IDOT requests City to study transit

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

The Mass Transit Commission did not get the official promise Monday of $32,000 it expected to help pay for a feasibility study on a proposed transit system.

Illinois Department of Transportation officials instead said the city would need to send a letter to IDOT requesting the money. But it still is expected the money will be available.

IDOT’s chief of downstate area programs, John De Laurentis, said the city would have to make the request to meet federal funding guidelines. Because of this, he said the city should conduct the study.

Although the University has proposed a $300,000 increase that would provide about $600,000 over five years, the transit commission would not be eligible for IDOT funds for the study or to help fund the transit system.

Transit system coordinator Dave Motsinger said he was concerned the city would try to control the project if it is responsible for finding a firm to carry out the study. He said the system should remain with the party that controls the budget, which he said would be students.

Drayton Rose, project coordinator, said while students were willing to put out the $300,000, they were apprehensive about losing control of the system.

"We’re just trying to protect the interest of the major donor," he said.

IDOT official David Speck said students could "simply pull the funds" by not seeking approval from the Board of Trustees.

"It’s more control do you want?" he asked the commission.

Board members said the city and the University would have to work a developing relationship with IDOT to cooperate to receive the federal support.

But IDOT officials were not completely satisfied with the project so far.

The IDOT officials said the Saluki Mass Transit Board of Directors, an independent panel to control the system, will be

Parts say final polls irrelevant

Republicans and Democrats don’t agree on polls. They do agree the polls are unimportant during the final days of the presidential campaign.

With the election coming to an abrupt end today, neither side is taking its lead, or lack thereof, lying down.

A Chicago Sun-Times-Gallup Poli taken Nov. 3 through 5 shows George Bush leading Michael Dukakis by 15 points.

"Don’t believe the polls," Sen. Paul Simon said. Bush was ahead in the state, but the results were not listed as the leader in any of the polls.

Simon said the race by fewer than 10,000 votes.

But the lack of interest in the polls was not as deep felt on the Republican side with Bush vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle working like they are two points down," Sen. Robert Dole said during a recent stop in Carbondale.

Like Simon, Dole told of his experience with the polls that had him leading the Republican primary after a landslide victory in Iowa.

"If I was elected president in Iowa," Dole said, See PARTIES, Page 6

Bush in lead; Dukakis promises upset

United Press International

George Bush and Michael Dukakis’ closed-door meeting on Tuesday was the most significant event of the presidential campaign.

The two candidates met in a secret meeting with Carter administration officials participating as witnesses.

The meeting was the culmination of a plan to end the campaign and focus on the future.

Dukakis and the Bush campaign agreed to a "cold war" until the election.

Dukakis was asked about the meeting.

"We’re not going to talk about the meeting," he said.

Dukakis said he and Bush met to discuss the campaign and the future.

At least 600 people killed in south China earthquake

BEIJING (UPI) — Medical and rescue teams bamped by rugged terrain mounted an emergency relief effort Monday after at least 600 people were reportedly killed in a massive 7.4-magnitude earthquake that ravaged a remote mountain region of southwest China. The quake, one of the worst this century in China, struck Sunday night in southeastern Yunnan Province. It measured 7.4 on the open-ended Richter scale, officials of the State Seismological Bureau said in Beijing.

Minister attempting to unite African leaders

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — The white minority government of "Great Mother" South Africa plans a "new" round of political reform and negotiations for sharing national power with the black majority, Chris Hani, minister of constitutional development, said Monday. The U.S. government, Hani said, would bring together leaders to rewrite the nation's constitution, and hinted at the participation of Nelson Mandela, South Africa's long-suffering black political prisoner.

Wife suspected of poisoning estranged colonel

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — Police arrested the ex-wife and servants of the estranged Col. Jean-Claude Paul, who died over the weekend, on suspicion of poisoning his pumpkin seed oil. Radio Station KLAN reported Monday. Police Chief Georges Vaile said officers arrested Kirelle Delindo, Paul's former wife, and two servants shortly after his death Sunday, independent Radio Haiti later said.

