Layer, IBHE schedule session on priorities
Tuesday in Chicago

By Chuck Hatcheck
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

President Robert G. Layer said Monday he is going to meet with the Illinois Board of Higher Education Tuesday in Chicago to discuss the low priority program matter.

Layer did not say whether or not he had a priority list prepared for the IBHE. He did say that he has received pressure from the SIU Board of Trustees to reply to the IBHE’s request.

Last Monday when he announced that the Carbondale campus would not submit the priority listing requested by the IBHE, Layer said he would be agreeable to discuss the programs the IBHE considers to be low priority.

The next day, however, IBHE Director James B. Holdeman, issued a report saying SIU, along with three other state systems, but not the Board of Governors, had agreed to comply with the IBHE’s request.

The report said that the IBHE had received assurance from the SIU Board of Trustees Chairman Harold R. Fisher, and James M. Brown, University chief of board staff.

Wednesday Brown and Steve Sample, deputy director of programs for the IBHE, confirmed what the report said. The report, Brown said, “seems to reflect the situation fairly and accurately.”

But Layer still said no list would be prepared and that he was still agreeable to meet with the IBHE to determine what the IBHE’s priority rating is.

When told of his Tuesday meeting with the IBHE, Layer said he still had intentions of feeling out the IBHE.

When asked, Layer said he has received pressure to produce a priority listing of what has been determined to be SIU’s lower priority programs.

The SIU board, he said, told him that “I had to” reply to the IBHE.

Layer, however, when questioned if he meant that he would give a priority listing for SIU said, “I don’t care to comment.”

Record number files for Student Senate

By Barry Cleveland
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

There are more candidates for the Student Senate election Wednesday than for any fall election in memory. Rhonda Sturrill, executive secretary to student body president George Camille and a former elections coordinator, said Monday the withdrawal from the race by Penny Severns, independent candidate for a Bush Towers seat, leaves 44 students running for the 21 available seats.

27 candidates ran for the Senate in April, while 27 also sought election in November, 1979. The largest field in recent years was the 41 students who ran for the Senate in May, 1968.

The number of candidates may reflect more enthusiasm about student government among students than in the past, Gary Dickerson, elections coordinator, said Monday. However, judging by the number of campaign posters on campus, there is not much of a campaign yet, he said.

More than two thirds of the candidates met with him Sunday to discuss election laws and procedures.

At least two students will be running under a label other than Action. Dickerson said. Greg Vertrees and Randy McCarty, both former senators running for commuter seats, will run under the “Reform” Party banner.

Campbell statements by those candidates who submitted them will be included in the Wednesday Daily Egyptian.

Candidates for the Senate, listed by district, include:

Bush Towers: Ken Bartels, John Center, Mark Harris, Jim Kania, Buz Tabor.

Self-governing housing: Jeff Pockrass, Barb Pinaire.

University City: David Dost.

Midnight at noon

As he left, the bright light of day seems to have turned black changing the sky to a sea of darkness. Although the shot seems to be of skydiving at midnight, it was taken at the Saturday afternoon half-hour show of the Homecoming football game. The “midnight” effect was achieved by John Lopont by reversing a negative, thus making a negative rather than a positive print.

House defeats ‘prayer in school’ amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed constitutional amendment to ban teaching and prayer in public schools died in the House Monday when 66 of the 67 votes necessary to put the two-thirds majority needed for approval was not attained.

The intense and often emotional debate, favoring and HJ opposing, was the first step toward writing in the Constitution.

“Proposed in this Constitution shall abridge the right of public school assemblies to participate in public, religious exercises that have been widely followed before a Supreme Court ruling had it in 1962. But opponents, with major church organizations on their side, called it an attack on the religious freedom guarantee in the Bill of Rights.

The amendment was brought to the floor when Wylly got a majority of the House—214 members—by a petition taking it out of the hands of the Judiciary Committee where it had been held up.

Wylly’s original amendment made reference to “noncommunal” prayer—a word that had been included by the amendment’s opponents Prior to final action, the House amended the language to make it read “voluntary prayer or meditation.”

But even that was denounced by the amendment’s foes, who argued that the proposed constitutional change remained unacceptable to them.

The amendment was attacked by Rep. Robert F. Dwayne, D-Mass., the only Roman Catholic priest in Congress, who contended it would not enhance the free exercise of religion but can be enormously detrimental to the substance and spirit of religion in America.

Rep. P. M. Green, D-Utah, a Mormon, told the House: “My faith is my private business, it is the history of my people.” He said the Constitution “is an inspired document” and he opposes amending it in this fashion.

Rep. Elman Celler, N.Y. chairman of the Judiciary Committee, walked in the rostrum carrying a pile of books that he said were records of hearings held in 1964 on 15 different forms of prayer resolutions that generated 274 pages of testimony. He said witnesses came from more than 30 religions denominations, and included 50 legal experts, and 30 heads of seminaries and divinity schools.

“These hearings convinced me and other members of the committee that appropriate language could not be devised that would preserve the first amendment and freedom of religion,” Celler said.

Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes, D-Fla., supporter of the amendment, said “I will rejoin those who plan to vote against prayer. I want to be around to hear you explain to your constituents your vote against prayer to God.”
It was a windy and wet but winning Homecoming

By Sue Millen
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Windy, but pleasant weather was predicted for last Saturday. Temperatures were supposed to be around 55 to 60 degrees with mostly clear skies and strong winds ranging from 10 to 20 mph, according to the forecasts.

But instead it snowed early Saturday morning and the skies were overcast most of the day with temperatures dipping toward freezing. Around 9 a.m. the Homecoming parade was canceled because of inclement weather, Ken Radakovich, Homecoming parade chairman, said.

However, the four parade judges decided that because so much work was put into the parade floats and stunts that winners for the three prizes of $50, $35 and $25 would be awarded anyway.

