The Southern Illinois Finance Committee (SIFC) today announced a statement Monday denouncing and refusing to recognize the Blue Ribbon Finance Committee investigating the Center for Vietnamese Studies.

According to the statement, the existence of the panel "merely serves to mislead the Center." The panel, which was the subject of critical comment by interim chancellor Willie Malone, is scheduled to complete its work on the Center later this month.

The statement also attacked the "negligible potential for objectivity" of the panel, which is made up of some students and five faculty members (five students appointed to the panel, but two resigned and their replacements, appointed by the chancellor, sit instead of attending any of the meetings).

"All its (panel) faculty members are professionally involved with Center programs and charged that Nelson has publicly endorsed the Center," the statement read.

Faculty members on the panel are Willie Moore, chairman of the philosophy department; Nicholas Vergetta, professor of art; Nelson Randall, chairman of the government department; and C. Addison Hieb, professor of economics.

The statement criticized Nelson and Randall for being "professionally involved with Center programs and charged that Nelson has publicly endorsed the Center.

Other charges in the statement were:

1. The panel has not invited or discussed any of the students.
2. Student participation in the panel has been negligible with the exception of one graduate student.
3. The panel has heard approximately four hours of testimony by Center critics as opposed to 60 hours by proponents of the Center.
4. The panel heard testimony by proponents of the Center, Kelly, said when he and two other members of the SIFC tried to testify at panel hearings, they were saved for last and then given only a short time to talk.

"We Center critics were only given ten minutes to testify, and it was after several reports in which the panel had left the hearings," Kelly said.

He said that the costs of the Center, testifying that day, spoke for over 20 minutes.

Donatas M. Allen, a philosophy instructor, who is a member of SIFC, said that although the SIFC had long been critical of the Center, it waited until now to make its attack because of the "inertia that is the inevitable that some committee would buy into the idea.

"The turning point was the Nunn-Mellon Act, which is the decision we had to have a statement," Allen said.

The chairman of the SIFC told the Daily Egyptian last night that the statement was not to call for an audit or investigation of the Center, but to make SIU students and faculty members aware that panel's investigation was only "an attempt to mislead the Center more respectable."
Devotees to explain Krishna

Members of the Krishna Consciousness Movement will explain their form of worship and serve prasad, spiritual food, during appearances at SIU Tuesday through Thursday.

The Krishna devotees from their temple in Chicago will speak in Indian philosophy classes and appear at Browne Auditorium at 7 p.m. Their visit is sponsored by the Southern Illinois Peace Committee (SIPC).

Robert Kelley, a member of SIPC, said the religious sect practices a form of yoga called bhakti or devotional yoga.

Kelley said the feature lecturer will be Kripananda Swami, who has been to India several times. He will explain the tenets of the Krishna Consciousness Movement.

Prasad will be served to guests in honor of the Lord Krishna. The food consists of nuts, raisins, honey and fruit.

The devotees will also perform Satsang, the chanting of the Hare Krishna mantra or prayer.

Chanting of the mantra is designed to create a transcendent relationship with God. Krishna Consciousness is described by its followers as being the solution of serious nonviolent social change.

Can AID fund pure academia?

When Senator Charles Percy (R-Ill.) offered to arrange a meeting in Washington D.C. last quarter at which representatives from the Agency for International Development (AID), officials from the Center for U.S. Latin American Studies, and critics of the Senate could discuss the AID-SIU grant, the offer was accepted.

Such a meeting, no matter how short or incon- venient the time for SIU’s last minute cancellation, would have been worthwhile if only one question had been answered: Is AID legally authorized to fund a purely academic unit under Section 211 (d) of the 1966 Foreign Assistance Act?

Center officials might call such a question repetitive. As H.B. Jacobini, director of the Center, has a habit of saying, “The facts have been presented in a crystal clear fashion.” However, Center officials are still trying to make the facts clearer and are presently negotiating a restatement of the grant with AID in which the “purely academic research” aspects of the grant are emphasized.

But whether AID, regardless of restatement by SIU, can legally authorize funds for purely academic purposes has never been clearly answered.

