WIDB to feature interviews

The new student radio station, WIDB, which broadcasts from University Park, will feature taped interviews with Don Allen, an opponent of the Veterans' Study Center; Dizzy Gillespie, a jazz musician; and Herb Kent of WYON radio in Chicago at 11 p.m. Saturday.

The weekly show, entitled "Buildy Buffet," is three hours of entertainment which incorporates taped interviews with local newsmaking personalities and celebrities visiting the SIU campus.

According to Charles Merren, public relations director

Sunday buffet set

A special Mother's Day buffet will be available from 11:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the University Center, Roman Room.

The menu offers a choice of three meats, four vegetables, six salads, four desserts and beverages. The price for adults is $2.25 and $1 for children.

Paychecks issued outside of Woody

Paychecks for student workers will be given out Monday on the patio of the bursar's office at Woody Hall, according to John Bateau, office supervisor.

This location will be used until fall. In the event of rain, paychecks will be distributed inside the building, he said.

Violent protests threaten society

Past history, especially European history, has proven that if men are forced to choose between freedom and security, they will choose freedom every time.

The University of Illinois is a democracy, and students at universities around the country, may very well be forcing us to make that decision soon.

When a university or college student, or an association of students for that matter, engages in violent protest, he is necessarily threatening not only the security of his school, but also the very security of the society as a whole.

When the security of an individual is threatened, he generally responds with some type of defensive tactics. Universities and colleges will surely respond similarly if violence continues, even if it means limiting the freedom that now exists on campuses.

If violent demonstrations continue to rock campuses, might not some of the divisions of all types be outlawed? It may mean imposing serious limitations on the individual freedom of speech and press. It would also mean securing the safety of the university community.

Freedom of speech is a delicate thing, and unless it is very carefully controlled, there is no way for it to be maintained and used to have the two characterizations that are essential to it. Good will come out of it, and education and more education, such a choice need never be made.

Campus parties vital to programs

To The Daily Egyptian:

The student body in elections this year have shown how the presidency can be purchased by saturating the campus with posters, pamphlets, and alliances. With the enthusiasm and absurdity of a glorified pledge campaign, Mr. Scherchel has won the race using the tuition hike for his main promise and strategy.

Although the tuition increase was lowered the day of the election, Mr. Scherchel nevertheless was elected pointing out the student senate's support for the vote in the voter's minds. When given the opportunity to reiterate the platform he was elected on, Mr. Scherchel failed to do so for fear of "undermining" the present administration's programs.

Yet, in the same sense didn't Mr. Scherchel's platform, vague as it was, help to undermine the present administration? Was his platform any different? If not, why did Mr. Scherchel run?

And what of the promises made by the various parties, to the students? Mr. Scherchel has stated that party affiliations must be "left at the door" or impeachments "will pelt.

I would like to remind Mr. Scherchel that the faction, action, and unity parties have a majority of the senate seats, but also that senatorial candidates ran under party banners because they believed in that party's programs. Are you asking, Mr. Scherchel, that these senators leave their programs and ideas at the door?

If you are trying to remove politics from the campus, as you claim, Mr. Scherchel, you are doomed to failure. It is a necessity that you, as a senator, vote to the programs of the campus. While one senator describes Woodstock as an example of the "protest," I label you as one of the "promoters of the protest." I am happy to discover that we were both elected to the Democratic party, and believe the National Convention, a gathering of the KKK or SDS, or a major invasion of Illinois.

Staid attitudes kill May Day Fest

To the Daily Egyptian:

The May Day Fest in Carbondale is dead. It has been killed by a faction of a community and, indeed, a state whose highest concern is not an invasion, but public relations—whose greatest goal seems not to be the encouragement of free expression, but the maintenance of status quo pragmatism.

Within the memory—and, in fact, between the collective members who somehow managed to leave the mentality of the nineteenth century behind—this is the first event on such a scale that might have introduced innovation and imagination to Southern Illinois. More significantly, the May Day Fest might well have contributed toward overcoming those stifling limitations that a well-meaning but false sense of propriety has presumed to impose upon anything even vaguely resembling the new.

Yet for the many who would participate and seek some form of expression and enjoyment, there are those few who, terrified by the chibers of change, would fall back upon the old and familiar values and demand that age—its tattered coverall—must have the last say. For the many who would celebrate exuberance, there are those few who, secure in their smugness, would dig condescendingly in their gardens of absolute boredom.

For the many there is still youth and the hope for change. For those few who have pyrrhically defended Audion Meadows from us, from those who so sanctimoniously refer to as "the cesspools of humanity," there remains the fact of their lives—the insensitive, the insensate, the inane.

Finally, there are those myopic authorities who would regulate communication—would ultimately deny the Constitutionally guaranteed right of free enterprise on the

Resident opposes fest, any major 'invasion'

To the Daily Egyptian:

That has been my regard to Mr. Lowell Natzliger's letter of May 1.

If "narrow-mindedness" implies that one is opposed to having a portion of the countryside overrun as L. Ilkey described the Florida, then I am, indeed, as I have described Woodstock, I qualify as being a narrow-minded Southern Illinoisan.

But, as I said in my former letter, I would be just as unhappy to discover that we were to host such an invasion. Let me quote the University National Convention, a gathering of the KKK or SDS, or a major invasion of Illinois.

Tuition raise will hurt students and others

To the Daily Egyptian:

An open letter to John W. McCarter Jr., Director of the Illinois Bureau of the Budget.

We would like to know who is the "primary beneficiary" of higher education? Is it the individual attending a university at present or is it the countless numbers who will come into contact with college educated people in the future?

The objectives of the college students are to attempt to solve many of the contemporary problems straining society. The major apparatus needed to attain these answers is education, and to receive the education, financial assistance is necessary.

An increase in tuition could only cause many college bound prospects to alter their plans. This new rate will also prohibit students currently on meager assistance programs and those on strictly budgeted personal income from attaining their scholastic degrees.