Nine die when train strikes maintenance car

EPERNAY, France (UPI) — A train side-tracked by an improperly positioned switch crashed into a maintenance car and derailed Monday evening east of Paris, killing nine railroad workers. About 13 people, some of them victims of the crash, are hospitalized. A Cardiff, Wales, named "Carlsen" a maintenance car full of workers near Epernay, 70 miles east of Paris.

Government fails to check State Department

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has failed to re-examine the background of three-fourths of State Department workers with top-secret clearance — a violation of its own regulations, a congressional report shows. A new wave of the workers spared from re-examination in the last five years have been cleared for duty abroad and given access to top-secret military information.

Neutral gas price hikes likely in some areas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Natural gas supplies should be adequate to meet U.S. demand this winter, but temporary price hikes likely in some regions due to delays in replacing units that went down for market sales, the American Gas Association said Monday. A report by the association's gas supply committee said the increased cost of supplies is due to transportation bottlenecks — also may lead to shortages and delivery problems in some areas.

No takers as noodle give-away gets started

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York City Monday began its controversial program to distribute free noodles in an attempt to give low-income residents a healthy meal. No one showed up to try the spread of AIDS — but nobody showed up. By midmorning, more than four hours after the Health Department opened the doors to what is believed to be the first program of its kind in the United States, only a few demonstrators were in sight, carrying signs supporting the program as a means of combating AIDS.

Pillsbury will create spin-off of Burger King

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — The Pillsbury Co. said Monday it will spin off Burger King and create a new corporation of the fast-food chain, but a stock analyst said the effort to blunt a British company's $4.6 billion offer for Last quarter, the Grand Metropolitan PLC, with offices in Montvale, N.J., has offered $9 a share to those tendering by Tuesday night in its latest bid for Pillsbury.

Christian rock bands combine songs, evangelism

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

There wasn’t a Jerry Falwell in sight Saturday night as people of all ages came to the SIU Arena to celebrate the Heart Attack tour. Christian rockers White Heart and Mylon LeFevre’s Broken Heart blended tunes with evangelism as they brought more than 800 screaming fans to their feet throughout most of the concert.

Concert Review

White Heart proved to be a very athletic band as their energy carried them through blistering numbers. Lead singer Ric Piorian was especially acrobatic in such high-spirited creations as “God Made Convertibles” and “Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Christian.”

LeFevre’s Broken Heart produced a clean sound that bore an uncanny resemblance to their actual recordings. Although the group was definitely not lip-synching, it seemed that some of their background vocals were pre-recorded in the studio.

The individual band members showcased particular talents, as bassist Tommy Ska and drummer Chris McKee shook off their riveting solos. Ricky Strom, rhythm guitarist, and Mark Gerome, keyboards, made good use of a trumpet and trombone during one number, and lead guitarist Gordon Kennedy dazzled the eye and ear with intricate runs and riffs throughout the evening in a performance that would make Eddie Van Halen take notice.

The group’s stage show had all the pizzazz of an M-TV concert video, complete with flashing multi-colored lights and moody fog, but the boys in the band made it quite clear that special effects played second fiddle to their message:

GERMSEHL: Took center stage toward the end of the band’s set for an informal talk with the predominantly young audience.

In a sort of laid back sermon, Germeuhl reminded the crowd, “God never promised us life would be easy because—ground rule—life is hard. But He did promise that each and every one of us is special enough for Him to make and special enough to let his son die for us.”

After inviting the audience to sing along on “Carried Away,” the group was cheered back for a dynamic encore performance of the title cut from their “Vital Signs” LP. Mylon LeFevre and Broken Heart had the impossible by topping White Heart in the second half of the concert.

LeFevre was born again a Christian rock concert in 1974 and overcame 12 years of cocaine and heroin addiction to found the Broken Heart ministry in 1982.

LeFevre and his Grammy Award winning band dished out a healthy dose of stage theatrics as they outdid White Heart with exploding fireballs, heavier fog, more lights and a neon cross hanging high above the stage.

LIKE GEREMEHL, LeFevre’s words of inspiration didn’t weigh heavy like an overwrought sermon, but served as a sort of pep talk to the young people in the audience.

