Hanes said.

Office Bidders. New buyers.

They’re buying all the charm, too,” Jampol said. “That makes it good for the American businesses, but bad for the American retailer.”

Ted Christensen, manager of the men’s department at Penney’s, said that prices may be having denim from American manufacturers at a better price.

“There has been too much rain in the southern cotton belt over the past few years,” Christensen said. “Instead of per cent cotton shirts and pants, manufacturers have gone to blends. This results in a better shirt, but not the same feel and more expensive.”

Despite the shortages, retailers agree that there has been a definite increase in the sale of work clothes.

The Hunter Boys Salve Stock does not have any denim clothes in stock, but are selling flannel and blue chambray work shirts.

Bid overalls, work hats and colored ties have all sold “real well” lately, Rocky Mountain Supplies, Jampolis said. "We’ve always had workshirts, but the popularity of them has gone up.

"If everyone works shirts we sell, I would say six are flannel, two are blue work shirts and two are regular workshirts,” Jampoli said.

“Penney’s, work clothes sales have ‘really picked up’ over the last year, Christensen said. "We have increased our counter space for bib overalls at least an eighth over the last year. We had to pick up the smaller sizes for the girls who buy them.”

“We had to increase the counter space for our blue workshirts by at least a third,” Christensen said. “One flannel shirt sales have doubled over the last two years.”

Christensen said that although work clothes sales don’t bring in any real money, it’s an important business. “It’s a good, steady business and it brings in the customers,” he said.

Adult Ed offers boat course

By David Fredman
Student Writer

Although the boating season in Southern Illinois is quickly fading away, the SIU Adult Education program is teaching a course in boat safety at the Hall this quarter. The course is offered to anyone interested in boating who is being taught by Coast Guard instructors.

The instructors for the course are all members of the Coast Guard Reserve. They are Bill Eaton, Robert Alexander and Alfred Mayer.

The materials used will be a text book, published by the Coast Guard, along with slides and films. Lectures and question-answer periods will also be a part of the course.

Eating light this fall season is a good time for the class to be offered. "We are now finished with the fall season and I’m sure more people will be on the lakes next year," Eaton said.

Police seek 2 men after inn robbery

Carbondale police were seeking two men Friday in the armed robbery of the Inn at 116 S. Main St. Value of property was approximately $520 early Thursday morning.

The inn’s night clerk told police that two black men with stocking caps over their faces threatened the employee at about 1:30 a.m. Thursday. The two men were held by police for two months.

The clerk described one of the men as being about 6 foot 2 and about 40 years old.

Both men wore wide-brimmed hats and bell-bottomed pants, the clerk told police.

SIU security police, investigating the Monday robbery and attempted rape of a 19-year-old woman student, reported Friday the men had eliminated three suspects and are running down other leads.

UF0 sighted in 1 claudale

Stilton runiform report

URBANDALE, I/l. (AP) - An unidentified flying object hovers above the Kentucky bank of the Illinois River Monday night.

Fred Riddle said he first spotted a blurlike object Monday night at his home from a room window.

Riddle, who was watching television, said he first saw the object from the window and immediately called his wife and son who said they all observed the object.

There was a UF0 report in Silvis, Ill., about 30 miles to the southwest Thursday, but no others from Illinois.

Eaton also said that there were not an unusual number of boating accidents this past year, but more people are finding enjoyment on the water than ever before.

"Because of the increasing number of people enjoying boating, there is a real need for safety courses," Eaton said.

Most of the accidents during the boating season last year dealt with property damage. Gas explosions played a big part in many of the accidents.

Police said the children were playing in the drawers of their dresser on Monday morning.

Alexander reported Friday the house had about $200 in cash, and about $700 in a bank of Kentucky Bank.

"It was a good time (or awhile, and I'm sure more people will be on the lake next year," Eaton said.

Nature to be promoted at Little Grassly Labs

By John Griffin
Student Writer

Jack Leggett, newly appointed director of Little Grassly Lake Outdoor Laboratories, has a product to sell—nature. Leggett intends on doing this through organized educational programs exposing people to nature.

Recreational programs instituted through the outdoor lab are to educate the public on nature i ts sights and sounds. Leggett said to fulfill these needs the lab offers facilities such as hiking and back packing, camping, canoeing and lodge accommodations.

Due to financial problems it is necessary for the outdoor lab to become self-sustaining within the next fiscal years. "To be self-sustaining, it will be necessary to operate our programs to capacity, using the facilities presently have year-round," Leggett said. A present, a target date of July 1, 1976, has been set for the self-sustaining phase to begin.