In an effort to prevent the reduction of the state's need for education, let us explore you and your colleagues in Springfield to reconsider the improper budgeting of the University of Illinois, a National Convention, a gathering of the KKK or SDS, or a major invasion of Illinois.

Mother pleads to President

To the Daily Egyptian:

The following letter was written to the President of the United States May 4.

My dear Mr. President:

As a voting citizen of this great country, and as a member of the most peaceful and law-abiding part of the country, I am writing to you in your own behalf as Mr. President.

I am writing to you in your own behalf as a citizen and as a parent.

My heart bleeds, Mr. President, for you as a politician, but for the thousands of parents who have it in the future for their children.

To me, your most truthful statement was that you were risking becoming a one-term president. I know you as a man and as a father.

My generation recalls World War II and had my son given his life in such a war, my consolation would have been that I was protecting this country and his sacrifice would have been for a purpose.

In searching, I still fall to see the justification for training young men in the science of mass warfare and to perpetuate their social consciousness.

I cannot understand that you have chosen a militant method of removing the program from campus. By utilizing this action, you are in error on two points.

The Reserve Officer Training Corp is protected by the same constitutional rights as any other organization, be it leftist, pacifist or right wing. The 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution insures equal protection of laws and due process of these laws for all persons.

The Bill Of Rights allows ROTC members to voice their ideology and to assemble as much as it guarantees these rights to the Coalition or SDS.

The second point of error is the way in which the students have chosen to remove the ROTC, this being by force. The legal and legal way would be for no young men to volunteer for the outfit, thus the eventual liquidation of the program.

Militant demands and actions against this institution only shows the narrow-mindedness and the double standards of contemporary new left organizations within our nation will occur, but when there are legal means available, they must be used.

Dollar dissent

To the Daily Egyptian:

Dissent is good. It brings change and allows views to be aired. In violent dissent and name calling the only way to dissent is evidently students here and everywhere think this. When words fail, I suppose actions prevail. But in violent dissent the only action that shall prevail.

Why hasn’t anyone thought of just not supporting the institution. If enough people really feel the universities don’t listen or respond to the people, why not cut the institution’s power to function. I refer to the economic factor. If the students cut tuition and fees, the institutions would be stricken and would soon listen and motivate change in the students’ direction.

It seems students are the hypocrites who support the universities and their functions with their dollars and then kick when paused.

If you are really behind your convictions, take the power away from the institutions and they’ll listen.

Don’t shout so loud and be so right that you don’t hear other views and other solutions.

Writer says one war, not two in progress

To the Daily Egyptian:

Some say “The people voted for Nixon so we could go out of this war, now we are involved in two wars instead of one.”

Contrary to popular opinion, there is only one war in progress, it’s called Communism vs. Capitalism, and it’s a tight one to the finish line.

Let’s be realistic. Two ideologies that are totally separate and distinct when the basis for one is the destruction of the other.

Coed sick of revolutionaries

To the Daily Egyptian:

I’ve been one of the “Silent Majority” for perhaps much too long. I’ve got something to say, and I feel I have to say it now. I’m sick of so-called self-styled “revolutionaries” and their followers—not because of their beliefs and their programs, I’m sick of them because they talk about “freedom” and yet they don’t mind infringing upon the rights of others. I’ll just cite a few examples. These people don’t mind smashing the windows in the ROTC building, but yet, they talk about peace. They say they are against killing and war. I’ll just leave it there.

When the people have an “All-American” Day parade, there were a number of “Anglo-Americans” who marched carrying the flag of a Communist nation. This didn’t disturb the young observant cliques at parade participants. And I doubt that anybody could have gotten to Norris Library—that is if somebody had wanted to study, I could go on about these incidents and similar incidents before today’s happenings.

After all this, now, I’ll come out and say my piece. I value my freedom as an American. All of us are endowed with these freedoms, and we should use them and not abuse them. If someone of you don’t understand what I’m saying, then your ideas of freedom must be pretty warped, and I pity you, if you think this place is so bad, go to the Iron Curtain countries where being an outspoken intellectual can get you in a mental asylum. If you think the cops are bad here, try living there where you don’t know who is your friend or who is your enemy. Anybody can be an informer there and you probably die very, very fast.

Instead of raising hell about the Cambodian thing or the four students killed at Kent State, consider where you get your information and recollections. I don’t blame the saying my father once handed to me, “It takes six of one and half a dozen of the other.” Nobody is entirely right or wrong. After all we are only human. Why not just start with yourself, get to know yourself, you should be an individual. Then, when you do with that, practice what you preach—your government doesn’t agree with all your beliefs. Okay?

ROTC opponents use wrong protest method

To the Daily Egyptian:

This past week there have been numerous verbal and physical attacks on the ROTC on this and other campuses. The major argument against this institution is that it trains young men in the science of mass warfare and thus perpetuates their social consciousness. These attacks against ROTC have chosen a militant method of removing the program from campus. By utilizing this action, they are in error on two points.

The Reserve Officer Training Corp is protected by the same constitutional rights as any other organization, be they leftist, pacifist or right wing. The 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution insures equal protection of laws and due process of these laws for all persons.

ISU flags are half staff six days

The president of Illinois State University ordered Tuesday that all flags on the campus be flown at half staff for six days—two days for each of the Kent State students, and two days in honor of Fred Hampton and Mark Clark, killed last December in Chicago. Black students at ISU had asked that the flag be flown at half staff after the two Black Panther leaders were slain and had been rejected.

The president also agreed to the suggestion that the flag be flown at half staff May 19, the anniversary of the birth of Malcolm X.

Governors cancel meeting

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) - The Spring National Republican Governors' Conference was cancelled Thursday, Conference chairman Raymond P. Shafer of Pennsylvania said the conference was cancelled because of conditions across the country.

He said the governors of all 50 states will meet Monday in Washington with President Nixon to discuss campus unrest.