The terms of AID grants, as set up by the United States Congress in 211 (d), states that the grant money is to be used “for the purpose of strengthening their [educational institution’s] capacity to develop and carry out programs concerned with economic and social development of less developed countries.”

With these terms in mind many SIU students and faculty members have questioned whether AID could legally support a purely academic Center.

Two United States senators have also stated similar views. In a letter to a graduate student in Asian studies, J. William Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, stated, “I seriously question, however, whether there was any intent to authorize assistance to universities for purely academic studies which are not directly related to, or intended to have application to foreign development programs.”

Percy, in a letter to an SIU professor, said, “According to AID, the grant is not a research grant” and he went on to quote the terms of the grant as set down by 211 (d).

The restatement, which Center officials seem to be anxious for AID officials to approve, emphasizes research and omit references to programs, training, technical assistance and other not purely academic activities which will be concerned with the “economic and social development of less developed countries.” Can AID legally accept this restatement?

If the senators’ letters can be any guideline, the facts are not as clear cut. Another meeting between AID representatives, Center officials, and Center students is scheduled to discuss this. The meeting should not be canceled.

U. School must stay open

As the Illinois Board of Higher Education continues to eye opportunities for further fund cutbacks. University officials may be a target for closing doors. Reasons for the possible closing include high operating costs of the school and the fact that the school is no longer used very much for student teaching.

But there are many more reasons why the school should not close. The school is a valuable vehicle for many, experimental educational programs that cannot be carried out in public schools. If the school closes, SIU educational researchers may be forced to abandon many of these programs.

The importance of educational research is more immediately clear than ever. Chasing University School would be a loss to the College of Education at SIU and to the educational researchers who study the school.

Further, don’t look at me or any other person for an idiosyncratic example. Excepting Chasing, there is only a narrow margin between the worst man who ever lived and the best one. Any group or organization that is based on the integrity of a mortal being, whether Karl Marx or George Wallace, has little true merit.

Nothing irks me more than the thousands of people who gladly accept the benefits of Christian morals, which have through the years brought about every social change for the better, and then don’t support in the slightest way any church groups.

Where do people suppose the ideas of right and wrong and decency and equality have come from? Do they think that, like Toppy, they “just grew up”? Think again.

Letters to the editor

Attacks of Christianity bring letter of defense

To the Daily Egyptian:
At the risk of being thought a lunatic, or a do gooder, I am moved to reply to some of the bitter, hostile attacks on Christianity that have appeared on these pages.

First of all, what harm has Christianity done you? None, I dare say. The teachings of Christ are purely positive. Love, charity, kindness and truth are not against any group, person or organization, except such as are set against these virtues.

You may, through the eyes of history, charge the Catholic Church, or Methodist, or whatever, or any member thereof, with certain crimes against humanity. But this would be due to lack of Christian virtues, not evil.

Jesus Christ might easily be called an early day Hippie’s, although he德尔 into none of the immoral doings of today’s generation.

But don’t take my word for it. Pick up any New Testament and read for yourself. Put your mind where your mouth is.

As for certain high flown agnostics, the only thing sorrier than a dull fool is a brilliant one. Wisdom is not synonymous with brilliance.

Further, don’t look at me or any other person for an idiosyncratic example. Excepting Christ, there is only a narrow margin between the worst man who ever lived and the best one. Any group or organization that is based on the integrity of a mortal being, whether Karl Marx or George Wallace, has little true merit.

Nothing irks me more than the thousands of people who gladly accept the benefits of Christian morals.

Hecklers at Ware talk shame fellow student

To the Daily Egyptian:
It is really a shame that in the University community, where there are so many opportunities and means for communication on an adult level, some people still feel compelled to resort to childish rudeness to express themselves.

I speak primarily in reference to the immature, impolite and inconsiderate hecklers at the Mitchell Ware speech last Thursday night, who prevented those of us who wanted to hear him speak from doing so.

No matter what your political beliefs, no matter whether you agree with the man or not, Mr. Ware was an invited guest and it would have been only common courtesy to let him out.

I am ashamed to now be in the position of having to write Mr. Ware a letter apologizing for the ill- mannered snobbery of my fellow students.

Will cliches greet new year?