First place went to Alpha Eta Rho for a float which had the theme "One Giant Leap for SIU." The second place float went to VIT's automotive department. Their theme was "We've Only Just Begun." Thompson Point took third place with their theme being "If We Are to Change the World Let it Bear the Mark of Our Intelligence." Honorable mention was given to Alpha Eta Rho's stunt, which was the only stunt out of the seven entered that showed up Saturday morning.

At halftime during the Homecoming football game three members from the SIU Sport Parachute Club decided to join the crowd as they jumped from about 5,500 feet and landed on about the 50 yard line. SIU won the game against Drake University 34-32, as the skies cleared and the sun broke through late in the afternoon.

Saturday evening Denny Brooks, Karen and Richard Carpenter and their backup group performed a concert in the Arena.

Other Homecoming activities included a seven-hour open house in the Student Center Friday evening, movies and a host of coffee hours for the alumni. And, all things considered, it wasn't a bad day.

Critic criticized

To the Daily Egyptian:

After reading Glenn Amato's review of "Twelfth Night," I would like to suggest that he re-evaluate his position as a theater critic. He has all but ignored the important functions of a critic. According to Amato, Chayefsky, worthwhile theater criticism should 1) be relevant and point out that the audience might have missed, 2) show taste and discretion, and 3) help manufacture a taste for theater. By his constant negative approach to theater productions as a whole, he has hurt theater at SIU more than he has helped it. True, while theater people like to receive kind reviews, they do not mind criticism that also points out those elements in a production that are bad.

Mr. Amato in all his criticisms so far this year has used his position for polemics, much like a frustrated artist who becomes a reviewer to show how good he really is. He has dictated his position about productions instead of trying to understand the director's approach and then commenting on its effect. He has usually ignored the audience's reaction which is criminal in a sense, because the audience is the final arbiter on whether a show is a bust or success.

As a theater major who is interested in seeing theater continue as a relevant part of SIU, I would suggest that Mr. Amato take a course in practical criticism as well as try to understand more courses in theater, dance, and movie theory. The worst kind of criticism that the arts can receive is purely personal reactions unless the person has the insight of a Coleridge or Lamb. Criticisms should help art, not destroy it.

'Speaking of rip-offs'

To the Daily Egyptian:

Speaking of rip-offs, recently (Oct. 22 & 23 to be precise) the residents of Thompson Point and SIU students in general were the victims of a rather well-run, but quite unscrupulous, scheme. The activities coordinator of T.P. had scheduled the film "Sailor Beware" to be shown at Leents Hall. The film was to be free to T.P. residents and to SIU admission to all other SIU students. SIU students were to be checked to prevent non-students from viewing the film.

However, chill hunters and local theater operators seeing the film advertised at SIU admission, became alarmed (because they plan to show the same film next month at approximately twice the admission price) and complained to MGM, makers of the film, in Hollywood. MGM, in turn, put heavy pressure upon the activities coordinator and his forces to stop this, to stop all screenings at SIU, films copyrighted, and forced them to search through the contract, to find the clause that the Coordinator was not authorized to screen the film. Two and a-half hours before the film was to be shown, Jim Brown, T.P. Activities Coordinator, was notified by MGM. The Coordinator could not afford to have the film revoked and was threatened with a lawsuit if the film was shown. Telephone were received shortly after to confirm the revocation. MGM offered to send a film free of charge to replace "Sailor Beware." This film was not received until the following Sunday. The T.P. Activities Council was left with no film plus the costs of advertising posters and newspaper ads for "Sailor Beware."

Words cannot express the frustrating disappointment felt by the T.P. Activities Council and those students who showed up expecting to see the film. I hope that when SIU students see "Sailor Beware" advertised for showing at a local Carbon- dale theater early next month, they will remember what happened to the T.P. Activities Council and, in all fairness, boycott the film's showings. Two can play at this game. Thompson Point will try to reschedule the film later this year if possible.

'Drugs and football'

To the Daily Egyptian:

I believe Mike Klein, in his sports column in the November 5 Daily Egyptian, missed the point badly when he ridiculed the concept of sports figures doing drug and anti-drug spots during sports telecasts.

I agree with his statement that no drug user could possibly be affected by some football star advising that the habit should be dropped. But drug users must statistically comprise but a small portion of the television audience. That large number of pre-adolescents and adolescents, however, who are potential drug users do comprise a substantial portion of the television audience during sports telecasts, and some may very well be impressed favorably by such messages. I believe that this is the purpose that ABC and NFL had in mind when they decided to air these messages.

If Mike Klein intends to attack the hypocrisy in sports that allows supposedly clean-cut athletes—pictured as epitomes of physical conditioning—to be piled and needled before every game, that more power to him. I would advise him, however, that reaping charges from one piece of literature by Dave Meggysey does not prove anything about drug use in organized sports, and devoting the majority of his column to rumors and unsubstantiated charges concerning drug use in both professional and college sports can do nothing but harm these areas.

Blue lot blues

To the Daily Egyptian:

Has anyone ever noticed how the blue parking lot in front of Anthony Hall merits a policeman every afternoon at 5 o'clock? Traffic is interrupted every day to let out a few cars from this lot, while the heavy rush hour traffic waits and waits for a break when the campus is dependent on direct traffic from the crowded red lots. Net everyone can afford a blue sticker, but everyone's entitled to the same treatment and protection.

More on critic

To the Daily Egyptian:

It seems I may have enjoyed the Southern Player's performance of "Twelfth Night" more than you. I would be surprised meeting such a Shakespearean scholar, I appreciate the sophisticated comments of Mr. Glenn Amato Daily Egyptian's "Special Writer." In particular interest was the interpretation of "Shakespeare's intention" regarding the portrayal of Malvolio. Thank you, Mr. Amato. How did you ever know?