LeFevre poked gentle fun at the tele-evangelists whom he feels have made winning people to Christ more difficult through their bad examples.

“If you buy one of our T-shirts that doesn’t mean God’s gonna give you some special blessing. You could get hit by a train while wearing one of our shirts. You’d look good when they found you, but…”

LeFevre cooled, joining the audience in a good laugh.

The singer also advised, “Don’t act holy, be holy.”

As for their music, LeFevre and Broken Heart fashioned a musical blend as a forehead guitar line rocked and swayed in unison throughout the set.

LeFevre showedcase his wonderful soul-flavored voice on each tune as “Tread Up It,” “Come Fly With Me,” and “Crack the Sky.”

LeFevre brought White Heart back on stage for a final number, in which all the band members embraced and sung in unison.

WHY I SUPPORT COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AND SIUC/IEA/NEA

In my academic experience, I have seen a major shift in the administrative structure of American universities. The concepts of mutual respect and shared governance, which were in place up to the early 1970’s, are now greatly diluted. "Gentlemahly agreement" are now an anachronism.

To ensure the proper checks and balances and to maintain a healthy university environment, it has become very clear to me that a women, mutual and legally binding agreement addressing the rights of faculty is the only way faculty can be treated equally.

This is especially true in a university which in the not-too-distant past fired 104 faculty members, including me, with tenure.

Over 15 years ago, this university signed a pledge to abide by the principles enunciated in the 1960 statement on Academic Freedom and Tenure. Yet today we have a totally inadequate grievance procedure.

Over 15 years ago affirmative action became the law, yet the affirmative action policies at my university have been woefully inadequate.

Over 5 years ago faculty spoke out on the academic priorities of this campus, yet those recommendations have not been acted upon.

While the salaries of the administration are at their zenith, faculty salaries have plummeted to their nadir.

I support the SIUC IEA/NEA organizing effort. Among their many successes they are directly responsible for getting rid of the 2% tax on faculty salaries. Their program is in the best tradition of the American educational system, reflecting and representing faculty and educational personnel at all ranks. I believe they will do an excellent job in restoring academic freedom, economic security and quality education at SIUC.

State money, advice important to transit

AN IMPORTANT piece of the mass transit puzzle fell into place Monday when Illinois Department of Transportation officials pledged $2,000,000 to pay for a feasibility study.

The money is important. Without IDOT's support, the study could not have been funded by the University and city.

Any savings to the University is crucial, given the austere budget of the University.

IDOT'S COMMITMENT is more important than those much-needed dollars. IDOT's willingness to search out an alternative to bus service is a welcome indication that the agency knows how the system can serve the community as a whole.

What's important is IDOT's willingness to work with the students and the city. As DeLaurentiis said, "We don't go barging in and try to take over the project. The IDOT students know the concerns of the people who ride the bus. We ask how the system can serve the community as a whole."

THE STUDENTS discovered the need for a feasibility study when they learned this week that the city will not be able to pay for a bus service. The agency that has overseen bus lines in other towns, and whose personnel seem eager to help Carbondale.

JOHN DELAURENTIIS, division of public transportation section chief for non-urban areas, says the department was interested in helping Carbondale since 1979, when a feasibility study similar to that being conducted was approved by the mass transit board.

IDOT knows what questions the study must answer. It knows that adventurers of all ages will ask how good the train is, how good the transit system is and how much would the transit system improve the city.

Despite the fact there are many questions that have not been answered, this is the first time a transit proposal has reached Carbondale. It is the first time the UDIT, city and state have been working together toward the system.

THE CITY'S commitment to mass transit is a clear signal that we are closer to the day when convenient, economical transportation will be available in Carbondale.

Please, take the time to give blood, it could save more than your dignity

Before I transferred here from a tumor center, I had always heard what a fun place the hospital was to go to. I didn't decide here, however, for the "party school" image, but for the fact that is spent in the city by students, but they don't seem to realize that Carbondale is a "collegiate town."

The city officials and citizens of Carbondale seem to be saying that it's all right for us to spend money here eating out, paying rent, etc., but it is not okay for us to go to the hospital. I want to have a good time, even if no one else gets hurt and property is not damaged.