Shafer's announcement came at a news conference shortly before the meeting was to have started.

There were only 12 governors on hand for the meeting.

Shafer apologized for the inconvenience caused the citizens of New Mexico and Ohio, David F. Cargo.

Nixon meets college heads

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon held an extended conference today with eight university presidents to explore the causes of "student frustrations and unrest." Nixon was powdered with the group, representing the Association of American Universities, for an hour and 20 minutes.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the meeting was held at Nixon's initiative and provided "a very full and worthwhile discussion." He said the chief executive was anxious to get the views of the educators and talk with them about the problems facing many campuses.

The press secretary said Nixon "is now and he has been in the past concerned with problems in the society and student frustrations and unrest."

The college heads scheduled a news conference later in the day.

Court called "trigger-happy"

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's adjutant general said today that Sen. Stephen M. Young's statement that "trigger-happy" National Guardsmen shot four Kent State University students was "based on hearsay" and intended "to inflame the public against the military."

Air, Gen. Sylvester Del Corso made the comment after Young suggested to the Senate Wednesday that an accidental shot may have triggered the tragedy on the Kent State campus on Monday.

Young said he had received reports "that one youthful demonstrator hurled back a half-filled canister of tear gas which struck a Guardman on his shoulder, or his rifle, and immediately that rifle was discharged accidentally. Instantly, his companions—"trigger-happy National Guardsmen"—shot and killed four students.

Del Corso called Young a "pile he old hat" and said: "Young's statement is not based on fact. This office provided Sen. Young's Columbus office with background information which led up to the shooting. The only other contact Sen. Young's office was a telephone call to Gen. Robert H. Canterbury who is on the scene at Kent, and no such information was provided to Young."

SIU student blood donations helps get residents covered

As a result of 107 pints of blood donated from SIU students Wednesday, many Carbondale residents have been qualified to receive free blood this year if they need it, according to the Rev. Lee Moorehead, pastor of the Carbondale First United Methodist Church, and blood program chairman for the Jackson County Red Cross.

The Rev. Moorehead said as a result of a blood drive held at his church, 285 pints of blood were donated Wednesday, about half of the donations coming from SIU students.

The students gave an "overwhelming response" to the bloodmobile, and their contributions made a "tremendous difference," he said.

The bloodmobile was sponsored by six Carbondale area churches.

Student contributions helped the churches meet their quotas, which allows all members of the churches to receive blood at no cost, if they happen to need it, within a given period of time. The individual contributors are also covered.

Damage caused to campus buildings during the Wednesday's demonstrations amounted to $13,500, according to William Nelson, assistant to the director of the Physical Plant.

The damage breakdown was as follows: Wheeler Hall, $9,000; Woody Hall, $7,000; Home Economics Building, $1,000; and the Parking Section of Washington Square, $500.

The most damage was in Woody Hall caused in the Advisement Section of Liberal Arts and Science. A student worker reported that all but two windows on the east side of the building were broken.

He added that two IBM typewriters were broken. One costing $800 was damaged beyond repair.

Desks were pounded in and walls damaged by painted screws. A door was splintered by a brick used to break a window.

"The big cost here will be the students," the student worker said. "Costs will be in the disruption of our operations.

The Advisement section is operating at a minimum and may have to close. Everything, however, was cleaned away by Thursday afternoon. The International Center failed a little better, according to John Laybourn, a spokesman for the Center.

Four windows were broken on the first and second floors. Holes were gouged into the door of one office with a broken mope handle, Laybourn reported.

The registrar's office reported six broken windows. One office was damaged by fire and smoke and 1000 schedules were burned, a spokesman for the Registrar's Office said the schedules can be replaced.

Also, some IBM card trays were overturned and their contents were being put back into order.

At the Department of History, damage was minor, a secretary to the department said. Doors to offices were locked preventing damage.

Only two windows were broken in the History Dept., she said. A fire extinguisher was emptied on the floor and a telephone disappeared.

In the lobby, someone wrote with a magic marker. "OFF AID now, Kent State averaged," on the wall.

At Wheeler Hall, $5,000 damage was reported. Most of the damage was done to windows and furniture, Nelson said.

Nelson said walls will be repaired to cover messages scratched on them. He also reported that many fire extinguishers were emptied on the floor of the buildings. At the Home Economics Building, the damage was mostly to glass and to the roof of the building. A plastic skylight was ripped out of the roof, Nelson said.

Two fire bombs were thrown through the windows of the Traffic Department's Parking Section office in Washington Square. Damage was mostly caused by fire and smoke. The floor and the lighting fixtures will have to be repaired. Nelson said. Walls will also have to be painted.

The fire bombing took place at 1 a.m. Thursday morning, a spokesman at the Traffic Department said.

Local merchant helps ‘dampen’ spirits

Two firebombs were thrown early Thursday morning at the Traffic Department’s Parking Section offices in Washington Square.

Damage to the floor and lighting was prevented from the fire and smoke quelled by firemen shortly after 1 a.m.

The incident was the sole outbreak of violence after the long evening of disturbances Wednesday that ended with a standoff confrontation between students and police around midnight near the Campus Plaza Shopping Center.

Fear gas canisters had been broken out by police, but the crowd began to disperse.

Temperatures were cooled quite literally when coffee and soda were dispensed to some 600 students by Lou Cerutti, owner of Little Caesar’s restaurant.

At approximately midnight Wednesday, C. William Nor- man, Carbondale city manager, and Roger Leiser, student representative to the Car- bondale City Council, entered Little Caesar’s and phoned SIU Chancellor Robert W. McKear. An estimated 1,200 students had gathered in front of the motel and asked for de- manded permission to stay in the University Center for the remainder of the night.

After considerable deliber- ation, McKear said that couldn’t be done.