Changes seen in SIU disciplinary system

By Richard Lorran Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of four reports concerning proposed Changes in Student Code at SIU and its implications on the disciplinary system.

SIU's disciplinary system is coming one step closer to being changed with the completion of the working draft of a new code.

The concept of a community code started to take form last February when then Chancellor Robert G. Layser announced there would be a new code which would affect the faculty, administration, civil servants, board of trustees and students. The new code would replace the Student Conduct Code and the Interim Policy on Demonstrations.

The Student Conduct Code was a community code, the chancellor's committee contained members from the community. When the SIU community expressed their discontent about the code, the chancellor's committee compromised the code. The original committee consisted of Don Arnold, administrative and professional staff, Fred Hodge, Graduate Student Council, Edward Hammon, assistant to the president for student relations, William Hachenberger, Graduate School Council, R. Richard Magee, legal counsel, Wilbur Moulin, who was then dean of students; John Robinson, Nonacademic Employees Council; Michael Shriver, non-voting faculty; Will Travelstead, assistant dean of students; Peter Mueller, under-graduate council; and Susan Watson, Faculty Council. Hammond was appointed to serve as an ex-officio member of the committee by Layser. Eventually, the committee elected Washy as its chairman.

The committee continued to be a chancellor's committee until last June. It then became part of the University's governance system. The change forced the removal of Shriver because he did not represent a constituency according to the senate's definition of community. Shriver had also left the committee Mueller had scheduling difficulties and was replaced by Michael Treutman. Tremendous effort was made for some difficulties. Mueller was replaced by the present un-dergraduate council representative. Robert Formug, Arnold served on the committee until mid-October when he was named comptroller. Robinson, according to Washy, has failed to come to any of the meetings. When contacted, Robinson said his work at the office does not allow him to make the meetings. He has recently been replaced by Robert Lee James, a gardener.

From last June until now, the committee has been known as the ad hoc Committee of the University Senate on the Community Conduct Code.

Holding weekly Wednesday afternoon meetings, with the exception of vacation, the committee has completed the working draft covering purposes, penalties, and student conduct regulations. Although a working draft of the code has been completed, work has just begun in forming a new code which will serve as the working draft.

So what's so important about a new code?

The working draft is the first general code which would cover the faculty, administration, nonacademic employees and students. The Interim Policy on Demonstrations, which covers a specific series of events, includes students, faculty, organizations, staff and visitors to the university.

The Student Conduct Code is a subcommittee known as the Stalson Commission Report. The report derived its name from Charles Stalson, associated professor in economics and chairman of the committee which wrote the report. According to Stalson, the committee members were appointed by Moulin in late 1968. Members of the committee included students and members of the Dean of Students Office.

Stalson said Larry Banakul, Dale Boarleigh, Bill Cook, and Jerry Gage were the students on the committee. Dick Antes, William Beyer, John Jones, Bill Sweet, and John Zaleski were the officials from Moulin's office.

The finished report was sent to Moulin on Mar. 18, 1969. After reviewing the report, Stalson formed a subcommittee for the Student Conduct Code, the first written code in the university's history.

The opening section of the present student code deals with a summary of the underlying principles of the policy which are not on the surface of learning and the advancement of knowledge but also to the development of ethical sensitive and responsible people being at the same time.

From there the code separates the University's responsibility for student conduct from the community. The code gives the University the right to review any violations committed by students. An area of jurisdiction is also listed.

The proposed legislation comes at a time when the western states, hitherto remote from this kind of land despolage, are on the verge of a coal boom. The strip-mine variety.

On Indian lands near Farmington, N Mex., the Utah Coal Company has opened the largest strip mine in the United States and has plans to scoop out six million tons of coal a year to provide fuel for energy in the interior of the country.

West of all the U.S. Department of the Interior, the agency supposed to be most concerned with the nation's resources, recently advertised for bids for strip mining federally owned coal land in Wyoming. It was the Interior Department which called national attention to the ravages of striping and other forms of surface mining in a detailed survey several years ago. A department team which inspected the effects of surface mining said that this kind of mineral exploitation "debasers as well as disgraces our civilization."

The Interior Department says that surface mining has now affected more than four million acres of land in ten western states. Land stripping for coal accounts for about half of this total.

According to the U.S. Geological Survey, this represents an area equal to the size of the states of Delaware and Rhode Island.

Any criticism of strip mining always brings about an outcry from environmentalists, says that the procedures of how they are putting strip mined land back into good condition for use as tree farms, parks or grazing land.

The U.S. Bureau of Mines says, however, that less than 40 percent of such mines are reclaimed in any sense; after the power shovels have left the ditches and moved on.

Even reclaimed land has exacted a heavy toll of the environment. From the time the big power shovels move in until bulldozers have shaved rock and dirt back into gouged-out trenches, thousands of tons of soil can be washed into streams and rivers. Acid from the coal deposits can befoul water and kill aquatic life. Trees and, ground cover can be destroyed and wildlife along with it, will suffer.

In Kentucky it has been found that erosion on strip mined land is 1,000 times greater than on land covered with soil cover. As much as 27,500 tons of soil have been washed away from one square mile of strip mined land there.

From the opening section, the code lists and describes the various sanctions ranging from disciplinary reprimand to 20-year withdrawal. For example, who owns the coal affects the specific conduct regulations which are an outgrowth of the community concept.

The third section of the code outlines the offenses which are regulated by the code. The first offense listed is that a student "falsely reports or is guilty of false accusation, or false information, and any violation in this part. They vary in severity from a misdemeanor to a felony.

The second part deals with violations in this part, which include violations of the working draft, and any violation leading to a civil suit.

The final section of the code deals with the judicial process. The Code calls for a student judicial board, an appeals board, two campus judicial boards, and a student judicial board. From the Student Conduct Review Board, cases could go to the chancellor or president and the Board of Trustees.

