Invisible Harveys Cause Space Problems

"Harvey may be an invisible menace, but he has already done a lot of damage," said Harvey Jones. Jones, who has been studying the effects of Harvey on the production of the Mary Chase Comedy, "Harvey," said that the actor would be presented on television in the future.

"As far as staging and arranging the action of the play goes, Harvey is not much of a problem," said Miss Jones. "But his invisible nature can be a real challenge when it comes to keeping the audience interested." Jones plans to use a new technique in the play that will involve the use of a "shadow" Harvey to add some depth to the story.

"Tough Luck For Commercials"

Advisement, Sectioning Receive Complaints At Accounting Council Meeting

Two photos of SIU's registered students on the commercial center are shown in the newspaper's "Tough Luck for Commercials" column. The students were upset about the commercials being shown on the SIU campus.

A brief but intense discussion with the student council and the accounting council at the student council meeting Thursday night was held. The students expressed their concerns about the commercials being shown.

The students agreed that the commercials should be shown during "normal" hours and not during "late night" hours. The students also suggested that the commercials should be shown during "slow" time, not during "busy" time.

The student council agreed to the students' request and agreed to show the commercials during "normal" hours.

"It is unprofessional and off-putting for the commercials to be shown during "busy" hours," said one student.

"We are looking forward to the new commercials being shown during "normal" hours," said another student.

"The commercials will be shown during "normal" hours and not during "late night" hours," said the student council president.