At this time Cerutti volun- teered to serve coffee and soft drinks to those gathered outside in an effort to appease the crowd and encourage them to break up and return home. Norman contacted Carbon- dale Police Chief Jack Hazel who said the State Police were ready to move in and clear the streets. Norman asked him to meet again early Thursday morning to determine whether the situation could be dealt with.

After distributing an es- timated 600 cups of coffee and soda, the crowd began dis- persion. Many entered Little Caesar’s. A collection of donations was gathered from the crowd to reimburse Cerutti. Cerutti refused the money and turned it over to a ball fund for those a ticket to Cerutti for re- students arrested in the taking open but word was demonstration.

The crowd in the local re- partement to void the ticket, Cerutti began disappearing. "If we saved one head from around 2 a.m. with only a few being bailed,” Cerutti said, remaining "It was worth every damn police were about to issue petty.

Alumni to sponsor graduate banquets

The first of a series of five Graduate Banquets sponsored by the SIU Alumni Association will honor prospective gradu- ates in the schools of agriculture, home economics and technology Sunday.

The five "Graduate Ban- quets" will replace the single "Senior Banquet" given by the Alumni Association in past years. Both bachelor’s de- gree and advanced degree candidates are to be honored, according to Jacob W. King at Alumni Services.

Business, communications and fine arts graduates will be honored May 14, College of Education graduates will be guests at a May 16 ban- quet, and liberal arts and sci- ences graduates will be honored May 15. College of Education graduates will be guests at a May 16 banquet, and liberal arts and sciences graduates will be honored June 1. A fifth dinner will honor Vocational-Technical Institute graduates, but the date has not been set.

All banquets will be held at 6 p.m. in the University Center Ballroom.

All prospective graduates listed in their schools and col- leges are being sent invita- tions with reservation in- formation. June or August graduates who do not receive invites should call the Alumni Office, 453-2408, to make reservations.

Reservation deadlines are May 2, 15 and 28.

Low turn-out reported in discussion sessions

The Carbondale Faculty Sub-Council sponsored 17 discussion groups Thursday afternoon, and students stayed away in droves.

Scheduling groups were to be formed at various campus locations, with an assigned group of faculty members serving as the organizer. The faculty said they suggested a number of topics, but emphasized that the discussions were to be generated by the students.

About 20 students took part in the discussion headed by Robert P. Griswold, assistant professor of English, on the parade of hungry Hall's cafeteria. Most of the instructors assigned to the areas around Morris Library and Lawson Hall showed up, but few students came.

Randall Nelson, chairman of the Department of Government, met with a small group of students on one of the lawn areas around Lawson Hall. He spoke on such issues as pollution of the environment, race relations, and the war in Indochina.

"It's a worthwhile, an imaginative, a meaningful among the students," Nelson said. "But, he said, if they want to improve the situation in any of the areas be touched on 'they will have to make a commitment.'

One student in the group said the problem is an emotional one—that students are seeking religion rather than results.

Ward Morton, professor of government, said many of the

Sharp increase reported in ticket sales

A substantial increase in concert to normal ticket sales was reported late Thursday afternoon by local trains and bus company officials.

The sales increase has been caused by a number of students leaving Carbondale, apparently because of disturbances at SIU.

"Today (Thursday) has been like a big Friday," Vernon Paul, passenger representative for the Illinois Central Railroad, said.

Paul reported that about 200 students left Carbondale on Chicago-bound trains at 6 A.M. and 9 A.M. with 100 left at 1 P.M.

He said that the 4 P.M. Wednesday train leaving north added 85 passengers in Carbondale. On a normal Wednesday, only about 35 passengers would have gotten on, he said.

"We have had everything down with extra conductors," he said. "About three times as many passengers as usual. Left on Thursday, Paul said. A. M. Johnson, ticket agent for Gulf Transport Bus Lines, said Wednesday sales were "as many as we normally have on Fridays." Thursday sales were twice as many as those on Wednesday, he said.

Johnson said he has had to use extra buses as yet, but he has them available as we need them.

Most of the students purchasing bus tickets are headed for the St. Louis area, he said.

turope. Tear gas was also reported to have been fired at a small crowd in University Park.

There were also reports of breach of the peace at Woody Hall, a building on the campus.

A guard stationed near Lawrence Hall requested permission to use tear gas and was given the okay by radio.

By 11:30 p.m., State Police had moved down South Illinois Avenue for Yohe's Sports Store and turned around. They parked along College and exited from their patrol cars.

A partially-damaged first aid truck was gassed.

National Guard and State Police were situated at University and Mill, where most of the demonstrators were located.

The long evening began at Morris Library.

Students gathered in front of Morris Library for a 6 p.m. rally. The atmosphere was subdued. Demonstrators talked with each other as several students addressed the crowd.

Meanwhile National Guard troops moved onto campus from the south and occupied positions in Thompson Woods.

A group of students calling themselves the "People's Union" said the crowd should disband. They called for a strike against classes today and said picket lines would be formed in front of the classroom buildings.

Someone else in the crowd said students should check out books from Morris Library and attempt to "pour up the system."

Two students emerged from Morris shortly afterward carrying large piles of books. Some 50 other students ran into the library and began to circulate on the first floor, books off the shelves. State Police appeared in the building. Workers at the circulation desk said the National Guard had ordered the Library closed. All students were asked to leave.

Two Security Police began to move through the first floor, and ordered students to vacate the building.

One student leaving the north exit was punched in the back by a policeman carrying a night stick.

The student stopped and then was hit across the shoulders. When the student turned around he was hit across the head.

He fell to the floor of the library near the book check booth. When he rose up on one elbow, there was blood on the floor near his glasses, which were not broken. Students moved to help the student up. One girl who covered her eyes briefly, said, "Why do you have to do this?"

The crowd had formed north of the Library. Someone said, "Let's move downtown to the corner of University and Main."

National Guardman had moved into the library by this time and sealed the building off. The doors were locked by a library employee.

The crowd began moving from the library lawn and headed past Woody Hall and the Home Economics Building, scene of the demonstration Wednesdays night.