Congress trying to wipe out strip mining

By John Banker

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON—Another effort is under way in Congress to establish a more quickly productive method of surface mining for coal.

Some attempts have been made in the past and have had varied results, but so far an adequate solution of the coal-mining associations and the labor unions.

The most recent federal effort, a $100 million loan for strip mining equipment, is well researched with facts and figures. It was done to stop a climate or increasing national concern about the nation's coal supply.

More and more thinking Americans are now willing to put limits on 'in the extent to which private interests can profit ahead of national welfare. They are thinking more about the legacy of natural resources which the nation must hand over to generations still to come."

Rep. Ken Hechler, D-W Va, has introduced legislation that would ban a strip mining for coal within six months after passage of the bill. It would also commit that the Federal Government to a large scale, long-range program of restoring millions of acres of strip mined land to future usefulness.

Reps. have always referred to strip mining as "a clear present danger to the welfare of the nation."

To the land, strip mining the land for coal deposits has ruined 300,000 acres of countryside. Only 76,000 acres have been reclaimed and only 6,000 reclaimed under state laws, to a same degree of uselessness.

West Virginia is supposed to have the nation's largest tracts on strip through the West Virginia conservationists that these laws "just haven't cut it.""""

Congress also claims, with good reason, that most state laws on strip mining are very weak, have too many exceptions, and are poorly enforced. Miners in some cases find it more profitable to mine timber than coal, they say. The money required for reclamation of gouged-out land.

Most important, Hechler's bill would provide for public inspection of all strip mining after the strip miners in the courts and not have to wait for miners to be given their life insurance.

The Interior, of the Interior, both of which have done little to stop the ravages of surface mining, both for coal and oil.

Hechler's bill would put enforcement of strip mining laws in the hands of the new Environmental Protection Agency rather than the Interior Department, which the congressmen feels could use more energy and diligence in pursuing its assignment as overseer of the nation's resources.

"Elementary principles of resource management," said a government report of several years ago, "declare that any nation must put a step on the necessary damage from future (strip) mining and be ready to program to repair the damage from past mining."

The congressman's bill would accomplish both aims.

Carpenters’ personal music hidden in impersonal Arena

By Glenn Amato
Special Writer

The Saturday evening Carpeters concert at the Arena was, at best, pleasantly disappointing—sincere praise, unfortunately, for a group that raised high expectations and never quite fulfilled them.

The Carpeters themselves were not wholly responsible. The major difficulty was in the setting itself. Arena is cold and impersonal, and this doesn’t conjure up a romantic atmosphere. The Carpeters are best caught in a small club, and the distant size of the Arena not only overwhelmed them, but reduced the intimacy of their music to a whisper in a gale.

At an informal press conference afterward, the Carpeters conceded that they prefer their coffee house-type surrogates and smaller audiences—“Not more than 8,000 people,” Richard Carpenter said.

A Review

All jokes aside, Carpenter had an excellent point. A glamorous lighting that Grand Funk sounds the same either on stage or in a recording. Since their distinction lies in producing mass music for mass, the effect does not vary. You don’t listen to them; they come after you, and you just come out Smashed from the disc.

The Carpeters are something different and very special, and yet there’s a discernible difference in listening to a lovely band called “Superstar” by yourself and with 8,000 others. It’s need to reach a mammoth audience the melody remains intact, but the mood is ob- scured. If you get a sense of size, it is size is irrelevant in a love ballad.

Cat that bit boy under observation

Four days have passed since a cat suspected of being a six-year-old Evergreen Terrace boy was brought in for observation. Both the cat and the child have four more days to wait before it can be deter- mined whether or not the animal is rabid.

Timmy, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Finney, was bitten by a light gray cat in a parking lot in front of his parents’ apartment about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

On Thursday, a cat, which was positively identified by the boy as the one that bit him, was picked up in the 800 block of E. Park Street. Later, another cat which resembled the boy’s description was found at West Front Drive near the YMCA.

Whether either of the two cats, now un- der observation shows signs of rabies,” said Mrs. Finney, “Timmy will have to take the rabies shot.

According to Mrs. Finney, however, Timmy seems to be doing fine and has not shown any signs of anything being wrong.

Karen Carpenter sounds the same, but the one-to-one ratio established on the record is gone. She’s a per- sonality, all right, but the effect is impersonal.

Some numbers clicked effec- tively, particularly when the tempo was upbeat and didn’t rely on the creation of a specific mood. A Hurt Bacharach’s melody relaxed and beautifully. “Knowing When To Leave” worked best. Richard Carpenter, who handles the arrangements, credits Bacharach as one of his major influences, and it shows. The arrangements have an infectious drive and cheer.

But, if it’s strange. All the advance hoopla, in addition to my own preconceived notions, let me to ex- pert something more. I think it all goes back to the fact the Carpeters are basically a quiet group, since they’re unwilling to compromise their excellent musical standards, you have to accept them on their own terms. To pull such a small group on that gigantic stage and then say “Entertain the masses” is a little cruel. The result is bound to be a letdown.

Denby Brooks first act warmup was extremely relaxed and entertaining, and I suppose that those people who went simply to see all those people in person got their money’s worth. But those of us who like the slow, sentimental ring of Karen Carpenter’s voice would have been better off listening to our record collections. Nothing beats one-to-one ratio.

BAS features talk on power of education

BY COURTLAND MULDOON

The second in a series of presentations sponsored by Black Academy of Students will feature Claude Kamerson, University Services to Cardinalgate, assistant to the president on campus security. Mr. Kamerson will speak on "Education as a Force for Social Revolution." According to the University Services worker, education at present is being used only to maintain the status quo and is always directed in favor of those who have the power.

"Happening that two people get the same kind of education," said Kamerson, "the man who owns the upper echelon of society has the advantage. He is the one who gets to move much faster."