The Student Senate meeting Wednesday night will be the first of winter quarter and of 1971. The legislative body will probably greet the New Year with the usual cliches. Cold stairs, high hopes and renewed efforts will be called for by some executive or senator. Token words perhaps, but occasionally the speaker actually believes in what he's saying.

One can only hope that the Senate's New Year resolutions, be they public or privately made, are more than warmed-over good intentions from 1970. Visible progress is needed if the Senate wishes to retain whatever credibility and responsibility it has.

The failure of the passage of the 18-year-old vote in the 1969 legislative session was on the minds of those SIU students running for Carbondale city offices.

The three students—Nick Fera, Bob Thomas and Roger Leitner—all professed in December that they would not seek for blue votes in the April election, but instead work to gain their campaigns at all the citizens of Carbondale.

The vote of students between the ages of 18 and 21 would have helped in an election race which includes students. Certainly Fera and Thomas realized this, as they have both worked on the 18-year-old vote issue and voter registration in Carbondale.

It is unfortunate and unfair that a large number of students will not be able to participate in the April voting. Still, the removal of students under 21 as potential voters may force the three SIU candidates to re-examine the situation and really try to represent the entire community of Carbondale.

A bill passed by the Student Senate to investigate "the administrative responsibilities of the Daily Egyptian" is being actively worked upon—and the Senate should be commended. Jim Stortum, Thompson Point senator, is a member of the Students Rights and Responsibilities Committee to which the bill was delegated. Stortum has spent much time discussing the Daily Egyptian policies with staff members and faculty in the School of Journalism.

His questions have been perceptive and directed at people who have varying views on the Daily Egyptian. There have been several bills in the Senate to study the Egyptian's operation but this is the first time a senator has actually come to the source. Stortum will report to the Senate in the near future.

Results from the retests of his study—and it will be a well documented investigation—showed that Ralph Nader may be coming to Illinois—SIU included—in the near future.

A steering committee for the Illinois Public Interest Research Group (1-PIRG) was set up well organized by-laws and is seeking recognition as a University organization from the Student Senate. Their representatives, who are at SIU in November, said there was an excellent opportunity that Nader would speed here if a group such as the 1-PIRG became organized.

They also stressed the point that the students themselves would have to initiate and organize the group. The I-PIRG could become a working reality with continued good efforts.

From May to Old Main

'Most eventful year is 1970's label

By University News Services

In many ways it may have been the most eventful months in SIU's 60-year history.

The year 1970 will be remembered as one scarred by violent protest but also distinguished for far-reaching actions in University management, planning for the future and student affairs.

The aftermath of a week-long series of disturbances in May was a shutdown of classes for the rest of the spring and a summer of introspection by students and faculty members alike.

A revising student conduct code and restated policy on campus disorders clearly upheld the right of peaceful dissent and the parallel right of the campus community to "go about their business without interference."

Throughout the early summer, faculty-staff teams from the Carbondale campus met with parent groups throughout the state in an effort to share the "Six Days in May" and what steps were being taken to avoid a repeat. At the same time, on the campus itself, students and teachers groped with issues that seemed to point to a need for clearer ties across the whole fabric of undergraduate experience.

When the fall term opened, SIU at Carbondale counted an enrollment of resident students—still another campus record—and when it ended three months later there had been no harmful demonstrations.

Controversy over construction of an executive residence and guest house led in part to a new administrative organization styled along the lines of corporate management.

The office of the president was eliminated and the SIU Board of Trustees acquired its own professional leadership. A University Administrative Council and systems vice presidents for the two campuses fleshed out the organizational structure while students and Carbondale and Edwardsville chancellorsshers were given expanded responsibilities pointing to the growing autonomy of the two campuses.

Robert MacVicar, chancellor of SIU at Carbondale for two years, resigned in June to become president of Oregon State University. He was succeeded by Willis Malone, longtime administrator and educator who retired from the job on an "acting" basis. In September he asked for relief and was replaced by Robert Lyster, professor of economics. One of Lyster's first acts was an official memorandum to the effect that if disorders broke out anew, the campus would remain open "until the extent humanity permits."

The search for a permanent chancellor had reached final interview stage by year's end.