Little trouble was reported along the march up Illinois. The students linked arms at one point and marched up the right side of Illinois Avenue, led for the first few blocks by motorcyclists.

A few hecklers shouted at the marchers from the tops of buildings along the way.

The crowd was thinned somewhat by the time the intersection of Illinois and Main was reached. State Police, who were posted on the periphery of Carbondale Avenue, moved down server rows and began running traffic around the intersection.

Some of the on-duty demonstrators passed several who crossed through the crowd in the intersection. Observers reported the odor of tear gas in the air and several joints were seen passed from hand to hand.

One student, who appeared to be in the forefront of the demonstrators, said, "No matter what happens, we're staying here.

"If we're gassed, we won't have any control of the mob and can't be responsible for individual violence that breaks out.

"We're going to stay here together peacefully and make our opinions known."

The crowd recited the Pledge of Allegiance, sang the opening lines of the Star Spangled Banner. "Oh say can you see," and then followed with the words to "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

Chancellor tells of three actions

By Marty Francis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU Chancellor Robert W. MacVicar responded Thursday to demands presented to the administration during Wednesday's disturbance in protest of President Nixon's expansion of the war in Southeast Asia.

During a service in the SU Arena Thursday morning in memory of four Kent State University students killed earlier this week, MacVicar announced that three actions would be taken.

MacVicar said: (1) A committee of the Faculty Senate will study the presence of ROTC on campus; (2) A blue ribbon committee of faculty, not associated with the Vietnamese Studies Center, would be established to conduct a thorough investigation into the facts about the center can be known, and (3) Petitions, which MacVicar said would be sent to the appropriate officials in Washington in regard to the expansion of the war in Cambodia.

The petition read: "The expansion of the current war in Vietnam and Cambodia represents such a serious additional commitment by the United States that the undersigned express their deep concern to the President of the United States and the Congress."

"It is our conviction that the best interests of our nation can best be served by an early resolution of this conflict."

"We call upon all parties involved to seek means to achieve peace in that tragic area of the world."

Roger Leisner, student government representative to the Carbondale City Council, yelled from the crowd, if you were really concerned, you would provide buses for the students who try to go to Washington this weekend."

An hour after Leisner offered his assistance, Leisner offered his assistance.

Earlier in the service, which was attended by about 300 persons, Carbondale Mayor David Keene read a proclamation calling for a four-day period of mourning:

"Whereas recently four young students of Kent State University of Ohio were shot to death during a demonstration against the invasion of Cambodia; and whereas this tragedy has evoked sympathy of the mayor and the City Council as well as many Carbondale residents and SIU students for the parents of these four young students, David Keene, Mayor of Carbondale, do proclaim a four-day period of mourning for these young Americans who lost their lives while expressing their beliefs."

Several persons sought the service in conclusion, a member of the Rho Chi Fraternity, Dwight Campbell, student body president and Tom Scherschel, student body president-elect.

Members of the University Choir provided music at the service.

Throughout the service students who appeared to be disinterested at what was being said made comments to the speakers and marched out.

Student Senate holds short meeting

By Terry Peters
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Student Senate's regular meeting Wednesday ended abruptly for lack of a quorum Wednesday night after five student candidates were seated.

Of the 12 members originally contained several announcements and reports and 10 items of new business. After the defeat of a motion to suspend the agenda to discuss the situation on campus, the Senate lost its quorum (16 senators) and adjourned.

Abheda Starnes, elections commissioner, submitted her report on the April 29 student government election to start off the meeting, which began half an hour late.

The report was accepted by the Senate 5-4 with the exception of the results of the commuter district election, which were challenged by Tom Vaughn, proxy for Paul Wether, commuter senator.

Vaughn said that the student residents of Carbondale Mobile Homes have charged the Majority Party with violating postal regulations by placing campaign material in their mailboxes.

The Majority Party's slate of candidates had been declared winners of the three seats on the ballot in Miss Starnes' report.

Miss Starnes' report named Tom Scherschel, Student's Party, the student body president-elect; John McCarthy, Student's Party, the student body vice-president-elect; and Franklin Buzz Specter, the vice-president-elect for student activities.

The three executive officers will be inaugurated at the beginning of the fall quarter, the report stated.

Speculation of armed violence in N. Ireland

Dublin, Ireland (AP) - Irish Republican gun-running under fake Red Cross labels, a plot that shook Ireland's government, raised the specter Thursday of armed violence in Northern Ireland.

The Rev. Ian Paisley, Ulster's militant Protestant leader, urged the arming of police and "B" special squads for defense against the smuggled arms that police sources said were destined for Roman Catholics in the North.

"The Northern Ireland government must either show it has determination and courage, or get out and leave the task to those who have determination and courage," Prime Minister Jack Lynch of the Irish republic, who fired two members of his cabinet last week because he said they attempted to run guns into Northern Ireland illegally, tried to ease the tension Thursday.

Sixteen persons were arrested following Wednesday night's disorders.

John R. Leemhouts, 19, Schneider Hall, was charged with underage drinking.

Darby Edward Ryan, 22, of Rt. 3, Carbondale, was charged with criminal damage to property.

A charge of disorderly conduct and disobeying a police officer was filed against Victor R. Hr., 19, Boomer Hall.

A 16-year-old Carbondale high school student was also charged and accused with disorderly conduct.

The records of arrests were released by the ISI News Service.

The $.U Health Service reported treating 22 persons, both students and police officers.

The S.U. Security Police reported three men injured. They were Darrell Orel, Mike Thomas, and Brian Kennedy.

Two Illinois State Police men were taken to Doctors Memorial Hospital for treatment and were released a few hours later. Several other minor injuries to the State police were reported.
What kind of world?