"Now what has happened is the education which is supposed to be geared toward upward social mobility has become a force for the perpetuation of the status quo," he said.

"What I want to present to the black people here is a vein in which education can be made not to keep the status quo but make it bend and disappear so that people at the top can reach the upper level.

Education should be so reconceived as to perpetrate men's ability but not its social position, said Kamerson. "That's why I say education should be a force for social revolution."

Testing (ACT) exams. An内蒙古 student who does not meet either of these requirements can enter ISU during summer quarter on a conditional basis.

Out-of-state student must rank in the upper 40 percent of their graduating class in order to enter during any regular quarter. An ACT composite of 23 or higher is also acceptable. Those out-of-state students who do not rank in the upper 40 percent withdrawals—announcements he has made—will make as or before Nov. 13.

Nixon will fly to New York and then Chicago later Tuesday to address 5000-plate fund-raising dinner arranged by the Republican party to build up a kitty for next year's election campaign.

Faculty Council to hear report on stricter admission standards

UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF a Faculty Council report the University Services worker, education at present is being used only to maintain the status quo and is always directed in favor of those who have the power.

"Happening that two people get the same kind of education," said Kamerson, "the man who owns the upper echelon of society has the advantage. He is the one who gets to move much faster."

"Now what has happened is the education which is supposed to be geared toward upward social mobility has become a force for the perpetuation of the status quo," he said.

"What I want to present to the black people here is a vein in which education can be made not to keep the status quo but make it bend and disappear so that people at the top can also reach the upper level.

Education should be so reconceived as to perpetrate men's ability but not its social position, said Kamerson. "That's why I say education should be a force for social revolution."

The ad hoc committee studying the possibility of forming more restrictive admission standards will give its report at Tuesday's Faculty Council meeting at 1:30 p.m. in the Mississippi Room of the Student Union Center.

The committee has finished its study of a proposal made by President Robert G. Lawyer which would allow each college or school to establish more restricted admission and retention standards that are used by the University.

The present admission standards for in-state students for fall, winter, and summer will remain in the top half of their high school graduating class and a score of 27 or higher on the American College

Nixon wants pollution bill revised

KEY BERGAYNE, Pla. (AP)— In a possible prelude to an election year battle over how to clean up the environment, the White House said Monday it wants revisions in a strong new pollution control bill written by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, the chairman of the Senate, as a Democratic presidential nomination.

President's press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said "we are not satisfied with all aspects of" the legislation approved 88 to 8 by the Senate last week.

He declined to discuss what specific changes the Nixon administration plans in the bill, but said states should be allowed to play a major role in shaping the legislation.

In Washington, Muskie accused the administration of trying to undermine the bill which calls for a change in course in methods of controlling water pollution, sets 800 as a goal for ending all discharges of the nation's waterways and authorizes spending nearly $1 billion over the next four years.

The administration's stance on the water-control bill presumably was among the items taken up by President Nixon during the weekend as he worked and relaxed at his Key Biscayne compound.

"There's no question about the fact that the administration wants to proceed as quickly as possible in cleaning up the nation's waters," Ziegler said when asked about a New York Times report that the White House had begun an intensive campaign to get state governments to oppose the bill.

Ziegler described as "false" reports that Wallace D. Rankin, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, was unhappy and was considering leaving the administration.

"There has been no talk on our part or on his part about resigning," Ziegler said.

House action on the Muskie-sponsored bill is not expected until early next year. The legislation would shift to the federal government the main responsibility for water-pollution control. Since 1965 the states have had the job of setting water standards. subject to federal approval.

The President is expected to meet either Tuesday or Wednesday with Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, who returned Monday from a fact-finding trip to Vietnam.

Laird's report will help shape Nixon's next announcement on troop withdrawals—an announcement he has made he will make on or before Nov. 13.

Nixon will fly to New York and then Chicago later Tuesday to address 5000-plate fund-raising dinner arranged by the Republican party to build up a kitty for next year's election campaign.

Nudity on TV gets little protest

NEW YORK (AP) -- Nudity soon will have been shown on television this season and the networks have come out in favor of it. Nudity has been limited to the Paley International Television Festival, commercial networks say it's still a far cry.

The glimpses of nudity on PBS have been only part of the plot, and have been set in context with the rest of the series. England. The number of protests are so few that officials are surprised.

One station, WNET-13, New York, did not show the "Starman" sequence of "Masterpiece Theatre", saying that nudity has been shown this season, because it was part of the stories. "PBS said only seven or seven of its 24 stations from the total of the made-when-the-made-from-the-naked-production before broadcast. It arrived as a time lag, and other segments scheduled later this season.

Delegation arrives

Red China to set up U.N. base

NEW YORK (AP) -- A semi-official party from Peking flew into New York Monday to set up a base for travel to the United Nations. The party, consisting of 31 members, was aimed at crisis in the United Nations. Officials said if the United Nations backed down in its opposition to the Chinese advance party landed at Kennedy on a bright, clear autumn afternoon. The Chinese wave spectacles over traumatic situations. As they left the plane, the Chinese smiled unusually and seemed taken aback by the number of newsmen and photographers descending on them. They declined to talk with the press contingent.

The Chinese were driven in two limousines with an accompanying police car to the Roosevelt Hotel in mid-Manhattan. There a 10-floor suite of rooms had been reserved for the use.

There was no uniformed protective force. But about 30 plainclothes detectives looked out for the security of the guest in the hotel.

Demonstrators unnoticed by State Senate

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) -- Banished to deep pea jackets and blue overalls, where it had been hidden and avoided, the welfare demonstrators marched singing Monday to the capitol of the statehouse with a pig-like effigy of the governor's overlord, Gov. Richard J. Ogilvie was in his Chicago office and the Illinois legislature was in session. Only a few members of the Senate, which was to meet, noticed the presence of the piglet.