By the end of the year, the results of studies on SIU governance brought out a proposal for a campus senate—a body that would include representation by faculty, staff and students. It is to be voted on in January.

Lester, like Malone and MacVicar before him, continued to push for tighter student-faculty communication at the undergraduate level. He appointed Thomas Cassidy, a popular English professor, to put together an evaluation program that would pave the way for promotion and pay rewards for those rated tops in the classroom.

SIU at Carbondale completed a preliminary 10-year academic growth plan that proposed new academic units in such fields as human resources and the environmental studies. It also projected the addition of a largest number of faculty courses, more teacher-student contact and increased emphasis on "conceptual, rather than factual information."

Increased costs of running a university became a major matter of concern in 1970. In-state students jumped twice and a 400 per student increase in out-of-state residents began in the 1971 winter term. Room and board rates at all University housing went up and the insurance premium on campus cars jumped 100 percent.

A new set of programs for 1970 included a department of linguistics and a bachelor's degree program in the administration of justice.

Two new buildings went into service during the year—stage two of the James W. Neckers Physical Science Building and massive structure for research and graduate studies in biological sciences (Life Science II).

Not far behind, headline-wise, was the departure of successful SIU basketball coach Jack Hartman (NIT championship, 1969) to Kansas State. Suceeding him was Paul Lambert of Hardin-Simmons, who immediately introduced a high-speed, rapid-fire style that perturbed new Arena attendance records.

Gov. Richard Ogilvie released funds for a $13 million Humanities-Social Sciences Building on the Carbondale campus and a classroom-office building that will be the first permanent academic structure at SIU's Vandalia-Taylorville campus.

The new Medical School campus at Springfield got $3 million for classroom-laboratory construction. But its major step forward in 1970 was the signing of affiliation agreements with the two Springfield hospitals that will make up its clinical training base—St. John's and Memorial.

The year's biggest news in athletics probably was SIU's linkup with a new five-school Conference of Midwest Universities, a move that ended eight years of independence. Other CMI schools are Ball State, Indiana State, Illinois State and Northern Illinois.

Going into the winter term, three other projects were near completion and others were moving along in the Eastern Illinois Research Center. A new building for the agricultural research offices was put in place on the Sangamon site. A large greenhouse and a new theological college in the sciences were due to be completed before the end of the year.

Interfraternity Council begins rush Tuesday

Member groups of the SIU Interfraternity Council (IFC) will begin rush from 8-11 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday. The IFC fraternities operate an open rush where individual groups may rush anytime during the quarter. Tuesday and Wednesday were set as common dates for all the member groups to hold open houses.

In order to pledge an IFC fraternity, a student must have a 2.0, overall grade point average and must not be a member of another national social fraternity.

SIU's IFC fraternities include: Alpha Epsilon Pi, Alpha Gamma Rho, Alpha Kappa Lambda, Delta Chi, Delta Upsilon, Phi Kappa Tau, Phi Sigma Kappa, Sigma Pi, Sigma Tau Gamma, Tau Kappa Epsilon and Theta Xi.

Students wanting more information may contact the Office for Fraternities and Sororities, 1869 S. Oak, at 453-5718.

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By Jim Simpson

Here's an oddity from pro football. In the last 4 seasons, the Dallas Cowboys have won more games than any other team in the National Football League—and yet, despite winning more games than anyone else, Dallas has never won the league championship!

Did you know that, oddly enough, there was once a team in the National Football League that NEVER played a home game? In 1948, the league created a team known as the Los Angeles Buccaneers, but that team never played in Los Angeles and played all its games on the road. And despite never playing a home game, that team still finished with a good record of 6 wins, 2 losses and a tie.

Few fans know that pro golfer Dave Stockton, who won the PGA golf championship this year, has to use a very unconventional golf swing. Because one of his legs is shorter than the other due to a childhood accident—he has to raise his body slightly as he hits the ball to get his right arm through on the swing. Oddly enough, here's a man with a physical handicap who can play golf better than thousands of people who have no physical problem at all.

I bet you didn't know that college graduates have a longer life expectancy — longer death rates and are living five years longer on the average than non-college sons. The lower death rate of college sons makes possible broader benefits and greater cash values in College Life policies. This certainly makes good sense, doesn't it?