‘Agnew’s attack on Brewer unjustifiable’

By Harry S. Ashmore
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

In the polarized politics of the Nixon era one pole is what is loosely characterized as the intellectual community. As defined by Spiro Agnew, the blocking back in the President’s offensive unit, this company of office snobs and limousine liberals embraces many, including particularly newsmen, whose identification with the world of letters and scholarship is roughly that of the campus cop. They are allowed on the premises, and sometimes accorded a friendly nod.

In his latest round of name-calling, however, the vice president has accorded to one who might well be rated as the current leading figure in academe, President Kingman Brewster of Yale not only heads an institution traditionally ranked in the top drawer, but so far he has done better than most in dealing with unrest on the campus without alienating his students. This alone is deeply offensive to Agnew, who demands an administrative iron fist to end what he calls “the era of appeasement.”

The vice president brought two main counts against Brewster as he publicly called upon Yale alumni to remove him from office. The first was petty and self-servinging—the complaint that the President had joined with virtually every other competent observer in characterizing the last election as a “buck-stopped process” under which the voters “could not expect much better, which ever package was bought or sold.”

The second count of the Agnew indictment was related to the Black Panther murder trial in New Haven, Conn., which has been prosecuted by a substantial proportion of Yale professors and students. White Brewster stopped short of giving the protest movement official sanction, he expressed his personal sympathy, saying, “I am appalled and ashamed. Things have come to such a pass that I am skeptical of the ability of black revolutionaries to achieve a fair trial anywhere in the United States."

This statement has an extraordinary importance, not because Spiro Agnew attacked it, but because Kingman Brewster uttered it. The Yale president came to his post from a distinguished career as professor in the Harvard and Yale law schools. His is a sober appraisal by a man eminently qualified to make it, and if we take it seriously—as I think we must—the implications are grave indeed. The issue is not the fate of eight black militants, but the collapse of the judicial system we have depended upon to hold the country together.

From his opposite pole, Spiro Agnew has made the same charge by implication, and on occasion he has very nearly spilled it out—as when he went on television to throw the weight of the White House behind Republican leader Gerald Ford’s attempt to impeach Justice William O. Douglas. The rationale behind the effort to pack the Supreme Court with so-called strict constructionists is that the judicial system as now constituted no longer dispenses justice. Thus, Agnew would have to agree that it is unlikely, if not impossible, that as it passes through the appellate process the Black Panther trial in New Haven would be fair—but he would argue that the foreordained loser will be society as a whole, denied redress by libertarian judges for the crimes committed against it by the radical fringe.

It is hard to think of a matter of more serious concern to the man who sits in the places of ultimate authority in Washington, and it is equally hard to think of anyone less qualified to explicate it than Spiro Agnew. I would like to think that the unexpected public endorsement of the integrity of the Supreme Court by the hard-line attorney general, John Mitchell, indicates some dawning understanding of where the politics of polarization is taking the country.

Drug charges may be severe

Warnings about "the serious consequences of drug use are not without result; arrest by foreign governments" on drug charges has led to a marked increase in reported arrests abroad.

The department said penalties for drug offenses are not always severe, but Americans often assume penalties abroad are similar to those here.

The charge is usually determined by the quantity of drugs involved. Peddling is more serious than possession. The department cited penalties from one year in a mental hospital to six years in jail, in addition to heavy fines.

The jails may be very primitive. Some countries allow no year confinement, perhaps solitary confinement, without bail.

Patton issues statement on guardsmen training

SPRINGFIELD— Maj. Gen. Harold R. Patton, adjutant general of the Illinois National Guard, issued a statement Thursday in which he said Illinois guardsmen have taken extensive training to deal with civil disorders with a minimum of force.

Since 1966, all guardsmen have spent a minimum of 32 hours in special training for civil disturbance operations, including 8 hours of added refresher training last March, he said.

In addition, combat units have received an extra 16 hours of special instruction, and 16 hours of refresher training will be administered to all units during 1970.

Patton said standing orders to all guard personnel are to carry only nonlethal weapons and allowed in case of deadly force.

John E. King, chairman of the Department of Educational Administration and Foundations at SIU, will speak this summer at the fourth annual seminar for presidents and deans of Texas colleges and universities.

King has been invited to speak on the topic, "Administration as an Art: A Consideration of the Intangibles," at the July 21 session of the seminar, to be held this year at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth. King said he would pay special attention to campus disorders in the address.

Three faculty members from SIU Department of Family Economics and Management will travel to Purdue University, May 14-15, to discuss aspects of the management and equipment program at SIU with students and faculty. They are Betty Jane Johnson, chair; Thelma Malone, instructor; and Arlene Heisler, instructor.

Larry Kemezise, assistant professor of technical and industrial education at SIU, is the author of articles appearing in the March issues of "Educational Technology" and "Educational Screen and Soundvisual Guide" magazines. Both deal with visual-verbal approaches to teacher training.

Four members of the SIU Department of English attended professional meetings May 1-3 in Chicago and Madison, Wis.

Attending the annual Johnson Society regional convocation at the University of Wisconsin were David Viesch, Manuel Schoenborn and David Kverness.

R.S. Rainbird Jr., was a conferee at the annual meeting of the Society for the Advancement of Scandinavian Study at the University of Chicago.

John Eugene Reno, a Carbondale native and graduate of SIU, has been promoted to professor of physical education at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind. Reno was one of 60 faculty members promoted by the board of trustees at their April meeting. The promotion became effective this September. Reno got his B.S. and M.S. degrees from SIU in 1950 and his P.E.D., from Indiana University in 1963.

The new paper is a further development of the selected electron-shell method developed by Amoros and Campa-Amoros. The research has been conducted in the Materials Science Laboratory in the School of Technology.

SIU anthropology team going to see remote Ecuador tribes

A research expedition to remote rainforest areas of Ecuador will be mounted this summer by an anthropological team from SIU.

The group, under associate professor Milton Abrisbader, will be trying to contact isolated tribes of Cayapa Indians and Negros along rivers never before explored by scientists.