Under chily, gray-sodden sky, the demonstrators sang "We Shall Overcome" as they marched through the mostly empty Springfield business district.

A middle-aged woman in blue overalls, a man in a pig's face mask with a stethoscope perched on his head, a lady shop worker, a young black man in a crushed velvet dress with a beaded fringe adorned past the marchers and averted their eyes. She received cold.

The demonstration was sparked by; directness, general assistance, which has been condemned by the Ogilvie's. the idea, or to take effect how long it is used and the curb.

It was paraded across the stage by members of the Illinois Welfare Rights Organization, a group that sides of the governor have cited as a cause of unrest in the city.

Institute on crime and mental health begins on Tuesday

The second annual Institute on Law, Psychiatry and the Mentally Disordered Offender will be held Tuesday-Thursday at both the Student Center and the Holiday Inn, 624 S. Main.

Nearly 250 people are expected to attend the Institute, which is jointly sponsored by the Illinois Department of Mental Health, the Illinois Security Hospital at Joliet, and the Illinois Department of Corrections. The Institute will begin at 4:45 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center at 8:45 a.m. daily with an introductory address by Vernon J. Unckel, superintendent of the Illinois Security Hospital in Joliet. Thomas Eynon, professor at the Center for the Study of Crime, Deviance and Corrections at SIU, will give a descriptive overview on the mentally disordered offender.

Section one will meet in Ballroom C and feature Robert Retter, legal advisor to the Metropolitan Police Department of St. Louis, Mo., who will talk about "The Law Enforcement Officer and the Mentally Disordered Offender." The section will also feature Robert Schulte, clinical psychologist in the Division of Law and Psychiatry and Associate Professor at Topeka, Kan., and associate professor of law at the University of Kansas, who will speak on "The Determination of Competency." The section will close with section four in the Illini Room, where John B. Fossom, director of the department of psychology at University of Vermont Burlington, will discuss "Behavior Modification." Finally, section four will be in the Illini Room, where J.B. Fossom will talk on "Attitude Therapy." The Wednesday session will begin at 8 a.m. at Ibell Auditorium with an address by Norval Morris, executive director of the Center for the Study of Criminal Justice at the University of Chicago. Following Morris' address, at 9 a.m., R. M. Greenblatt, director of Clinical Services for the Institute for Reality Therapy at Los Angeles, Calif., and Erwin, director of the institute, will discuss "New Innovations in the Process." The final session of the day will be given at 1:30 p.m., by Thomas Thomas, associate professor of the college of law, and the Department of Psychiatry in the State University of New York in Syracuse, who will speak on "The Mental Health in the New York State University in Syracuse." The session will conclude at 3:30 p.m.

On Thursday, the final day of the Institute, four more discussion sessions will be held in the Student Center. Section five will be in Ballroom C and feature James P. Mann, director of New Products Planning and Development for Pfizer Parke-Davis, New York, N.Y., who will discuss "Current Research in Drugs and Behavior.

*This survey was compiled by the IPRG Consumer Research Committee. Prices were obtained between November 1 and November 3. Grocery stores surveyed were within a 20-mile radius of the Carbolade area. Of the stores sampled it was the objective of the Committee to find out which stores would be the least economical to shop at.

From the above survey it is evident that no hard and fast geographical area has demonstrated either lower or higher prices per se. Stores bearing the same chain name also vary in prices to a degree. Each individual store must be considered by itself.

The percentages indicate the difference on the items surveyed between the least expensive store and the other stores in rank order. For example the second least expensive store is 5.7 per cent more expensive than the least expensive store. The difference between the least expensive store and the most expensive store is 10.5 per cent.

Penney's in all categories is less expensive than all the other stores.

Office of Affirmative Action reviews complaints of campus discrimination

Faculty, staff or civil service workers who think they feel the bite of discrimination in their job may make a formal complaint to the Office of Affirmative Action, according to Richard C. Hayes, interim compliance coordinator for the office.

A bulletin from the office states, "All university personnel may file written charges of discrimination on account of race, color, religion or national origin, on a complaint form which will be provided by the office. (The office) shall notify the person as soon as possible after charging, request a written response and initiate an investigation of the charge."

Hayes said that the investigation would be of an informal kind headed by Jerry Lacey, assistant to the President for affirmative action.

United Fund drive likely to surpass its goal

SIU's United Fund drive should surpass its goal of $8,500, according to Joe Goodman, SIU's United Fund representative.

As of Monday, SIU had collected $3,362.42. With the drive ending on Dec. 3, Goodman said, there should be no problem surpassing SIU's stated goal.

"We should surpass it as we have for the last two or three years," said Goodman. "We don't have nearly all the payroll deduction or contributions cards back yet. Most of it comes toward the end."

According to United Fund records, 84 persons are using the payroll deduction method of contributing.

Of the $7,866 Carbondale community goal, $34,383 had been collected as of Friday.

Barbara Martin, administrative assistant, or herself. "We will seek to determine whether discrimination was committed or not," he said. "An investigation will result in a preliminary finding. He anticipates that the problems would be solved on this level.

If the problem is not solved by mutual consent at this level, he said, the matter will be presented to the Affirmative Action Review Committee. The committee will determine, on the basis of evidence presented by the office and the borrower or the complainant and respondent, whether discriminatory acts were committed or not. They will also make recommendations for resolving the complaint.

The Review Committee, composed of five members of the University community, appointed by the President, must include the President, in addition to the President, must include three persons of minority race and at least two civil service employees and not more than three persons of the same sex.

The members, he said, will serve for one year, except for two members who will serve six-month terms the first year. This is so an experienced committee will not come in every year. No member will be allowed to serve more than two consecutive terms, he continued.