Suspect wounded by Chicago police

Chicago police Saturday wounded and captured James Brewton in connection with the Sept. 20 shooting of Carbondale patrolman Larry Davis.

Brewton, 26, of Chicago, was shot in the neck on Chicago's South Side after pulling a pistol and firing five shots at police who had attempted to question him and a companion, according to patrolmen Sidney Hill and Connie Anderson.

The patrolmen said that they fired eight shots at Brewton. They said his companion escaped. Brewton was reported in good condition Monday.

Brewton was charged in Jackson County with attempted murder when he allegedly wounded Davis when the officer stopped a car to question the occupants about a kidnapping, with which Brewton is also charged.

Other Jackson County charges against Brewton include aggravated battery and theft of more than $150.

Brewton allegedly was involved in the theft of $300 from the service desk at Trueblood Hall in University Park. He was indicted by a grand jury July 16 and released on $7,000 bond, which he is charged with jumping.

Art Festival successful displaying Black talent

By John D. Towns
Daily Egyptian Special Writer

The Kappa Alpha Psi Black Arts Festival reached a climax Saturday when students from the SIU Performing Arts Training Center, in East St. Louis, lead the audience through African songs and chants.

The festival, is held each year to give black students an opportunity to display their talents, which consist of paintings, sculpture, music, poetry readings and Afro-American songs.

Drummers from Katherine Dunham's dance troupe, Mar Thiam, Zakaraya Diodof and Earl DeFousen, accented verses by poets Joel Price and Ron Tibbs. Price and Tibbs recited poetry written by Langston Hughes as well as poetry they had written.

Percussionists Thiam and Diodof played African songs and explained their importance. The audience participated in a call and response song which Thiam led preceded by a demonstration of Afro-Cuban rhythms by DeFousen.

The three drummers performed at the White House Conference on Youth in Washington in December.

Art was exhibited by Ben Burton, photographs by Ron Scott, and paintings by Pat

SIU man studies deer herds in three states

The successful survival of a herd of European deer now prospering in Kentucky's Land-Between-the-Lakes area is the subject of a two year study by the Cooperative Wildlife Research Laboratory at SIU.

Under a research grant of $15,500 from the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA), the lab will examine habitat relationships, population dynamics, ecology and social aspects contributing to the success of the deer in the 10,000 acre area, said Willard Klimstra, director of the lab.

The Kentucky herd numbering about 1000 has grown from 20 fallow deer originally released with 20 native white-tailed deer in 1950 on the old Kentucky Woodland National Wildlife Refuge.

"This is the largest established population of fallow deer in the states," said Bob Hawkins, staff assistant to Klimstra. Attempts to establish the deer in Maryland, West Virginia, Texas, and Nebraska have been largely unsuccessful.

"Most of these are penned environments," said Hawkins, although the preservation environment is maintained in enclosures like those in the Argonne National Laboratory in Ill. which support some small herds.

The fallow deer are recognized by their long tail, stubby legs and antlers resembling the elk. Hawkins said the deer are adaptable and "more of a grazing deer than the native area deer."

Hawkins said releasing the deer immediately into a protected wildlife refuge environment at first was in part responsible for their success.

The TVA study is the latest in a number of studies of deer life conducted by the SIU lab.

Klimstra's field team has compiled an extensive library of books and photographs on the native white-tailed deer population at the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge.

The lab conducted an extensive examination three years ago of Florida's pygmy Key Deer, once near extinction.

Elaborate equipment such as miniature radio tracking devices used to study deer in Illinois and Florida will be used to research the TVA project.

Other tools include tranquilizer dart-guns, fluorescent collars, traps, plastic ear-tag streamers and remotely activated motion picture cameras.

Photos by Nelson G. Brooks and the SIU Cooperative Wildlife Research Laboratory.

This white-tail buck is one of the deer which have been studied in Southern Illinois. The study was conducted on the Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge and is similar to ones conducted in the Between-the-Lakes area of Kentucky and in Florida.

W. D. Klimstra holds a key deer fawn, one of the varieties of deer he and his staff studied.

This key deer buck wears a radio transmitter on a collar which enables researchers to find the deer in their habitat. The researchers follow the signal emitted from the radio.