"Creating new dimensions, experiences, and feelings with nature should enlighten the public to become aware of the beautiful environment in which we are a part," Leggett said.

Leggett plans to continue a diverse recreational program to appeal to the entire public.

"Establish outdoor programs," Leggett said. He added that this allows the people to choose the program they desire.

City Council meets

Recorder specifications considered for police

By Dan Haar
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Specifications for communications recording equipment for the Public Works Department will be submitted for consideration at an informal meeting of the City Council Monday night.

The equipment will enable the police department to record all incoming emergency calls, Joseph O'Rourke, city purchasing agent, said.

O'Rourke reported that approximately $7,000 has been budgeted for the system.

The council will also receive a report regarding recommendations on which intersections in Carbondale should have right turn on red traffic signals.

Section 11-306 of the Illinois Vehicle Code has been revised to permit vehicles facing a red traffic signal to make a right turn on red after stopping. The law is effective Jan. 1, 1974.

The law provides that city governments may restrict intersections under their jurisdiction.

The report includes a study made by the Public Works Department showing which intersections are too dangerous for the special signals.

Other topics to be discussed by the council are:

- Recommendations regarding the prohibition of parking in front of the Baptist Building.
- Reports by the Municipal Management Policy Committee of the International City Management Association.
- Continued review of a proposed zoning ordinance (limit one hour).

Water ‘fights,’ parade to kick off Fire Prevention Week campaign

By Mary Gabel
Student Writer

A campaign to awaken the public's safety consciousness will be carried out by the Carbondale Fire Department and safety commission during Fire Prevention Week, beginning today.

“People cause most fires, and people can prevent most fires,” said Dale O. Ritzel, chairman of the safety commission. Fire Chief Charles McCaughan, added that “over 80 per cent of fires are caused by carelessness.”

To attract attention immediately, the Fire Department plans to stage water fights at the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce auction and yard sale from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Saturday in the GFL Arena parking lot. The “fights” consist of two workmen shooting water at each other until they make a halo.

Monday a parade through downtown streets will display fire equipment to citizens. Throughout the rest of the week, safety demonstrations will be given to children in all Carbondale elementary schools.

Prevention tips will be aired through the mass media. Ritzel said, with spot announcements on radio and cable television and press releases to area newspapers. Safety commissioners will be available to speak to local organizations on the importance of safety, be added.

“Until it fires happens to you or to a neighbor, no one really has a true meaning of safety,” Ritzel said. Checking one’s own home to discard needless items and making sure paper does not accumulate are important safety measures he said.

Faculty electrical appliances, worn cords, combustibles in dangerous “hot” places, defective cooking equipment and a dirty heating system can all lead to fire. Ritzel warned against smoking in bed, and said that according to statistics this is the major cause of fires.

“It’s unfortunate that it usually takes someone getting killed before people start doing something about fire prevention,” Ritzel said.

“Fire prevention should be an all year activity,” stressed Ritzel.

Last year 12,200 lives were claimed in fires in the United States and Canada, costing the two nations $1.2 billion.

To report a fire, call 453-2080. Ritzel may be contacted at 453-5996 or 453-1989.

Bids taken on building face lifts

By Bruce Martin
Student Writer

The Jackson County Housing Authority is taking bids on modernization of 31 county-owned buildings in Carbondale and 16 buildings in Murphysboro.

Don Slinkard, an employee of Simon, Rebbeteg, Garrishoe and Plum, Inc., the appointed architectural firm for Jackson County, said the modernization program was established to make the property investment more valuable for the future. Slinkard said that most of the buildings are in satisfactory condition presently, and the work that will be done will take the shape of added conveniences. These buildings are classified as low-income housing projects.

Slinkard said the largest items to be modernized are the electrical systems and their components. This will take place in 11 buildings.

Other work scheduled will consist of replacement of exterior doors and locks, installation of clothes dryer and air conditioner outlets, installation of showers over tubs, and new storm doors. Approximately seven buildings will be re-roofed and some painting will be done.

The program will be funded by the federal government with funds coming from the Federal Modernization Program. This fund is appropriated only for the remodeling and modernizing of government-owned property.

The estimated cost for the project is $306,000. It is estimated that the electrical work will run near $149,000, the plumbing near $25,000, and final repairs will be $15,000.

The project is scheduled to begin in November and be completed in mid-August, 1974.

Campus Briefs

James Tetterington of Springfield master's degree candidate in plant and soil science, has returned from a year of graduate study and work as a graduate assistant at the University of Santa Maria in southern Brazil. He served with the United Nations-sponsored SIU agricultural development program at the Brazilian university.