Abrisbader said he and two SIU graduate students will be trying to determine how the natives have adapted to modern economic influences, including a setback in their basic livelihood, banana farming.

Graduate students in the expedition will be Larry Naylor of Genneseo, N.Y., and Ward Comer, Jr., of Bainbridge, Georgia.

The project is being financed by a $10,000 grant from the National Science Foundation. The team will leave June 13 and expect to return September 1.

Educators challenging dissenters' dedication

By Copsey News Service

LOS ANGELES—The day of campus revolutions appears near an end in California.

Their dedication to violence has been strongly challenged in recent weeks by university administrators of the University of California and the California state legislature.

These administrators have voiced fears that unless the revolutionaries are checked, the institutions as we now know them are doomed.

UC President Charles J. Hitch has addressed himself to the situation and so have Glenn Dumke, chancellor of the state college system, and William J. McGill, chancellor of UC San Diego.

McGill has resigned and is now president of Columbia University by Sep. 1.

In recent weeks, all three have seemed intent on reversing the course of the revolutionaries by exposing their base of power—a student population easily radicalized and a faculty that sometimes kindles it, rather than cools, mounting tensions.

Hitch told UC regents the university was starting to realize its potential for being a center of discourse and of "reasonableness members of the university community ... less, 'powerful than any bomb.'"

"We have a profound duty to properly uphold the thinking, lies and rhetoric which influence and shocks, but does nothing for the world," Hitch said.

He also means careful and skeptical listening, not taking an ideological trip.

As president of the university, Hitch must lay down a warning to the university community that it is wrong to resort to easy rationalizations about the impotence of world.

Hitch said the university faculty must offer a challenge against the revolutionaries, accepting an obligation to be the "representative of whatever passes for mature wisdom in this troubled time."

He added, "The university teacher who participates in coercive revolutionary organization and action is betraying—in a special and particular sense beyond his normal obligations as a teacher—his charge to act as a responsible teacher."

"He must be the object of disciplinary attention by his colleagues," Hitch spoke of a new kind of conformity which threatens the campuses and is generated in the name of freedom and change.

"We are met with a philosophy where subjectivity would replace objectivity, emotion replace reason and strength of voice supplant strength of argument," Hitch said.

"Classrooms are disrupted in the name of education, speakers are shouted down in the name of free speech, job recruiters are driven from the campus in the name of revolution and demands for total conformity to a particular line of thought are made in the name of academic freedom and dissent."

"Dumke in a speech said educators must prevent campuses from being used as "a testing ground for revolution" to bring about political change."

He said the state colleges exist for the objective study of society's problems.

"You can't be a scholar and a part of this at the same time," he said.

Both Dumke and McGill spoke of the "fragility" of educational institutions.

"Society is not obligated to maintain academic freedom as a matter of our divine right," McGill said in a recent address.

"It will do. Very, very, so long as academic freedom is maintained."

"They can be changed and even destroyed through massive student discipline and manipulation of our students."

"They said out a step-by-step plan that campus revolutionaries and also power-seeking politicians follow in exploitation of our universities."

He called them "surefire prescripiations" for bringing about power revolutionaries to power and for getting politicians elected.

McGill said each has a common property: "There is no real issue; it is manufactured."

Each prescription depends for its primary effectiveness on a poorly informed audience unaware that its anxiety and its naiveté are being manipulated."

McGill said mass communications has also made adverse contributions by publicizing campus revolutionary activities.

"They become instant national personalities and in great demand on the college lecture circuit around the country," he added.

"There is no spectacle more comic than a campus revolutionary demanding and getting $750 per lecture from student groups for speaking engagements on campus."

"It is the beast of all possible worlds, the man is a successful demagogue and revolutionist. He also is a successful capitalist, and all that."
Chinese ladies seek liberation

By Colepy News Service

KONG—It probably will come as a surprise to the activists of the women's liberation movement in the United States, but most of what they are trying to achieve is old hat to women of at least one other part of the world: Communist China.

Equality of women to men in China is not new. The Chinese Communists ever since they came to power 20 years ago have been fighting for the liberation of women. Women in China have achieved the status of men, and women are working in fields which used to be reserved for men. In China, women are as equal as men in every respect.

Unlike in the United States, there has never been a legal distinction between the rights of men and women. In China, women have always been equal to men. The Chinese government has always fought for the equality of women. Women have always been treated as equals in China. Women have always been able to vote and hold public office.

Admirably the Chinese women have placed greater emphasis on the rights of women than have their American women's liberation counterparts. In fact, the women's liberation campaign in China has virtually ignored the issue of women's rights.

But the other aims of the women's liberation movement in China have been simultaneously surprising. It is an interesting coincidence that when the women's liberation movement in China began becoming more vocal and widely recognized, there has been a substantial increase recently in Chinese propaganda relating to the new status of the Chinese women.

The equality of the sexes in China has not yet been achieved. The Chinese, however, have made progress in reducing the years of indoctrination and other efforts. But there is no question in the minds of observers that the Chinese will continue to make progress in this direction.

In its recent propaganda, Peking has stressed the fact that the Chinese government is working hard to improve the status of women. The Chinese government is trying to improve the status of women in all respects. The Chinese government is trying to make the status of women equal to the status of men in all respects.

Chinese Communists Party Chairman Maо Tse-Tung himself claims that the Chinese government has achieved the same status as men in every respect. The Chinese government is trying to improve the status of women in all respects.

The Chinese leaders frequently claim that the women of the country have achieved a status of equality with men, that they have the same rights as men and perform similar duties in agriculture, industry, and government. The Chinese Party affairs.

The potential influence of women on China's economic development is a consideration that is implicitly noted on the minds of the Chinese leaders.

A statement Mao made in 1943 is quoted frequently these days in reports on female equality in China. "China's women should be treated the same as 50 percent of the labor force in many agricultural production teams and as much as 70 percent of the labor force in cotton production teams.