The key deer is one of several varieties which SIU's Cooperative Wildlife Research Center is studying. The key deer is a small animal rarely weighing more than 100 pounds when fully grown. This yearling doe is only 27 inches tall.
Winter maladies are many

NEW YORK (AP) — Do you feel like you've been struck by a virus lately? You might be right.

Many hypochondriacs do. They feel limited by having nothing to complain about except the sniffles, the common cold, the flu, the 24-hour virus, the flu and walking pneumonia. There is a sameness about their symptoms that makes them dull and commonplace.

Actually, however, the hypochondriacs are wrong. If they would but lift their vision, they would find winter filled with a host of interesting maladies one can catch and brag about to his neighbors. Probably you have some and don't even know it.

For example:

To begin with, do you feel overwhelmed by snow? Well, there, already you're a victim of a fine old ailment. Your psychiatrist—he's been to his medical dictionary lately—would call it chionophobia, or fear of snow.

Now it's not the snow that bothers you as much as does the chilly weather that goes with it. Wrap yourself in a woolen blanket. You know what you've come down with: a cold.

And if you hesitate to drink hot toddy, it may also have diphasophobia, the fear of alcoholic beverages.

Sometimes the weather is so bad a wife feels stirbound because she can't get out to run her usual errands. She has either domastaphobia, the fear of being in a house, or taphophobia, the fear of being buried alive. And if her kids are also confined and seem even un­derfoot, she probably also has a sad case of pedophobia, or fear of children.

These are but a few of the commonplace winter affections. There are ever so many more to pick and choose from.

Such as:

Twilight comes early and may lead to either achiphobia or nyctophobia, both of which mean a fear of darkness. Outside storms assail the creeping home and can lead to the development of anemophobia, the fear of winds, as well as pho­bophobia, the fear of noise.

These outside storms are sometimes matched by inside storms of the spirit. People feel depressed and worry about nameless terures which the arrival of spring dissipates. But until then they are held in the vincible grip of polyphobia, the fear of many things.

Visitors are usually few in January, February and March, so you usually can't blame anyone, as if he comes down with monophobia, the fear of being alone, or a variety of the same malady autophobia, the dread of solitude.

Refresher course set for engineer examinees

A 12-week refresher course for professional engineering examinees will be offered nightly at SIU, starting Tuesday, Jan. 26.

The course, to consist of lecture and problem-solving sessions, is designed to review significant areas of background subject matter for the engineering graduate or practicing planning to take the Illinois professional engineering examination. Members of the Illinois Tech­nology engineering faculty will teach.

Sessions will be held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. in Room 108, D Wing, Technology Building. Enrollment is limited to 25 per­sons. Fees of $5 should accompany the registration form to the University Extension Services on the Carbondale campus before Jan. 22, so textbooks can be mailed before the first class. Checks should be made payable to SIU.

Tryouts for new play will be held this week

The Department of Speech will hold tryouts for a new theatrical production at 7 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday at the Caligre Stage in the Com­munications Building, accor­ding to Joseph Robinette, an instructor in the department.

The title of the new play is "The Trumpet of the New Moon," a musical play according to Robinette.

He said the play is based on Yachel Lindsay's book "A Handy Guide for Beggars" and "Adventures While Preaching the Gospel of Beauty."

The book and lyrics for the new production were written by Robinette. The music was written by Tom Tierney.

Actors or singers are asked to bring one or two vocal arrangements for audition material. Redeker said there are several nonsinging parts in the play.

Vets against the war meeting to discuss purpose, elections

Vets Against the War (VAV) will hold an organizational meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Room 404 of the Neches Building.

Scott C. Miller, co-chairman of the organization, said the meeting will be held to elect of­ficers, to acquaint the general public and especially veterans and reservists with the pur­poses of the organization.

Fall Deans’ List cites

3,355 undergraduates

By University News Services

A total of 3,355 undergraduates have been posted to the fall quarter Deans’ List for academic achievement at SIU.

The figure represents 18 per cent of the undergraduate student body enrollment at Carbondale.

Students are cited if they achieve a quarterly grade point average of 4.0 or better on the 5.0 scale. They must have taken at least 12 hours of class work during the term.