En route from Brazil to Carbondale, Tetterington represented the soils section of the University of Santa Maria agriculture department at the Third Soils Colloquium on Phosphorus in Tropical Zones meetings in Bogota, Colombia, South America, from Aug. 26 to 31. He has sent a report on his observations to the department at the University of Santa Maria.

Tetterington went to Brazil early in September, 1972.

Two SIU educators will assume offices in the Illinois Personnel and Guidance Association when the organization concludes its 1973 meeting in Chicago Oct. 11-12.

Michael K. Allekurse, associate professor in the guidance and educational psychology department, will become president, while Harold R. Bards, assistant professor in the same department, will become secretary.

The association is comprised principally of guidance counselors in the public schools of the state.

Others from SIU who plan to attend the meeting include John J. Cody, assistant dean for career education in the College of Education and former chairman of the guidance and educational psychology department; John T. Mouw, present chairman; and faculty members Richard W. Bradley and Robert W. Graff.

Raymond D. Wiley, assistant professor of speech, will be a panelist at the Midwest Region Practitioner-Educator Seminar at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. The discussion, titled "Up-dating the Public Relations Curriculum," is set for Sunday.
Dating therapy offered for SIU male students

By Mary Gabel
Student Writer

Countering males' self-doubts about dating with analytical discussions and videotape sessions is the object of a psychology program to be conducted by two graduate students for a month.

"It all going to be designed to assist guys recognize the points where they feel comfortable with all types of women," said Thomas Barrett, who is structuring the experiment along with Ken Ralph. Both are graduate students in psychology.

Currently, between 25 and 30 have volunteered but other interested persons are welcome, said Barrett. The first meeting will be at 6:15 p.m. Oct. 10 in Lewis 201. There will be four divisions, all meeting simultaneously, either on Mondays and Wednesdays or Tuesdays and Thursdays depending on class schedules. Barrett and Ralph each will direct one discussion group and a videotape session.

The topic has been narrowed down to dating, but that includes sharing of information, feelings and getting feedback from the videotape showings. Self-confidence problems and self-concepts will also be discussed.

Four married females have volunteered to help examine dating behavior patterns in interaction and role-playing exercises, by filming in a one-to-one situation.

"We both feel both the discussions and videotapes will be effective," said Barrett.

He acknowledged that people's dating behavior can vary from total abstinance—"just friends" attitude—to a strictly, performance relationship with other person. But he contended that some males, due to awkward experiences, doubt their ability to handle the traditional "date" with any assurance.

"We want to increase their self-confidence, that's where most important aspect," he said.

Hoping that women will be discussed as human beings, Barrett added that if the male experiments are successful, he would like to start a similar group for females. Males came first, he said, because their problems were "obvious" to him.

The only requirements for the program are that it be open to all 18-30 years olds, single and not under the care of a psychiatrist or therapist. Barrett can be reached at his home, 427-8644, or through the graduate office of the Psychology Department for more information.

Rugby, ‘father of football’

By William Bartsch, S.J.

What’s the roughest sport in the world today? Football, baseball, basketball or hockey? If you guessed any of those sports, you were wrong.

There’s a game that proper English gentlemen play called rugby. Americans usually take a game of rugby, or, better yet, played it, then turned to American football because it’s considered the roughest game in the world.

Rugby began in the early 1800’s in England, although the Rugby School. Eventually, leagues formed and a playing field in America discovered the game in the late 1800’s. It hasn’t changed much in those days between meets. It has found its way to the United States.

Rugby has a kick conversion, much like football but the rugby conversion is worth two points while the football conversion is worth only one point.

The SIU Rugby Club is in its second year of existence. According to Todd, the team is 3-1 last year, an excellent record considering the competition and the general inexperience of the team. The 1973 fall season begins Saturday with a match in Bloomington against a team from Iowa. The entire rugby schedule is not yet set. Skora, but the team intends to play at least as many games as last year. The SIU team plays two seasons, one in the fall and one in the spring.

There are 40 players out for the team this fall, but according to Skora, usually ten or so players quit or are injured and the final team consists of about 25.

If you have ever played rugby with the SIU team, after every game there are two kegs of beer waiting for the players and their opponents. So, after beating each other’s brains out for two or three hours the friendly combatants either celebrate a victory or drown in their sorrows.

Win or lose, it’s fun for both teams.
McAlley likely at quarterback

By Mark Tupper
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Although the final decision has not yet been made, Southern Illinois Athletic Director Tommy McNicholas said that if McAlley were to transfer, he would most likely be playing quarterback for the Salukis this season.

If McAlley does transfer, he would be eligible to play immediately.

Back at SIU, the quarterback battle is expected to be between junior Ed Dixon and sophomore Paul Sonnichsen.