Six enroll for travel and study

Six students have been registered for a summer study program in France, civilization and French relanguageliterature and civilization, sponsored by the Foreign Languages Department at ILU.

James A. Kilker, head of the French section of the department, said the two-month travel-study program offers four to six weeks of intensive courses at the Institut Catholique and the French Institute in Paris. Approximately four hours of class each school day will be conducted by faculty of the Institut Catholique and SLU, Kilker, the tour director, said. Besides formal courses, the students will take excursions to Fontainebleau, Versailles, Chartres and the Loire Valley.

The itinerary includes tours to sites of historical interest in western southern and eastern France, and visiting the adjoining French-speaking areas of Belgium and Switzerland.

Course offerings include advanced conversation in French.

Livestock contest

The SIU Department of Animal Industries and the SLU stock judging teams will be host Friday to Illinois College Invitational Livestock Judging Contest.

Taking part in the event will be judging teams from the University of Illinois, Illinois State University, Western Illinois University and Lakeland Community College of Matteson.

Participants will be judging 12 classes of livestock—beef cattle, dairy cattle, sheep, hogs, turkeys, goats, and chickens. The judging will be held in the evening and the results will be announced at the end of the judging.

SIU coaches waiting decisions from athletes

SIU’s athletic coaches are now awaiting the return of national letters of intent from prospective athletes in the 10 major sports offered at SIU. Wrestling coach Linn Long, like the other SIU coaches, is keeping his fingers crossed this week. Wednesday was the first day prospective athletes were eligible to return the national letters of intent to the coaches.

Coach Long will continue to bring top high school and junior college wrestlers to SIU for most of May and June to introduce them to his program and SIU’s academic program.

Five top wrestling prospects will be on campus this week, providing demonstrations do not scare them away, said the SIU coach.

Jim Schluster, 149 pounds, is one of this year’s California State Junior College champions.

Intramurals all cancelled

All scheduled intramural activities have been cancelled through the remainder of the semester, according to officials of the men’s intramural office.

In addition to the cancellation of the regularly scheduled softball and volleyball games, the home run derby finals, slated for between games Saturday at the SIU-Arkansas State doubleheader, has been cancelled.

Golfers to face Murray State

The Saluki golfers will try to defeat Murray State University on the second time of the two-day tournament at South Bend, Ind. May 16 against Notre Dame. It is the first time the teams have met since 1972.

The Salukis have already bested last year’s record of 13-3. SIU defeated Murray State but lost to Notre Dame last year.

The Saluki golfers continued their winning ways Wednesday with a 388-397 victory over the University of Missouri at St. Louis. The win, achieved at Normandy Country Club, pushed SIU’s record to 14-4.

Coach Lynn Holder’s team has shown great balance in recent meets with five of SIU’s six entries against Missouri’s St. Louis firing between 75 and 79.

Vito Sapon, a junior from Springfield, was Wednesday’s medalist, firing an 18-hole score of 79. Sapon, a former Springfield high school champion, transferred to SIU this year from Springfield Junior College.

Although the five low scores for each team determined each total score, the meet was won with five fingers of individual members of the two teams.

The total results showed SIU’s Harvey, 109; Murray State’s Tom O’Hare, 77-83; Sapon over Sulladay of Missouri, 79-79; Ron Brew of Missouri topped SIU’s Jerry Glenn, 77-79; Dick Dosh of SIU outdistanced Missouri’s Doug Lee, 77-79 and Saluki Lock Graham van Ron Ro- macker of Missouri, 78-83. David Perkins of SIU was edged by Don Mack of Missouri-St. Louis, 79-80.

Paetzold's return to form could aid Saluki district bid

By Mike Klein
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Jerry Paetzold's return to form and outstanding pitching Wednesday has given coach Rich "Chicky" Jones another reason to hope SU will receive a bid to the NCAA district later this month.

"We've been trying to go with a four or five man rotation because if we get a bid to districts, our pitching staff will have the experience to compete in that kind of competition," Jones said.

"Now with Paetzold coming around again, it gives us more confidence in our rotation this year," Paetzold was unavailable for comment.

Still listed as Salukis are in good position to receive a bid because of their outstanding 21-5 record and the number of losses by other major universities in the Midwest.

"We heard that many of the other larger schools—Notre Dame, Bell State, Notre Dame and Northern Illinois—have all lost at least 10 ballgames," although the Salukis have an overall 21-5 record, two victories over Creighton Air Force Base aren't accepted by the NCAA. In effect, SU has a 19-5 record at this point for post-season tourney consideration.

Paetzold was the Salukis' big stopper last season when he compiled a 10-3 record and a 1.87 ERA.

This season he got off to a tough start when he injured his left foot and had to miss some of the winter workout. Although he had a 3-1 record, Paetzold recently lowered his 9.95 ERA into Wednesday's game and had been less than effective in most appearances.

Wednesday was a complete reversal, hurling in 6 1/3 senior lefty pitched a one-hitter for seven innings before being touched for three singles and Tennessee Martin's only run in the eighth.

He went the route for his fourth victory and threw only 87 pitches.

"If the game had gone six or seven more innings, he looked like he could have gone right along with it," Jones said.

"He got off to a real good start with a carload of innings and in fact, didn't have a bad inning all day. Even in the inning when they got their run (SU), he was ahead of the hitter and in control all the way," Jones continued.

"Jerry's a real hard worker and when he has his pitch, he's a winner. He just took him a while to get a hot day and have a good effort. I think he'll be all right the rest of the way," Jones added.

Saluki shorts: Jones thinks SU is still a possibility for the all-conference NCAA district. The Saluki diamond is not fenced in for admission of paying customers which could hurt SU's chances.

Violence forces Ohio out of meet

Violence has forced Ohio State to withdraw from the Saturday triangular tennis meet in Bloomington, Indiana and SU will still meet, but in Bloomington.

Bill Jourdan will be back in the lineup both Saturday and Monday as SU at powerful Michigan.