Work glamour is telling

LONDON (AP) — Nearly half of the working population of southeast London travel out of the city to work where they have identical jobs on their doorstep in an industrial organization. A spokesman said that although working in the city added glamour to jobs, rising travel costs cancelled out any wage difference.

'Pothounds' sniff marijuana out of hiding at Marine base

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — The Marine Corps is creating the keen noses of a pack of trained German shepherd dogs with making marijuana less a problem on this largest of military amphibious bases.

Some 300 K-9s have been charged with marijuana possession, the base says, because the dogs sniffed out caches of the forbidden stuff. The specially trained animals patrol barracks, offices, gates and even travel at times to other bases.

One dog, Rebel, once detected 53 ounces at a single sniffing. Another, Doc, detected 50 ounces inside a footlocker.

"It was as if Doc had radar," Sgt. Robert E. Davis said. "We stepped into a squad bay and the minute I unsnapped the leash, Doc went directly to the footlocker and started pawing.

The program began in September last year, and a base spokesman said it has been a big success reducing the flow of the narcotic onto the base. As a result, five officers and 20 enlisted men have been suspended so far.

The dogs cost $1,000 each and undergo three months of special training to detect the characteristic odor of marijuana.

The animals are on duty almost daily, but at irregular times. Handlers take them to barracks when unit commanders request them. Sometimes they are taken to the post office to sniff packages.

They regularly turn up at the six entry gates, where a sentry assigns them to sniff suspicious-looking cars.

On a surprise visit to the Marine base at Twentynine Palms, Calif., the dogs detected marijuana in 36 cars.

College of Education to experiment with self-advisement spring quarter

The College of Education will begin self-advisement on an experimental basis with preregistration for spring quarter.

Self-advisement is scheduled for 8:45 a.m. and 1:45 p.m. Jan. 18-19 in Room 119 of Wham Education Building. Regular admission appointments will also be available.

To be eligible for self-registration, a student must bring a signed senior checklist. He must be in good standing.

Art institute buys work of weaver

Ruth Clamberg, assistant professor in the School of Art at SIU, has been notified that the Art Institute of Chicago has purchased one of her watercolors for its permanent collection.

The work, entitled "Yellow Fursuit," is a double woven landscape, executed in silk, linen and wool.

Miss Clamberg, who heads the weaving program at SIU, has had four one-man shows of her work and has participated in several national group shows of weaving.

Wools wins all-around twice
Gymnasts top North Carolina, Memphis

North Carolina University learned a couple of things last Friday evening. They are: A) You don't build a championship gymnastics program in three years and, B) coach Bill Meade has come a long, long way since he finished at Chapel Hill 16 years ago.

Meade's gymnastics, paced by all-around men Nick Woolf and Tom Lindner, downed North Carolina 182.48-112.15 Friday and slipped to a rather unimpressive 181.75-149.60 win against Missouri Valley Conference champ Memphis State, Saturday.

Wools won the all-around championship in both meets, overshadowing Olympic pacesetter Lindner both times, 52.79 at North Carolina and 48.2 against Memphis State.

Judo show tonight

The SIU jude team will put on an exhibition at 8 p.m. tonight in the main dining room of Gymnani Hall.

The team, composed of men and women, will demonstrate the theory of maximum efficiency with optimum use of energy, by showing powerful throwing, grappling and self-defense techniques.

Sponsored by the fourth floor in Schneider Hall, the demonstration is open to all university students, staff and faculty.

Five members brought three first-place trophies and one third-place trophy back from a jude tournament Saturday at Piarrator Valley Community College in St. Louis.

Henry Armetta captured the men's brown belt division trophy while brother Paul wrapped up the black belt title.

In the women's division, Laura Purman took first place while Linda Galloway finished third.

Ouch! Salukis lose again, 102-83

Paul Lambert tried a new combination Saturday night but the results were the same as the Salukis were slaughtered 102-83 by the Lamar Tech Cardinals in Raymond, Tex., dropping SIU's record to 3-4.

The first-year coach made an unexpected lineup change, starting Mike Hessick in front of Stan Powles.