Jerry Lacey or his representatives will serve as permanent advisor to the committee; however, no one from the office will be appointed to it.

Hayes added that if some kind of agreement could not be reached, "This office cannot dismiss personnel, but it doesn't mean we can't make a recommendation of such to the President's office."

"The intent of this procedure is to remove the barriers that inhibit individuals' performance or advancement on the basis of race or creed," he said.

"Butterflies" rated a comedy smash

A Review

"Butterflies Are Free" looks and sounds like another commercial Broadway hit, and there are a few little moments when it threatens to become such a community. But it is written with a conviction and skill that makes the formula and make it stick from the heart. It is really funny, hilarious and whimsical, and a number of scenes are honestly touching and perspicuous. The plot is a good one to say, but I have to stop talking about Geri Geri's character, which is directed very well. She is not overdrawn, but she never plays false with her character, and she never manipulates emotions. The performance is reasonably relaxed, and so we're at ease too.

Geri Geri can't out the gaps beautifully, but since they're so consistent with the people and the situation, they sound spontaneous rather than mechanical and machine-gunned. When said that nudity and formation are parts of life and therefore theatrically valid, the mother cranks. "So is diaphanous, but I wouldn't classify that as an attempt to make it look real to the audience." When the mother observes that no one could ever consider a nude, the mother cranks. I'd like to see them try. This is sterner, dryer, intelligent, witty

Student group drafts petition to define aims, organize workers

An initial step toward establishing as organization of student workers was taken Friday, as 15 students attended an organizational meeting of the Student Workers group, in the Student Coordinator's office.

The group drafted a petition which asks the administration for the action as an assurance of the availability of student jobs, ensuring the number of student teachers, work hours and ensuring that students will receive raises in pay when raises are due.

The petition also pledged the organization to act as a middle man between students and the people in power to discuss grievances and other pertinent factors concerning student workers.

Copies of the petition will be circulated throughout the campus.

No formal name for the organization was chosen. It had long been called the "Student Workers Union," but some students raised objection to calling the group a "union."

Mary Walker, University Ombudman, and Hugh Holler foreman, student at Bush Tower, spoke to the group.

Miss Walker said that the first step of organization should be the formation of a general statement of aims.

Hollers said that must supervisors and student workers would cooperate with the organization.

Recognition as an official student organization will be sought immediately, but a student representative from outside the group, told the group.

Letters will be delivered to supervisors urging them to inform students of the group's meeting and to delegate a representative of the students working with them to be present at the meeting, which is set for 6 p.m. Thursday in Activity Room I on the second floor of the Student Center.

We hope to have civil service representatives at the Thursday meeting. Miss Holler said: "Representatives of local unions have also been asked to attend."

The performance was attended by Jan. Looking at the box office results for the Thursday evening, John Foster's "Butterflies Are Free," for the student group, last week in the difficult task of affecting blunders. However, Holllers never overdoes the shaky bit as the audience, and Terry Doherty is accepted as its director.

Radical economist will explain theory

For more than 15 years radical economists have been advocating "universal capitalism" as the cure for the United States depression. They are now at it again, proposing a new five percent per capita tax on all U.S. residents.

On the other hand, buying and selling on the "black market" for five percent per cent cannot support an economy.

To Keino, the answer lies in a method of financing future growth that avoids the black market and ends by new owners representing 95 percent of U.S. population who own little or no property. Keino's plan for widening the base of capital ownership among the 95 percent involves the setting up of a "Capital Diffusion Insurance Corp." according to Finance magazine.

This organization would insure that loans made by individuals to corporations financing new capital would be paid off by income from the new capital in a given time. The bank, or bank or other lender, and borrower would be in a year for five years loan. A small down payment may be made.

Then, according to Keino's theory, the trust officer could buy a diversified portfolio of high-grade capital financing equity for the family. The stock would be held to grow until the new capital paid for the loan.

In theory, the family would own stock worth $18,000 in five years which would yield an annual income of $4,000 over their regular wages.

Keino says this plan would take at least one million families a year off welfare in the first five years and during a second five-year period this would accelerate to five-million families a year.

Rural development hits Congress

WASHINGTON (AP)—A small but determined group of Senate Republicans, tacitly encouraged by President Nixon, is challenging a bill by 1973-minded Democratic leaders that seeks to ensure the biggest life preserver to rural America.

The confrontation is over rural development, a package of proposals in Congress designed to pump new money into small towns, help the beleaguered farmers and divert future population growth to the countryside.

The three major bills, two in the Senate and one in the House, are the main artillery. Each basically aims at reviving creating new or expanded federal credit institutions with a wide variety of programs ranging from housing to farm ownership. Each would lose hundreds of millions of dollars into rural areas.

They are aimed at making small towns and the countryside better places to live.

The newest entry is a bill introduced by Sen. Frank Church, D-Utah, calling for an overhaul of all and programs, including grants of up to $78 million a year to rural communities for carrying out approved development projects.

Meanwhile, Sen. Herman Talmage, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., who heads a rural-development subcommittee, has proposed a new federal network of regional banks to generate new capital in rural areas. In the House, a measure sponsored by Agriculture Committee Chairman W. R. Poage, D-Tex., also calls for revising and expanding rural and responsibility.

A basic question, at least between the Talmage-Humphrey bill and Dale's proposal, is whether a new bureaucracy is required to carry out rural and Talmage, according to aides, is committed to the concept of a "rural development bank" to develop federal assistance. Aslany says the legislative challenge posed by the Dale bill has hardened Talmage's determination to push for quick Senate action.

Some sources say an important factor is the attraction the Dale bill has for Republicans who previously had been persuaded to go along with Democratic-sponsored rural development.

Carbondale lacks city attorney

Applications being accepted

Applications for the city attorney vacancy are being accepted by City Manager William Schmidt.