But Hessick couldn't bottle the big boys and early in the first half Powles came into the game and had a night scoring 16 points and grabbing 14 rebounds. Ten of those points came on free throws while three of four field goals were on long jump shots.

Powles' 16 points tied him with the Cardinals' Elton Hayes who didn't start either but was an early substitute for Lamar's Kirby Collins.

It's unfortunate that Powles' best performance of the season was wasted because while he seems to be maturing, the remainder of the team can't find the basket.

Chris Hassert of the University of Michigan is off and running in the 200 yard hurdles at the Salukis last Thursday night. Hassert's time of 1.56.0 set a new meet record as the Wolverines whipped the Salukis 58-66. (Photo by Fred Flicker)

Wrestlers can NIU, Moorehead on road

The Salukis went on to capture their third straight meet by defeating both the Salukis and Moorehead.

The SIU wrestlers doubled their pleasure and doubled their fun this weekend as they rolled to triumphs over Missouri State College and Northern Illinois University.

For the Salukis, it was a beautiful weekend but for the Dragons and Huskies, it was a nightmare as they could only defeat SIU once. That lone victory came when freshman Bob Blanda lassoed a 42-2 decision over Peter Engel in the 167 pound weight class. Outside of that the Salukis ran away with the meet posting six wins and four decisions on their way to the lopsided victory.

On Saturday night the scene shifted to Dekalb but the script remained the same as the Salukis downs a previously unbeaten Northern Illinois University team 24-11.

The Huskies had beaten conference opponents North Dakota, Ball State 25-0 and Wisconsin State at Whitewater 25-5 but it didn't matter to the Salukis as Lonn Long's men rolled to their second victory of the weekend.

Unlike Moorehead State, NIU proved no patsy as Huskie wrestlers scored wins over Dell Rhodes, Don Stumpf and Mark Samolis.

Faculty Council okays change in GPA graduation regulations

By Larry Haley

The Faculty Council approved recommendations Tuesday to change the under-graduate grade point average for graduation requirements. The faculty memo also recommended that grade point averages transferred from other colleges and universities be used in determining students' calculated grade point average. However, transfer students will still be admitted to the University on probation, but will be required to earn a 3.0 average by the end of the quarter in which they request admission on probation until he has earned a total of 12 quarter hours. Soderstrom added.

The SIU Bulletin states the council approved the recommendation to consider transfer students who do not meet this requirement for graduation. He also said the recommendation was accepted by the council at the end of the academic year, thus effective for the next academic year.

In a parallel proposal to transferred grade point average, Soderstrom said, the committee also recommended that grade point averages for under-graduate graduations be modified so that "Each student must have an overall C average and a C average in the area of concentration." Currently, students must have a C average and grades not lower than a C in all course work, Soderstrom pointed out.

Further proposals made by the committee to the Faculty Council included a proposal to change the requirements for the second bachelor's degree. Soderstrom recommended that students desiring a second bachelor's degree must complete 48 hours in addition to those required for the first degree and must fulfill the requirements for the second degree. Of these 48 hours, a minimum of 16 must be taken at the University. Soderstrom also recommended that a student receive a second bachelor's degree from another university, however, the recommendation was not accepted.

If a student received his first bachelor's degree from another university, however, the recommendation was not accepted.

Brewton faces murder charge

Cairo III (AP) - Alexander County officials today issued a murder warrant for the arrest of James P. Brewton, 29, of Chicago in connection with the Nov 7 shooting of Wiley Anderson of Cairo.

Brewton, a former SIU student, has been charged in Jackson County for the shooting of Carbondale policeman Larry Davis in September. Brewton has also been charged with armed robbery in connection with a hold-up during the summer at Trublood Hall in University Park.

Jackson County State's Attorney Richard Richman said Brewton will be charged with murder and robbery in connection with the shooting in Cairo.

Anderson, 21, was home on leave from the military at the time he was shot. He was removed from local hospitals to Denver in order to be placed in a military hospital.

Brewton is suffering from a drug addiction and was last seen in Chicago.

Brewton was charged with attempted murder and possession of a stolen weapon in connection with the Cairo shooting.

The warrant issued today is signed by a state police investigator who has been investigating the death of Anderson.