"Our office has received several applications from local attorneys and we are working on those at the moment," Schmidt said.

"So far the word has not gotten around that we are looking for an attorney, but we do anticipate applications from outside the area.

"The position is a salaried position. Pay ranges from $13,300 to $14,557 depending upon the applicants qualifications."

The new attorney will be chosen by the City Council, working with the help of his staff and three local attorneys.

Those three attorneys are George S. Fawcett, John C. Fierich and John K. Fierich. They served in the capacity of interim attorneys and will assist in the selection process.

Bridges recently was named state's attorney for Jackson County. At the moment the city is without a legal consultant. Ron Briggs had decided to act in an advisory capacity to the city as to his workload permits. This work will be unstable.

"If something major comes up and we do need an attorney the city will contract out the work to a local attorney," Schmidt said.

Schmidt stated that applications would be considered for some time and that a final choice would not be made in the near future.

The council will be kept advised of how we are progressing but I will not comment further until we have examined all the possibilities."

Hill-less Harriers finish 4th for league title

Without Dave Hill, the SIU cross country team—defending champion—could only winer a third place finish at the Midwestern Conference meet Saturday in DePaul.

The Harriers accumulated 69 points while favored Ball State took the league crown with 36 followed by Illinois State with 34 and Northern Illinois (111) wound up in the cellar.

Jack St. John, a freshman from Racine, Wisconsin, was the highest placing Harrier, finishing fourth on the six-mile course in 31:14. Teammate Gary Craig was right behind him in 31:17. Team captain Ken Sneider ran 32:34 for 12th, but the other Southern runners trailed far behind.

Gerry Harnett finished 21st in 31:44. Carl McDowell Bank in 32:45 and Jeff Baysin 27th in 33:45.

Steve Wynder of Ball State won the individual title at Northern’s 20-mile course. Wynder was timed in 2:41.3 and defending champion Charles Wardman of Indiana State took second in 2:42.

SIU coach Lew Hartung summed SIU’s unsuccessful attempts at defending the league’s championships in three words: “No David Hill.”

But he praised the team’s effort of trying to overcome the handicap of running without Hill. “St. John ran extremely well,” Hartung said. Craig also was commended for running in right behind St. John.

“Nailer tried too hard,” he said. “He tried to run up from all the way, so he broke in the last two miles placing 111th.”

“The other kids did a good job,” Hartung added.

Hill injured his hip in practice over a week ago and wasn’t able to make the trip to DePaul. The sophomore had been burning up course records at home and away. He has broken five course records at a row dating back to the Illinois State dual meet Oct. 1 at SIU’s Midland Hills course. Hill has also won his last six meets including the Illinois Intercollegiates and a dual meet at Kansas.

Hartung said he doesn’t think there “would have been any question of us winning if Hill had been there.”

The Harriers will pass up the Central Collegiates this weekend at Colorado Springs because of another string of bad luck. Nailer was in an automobile accident Saturday night, and—although not seriously hurt—he received cuts and bruises besides being shaken up.

Hartung said it would a week before Nailer will run again. The court, and Hill should be running at that time, too.

But the season isn’t over for the Harriers yet. “We will try straight through now for the NCAA’s,” Hartung said.

The NCAA championships are Nov. 22 in Knoxville, Tenn.

Phi Sigs lose, 20-19

Bonapartes retain IM football title

It was the second consecutive win in as many years for Bonapartes over Phi Sigma Kappa, as the two teams played in the finale a year ago when Bonapartes won a 7-5 thriller.

As an intervention late in the first quarter set up the first touchdowns for the Phi Sigs. and they went in front, 6-0.

Bonapartes defense went to work in the second stanza and, in a span of minutes, Bonapartes had taken a 14-6 lead Phi Sigma rallied in the first half, however, and with only 14 seconds remaining on the clock, quarterback Jim Rubing found Glenn Lloyd in the end zone. The extra point left Bonapartes with a slim 14-13 lead at the half.

Both teams exchanged touchdowns with missed conversions before Bonapartes ran out the clock to win its first-place trophy. 20-19

Back is the dressing room. Warming up, he muses the same million dollar question. “Why didn’t that stuff work? I should have given the kids a chance,” he said as he made a move for the locker room.

There were no answers to Warming’s questions. His reverting back to doubling silence of the old locker room reminded him of the kind of ballgame his squad played—stagnatingly, a dour and slow.

The Bulldogs had outgained Southern in total yardage, 499-411, completed more passes, 12 of 23 to three in seven tries for Southern, and held on for first downs, 32-24. So what happened? Wallace didn’t know.

“We thought we could run on them and we could,” he said. “We thought we could throw it; it was there. And we could. Of course the object of the game was to win. Winning always the object, but somehow it eluded the Bulldogs.

Frosh find offense late, lose to Western Illinois

The Salukis offense proved to be not enough for the Western Illinois defense after a slow first half. The Illinois offense was in the lead after the half. A big game by Senior tailback Artie O'Byrne helped the Salukis take the lead in the third quarter.

The loss was the second of the season for Western against one of Western Illinois' recent teams. The Salukis won 10 of their last 14 games.

The disappointing outcome in the school's first home game cost an opportunity for a victory, according to coach Bob O'Neal. The Salukis' defense was impressed by Bob O'Neal and guided the Salukis to their only interception of the game.

With the Salukis behind 16 in the fourth quarter, Hanna starred a running game from its own 20-yard line. Two O'Neal runs netted 20 yards and brought the ball to midfield.

With third and fourth on the Western 40-yard line, Hanna completed a pass to Rich Kanner for a first down at the Leatherneck 27. Two plays later, Kanner ran to the third down at the 3-yard line. Four plays and complete passes from Kanner to running back took the ball to the 11-yard line. The Salukis' defense held the ball at the 1-yard line. The ball was on the Salukis' 15-yard line.