The SUC administration seems to be going a little over the board of the "party school" image. Suddenly SUC is going to be a well-respected university. What a kick to a respectable university to prospective students.

Halloween weekend should not end

Dear Daily Egyptian,

I would like to address this letter to a few people who aren't going to be giving blood this week.

In my work with the blood drive, I have asked many people to donate blood. The answers I get are so often full of apathy it's pathetic. The worst of these responses is the ever-popular, "I don't have the means to do it." Here are your priorities: I can't believe that people aren't willing to spend 5 to 10 minutes to help save not only one, but possibly many lives.

To these people, I would like to convey a few points.

First of all, there is a bad shortage of blood in this community. Blood banks and local hospitals look to SUC as their primary source for blood donations. These people depend on us, they need our help so they can help others.

Secondly, I would like to point the screen that if you've been deferred once from giving, you are not deferred for life. If you've been deferred for any reason besides hepatitis, cancer, epilepsy or heart disease, I urge you to try again.

Thirdly, I would like to make people aware of what happens to the blood they donate. The blood goes into the system for surgery, but is broken down and used to help other people with anemia, leukemia, hemophilia and many other diseases or conditions. Lastly, I just wanted to let everyone know that the blood drive isn't about breaking records and getting a glossy status. The blood drive is about saving lives and giving a little of yourself so that someone else can have so much. So, if you are one of those people who don't have time this week, I have one question for you. If you or your friend, brother or sister, mother or father, needed blood for some reason, would you expect it to be there, wouldn't you? Well, surprised if you don't give! It won't be there. So make an appointment and keep it, or just walk in to the ballrooms. Either way, please give blood this week. It's very important.

Mike Sells, senior, social work.

Halloween weekend should not end

Some questions the study is expected to answer include feasibility and potential eligibility for federal funds. How the services will be funded, what streets will be used and when convenient.

Despite the fact there are many questions that have not been answered, this is the first time a transit proposal has reached Carbondale. It is the first time the University, city and state have been working together toward the system.

THE CITY'S commitment to mass transit is a clear signal that we are closer to the day when convenient, economical transportation will be available in Carbondale.

Virus story unbalanced

Well, M'ghed Alba, I am glad that you gave the people who read your article in this week's Daily Egyptian the benefit of understanding something in computer science about something he probably knows very little about, but I see the problem arises with the lack of clear thinking on the part of students. Students should be doing assignments that are due almost every other day. If we are here to support the instructors, not to replace them. Although this group of students is a minority, these problems seem to occur often. This is a major problem that should be looked into. The problems SUC is facing and making this university jump to the level of more respected universities.

I personally don't think that the Halloween celebration should be ended just because of the irresponsible actions of a few this year. You can't judge a whole event on a few isolated incidences of misguided behavior. As the Daily Egyptian has heard about this year's Halloween celebration is that it was colder than in years past and that everyone had a good time. Hopefully, people in charge aren't going to overreact because of a few bad apples. People are trying to cancel Halloween in the future. — Kevin DeLanteri, Junior, Political Science.
Hitchhiking makes highways unsafe

Violators risk assault, robbery and rape

By Joy Simpkins

Hitchhiking could be a dangerous pastime, according to Carbondale County Sheriff Bill Kilquist.

Kilquist said some of the dangers of hitchhiking are assault, battery, rape and robbery to both the hitchhiker and the driver.

Other dangers are that a vehicle pulling off the road to pick up a hitchhiker also can cause traffic to slow or stop and cause an accident or the hitchhiker can be hit by intoxicated drivers or drivers who do not see them.

According to state law, hitchhiking is illegal.

Police said they've arrested hitchhikers who have been convicted of offenses including burglary, theft and assault.

Police officers usually give a verbal warning to hitchhikers to stay off the road and move on. However, the city ordinance states hitchhiking is a traffic violation. A ticket is issued, ranging from $10 to $500, along with a notice to appear in court.

"Even though we usually pass over the problem, we do frown upon hitchhiking," Carbondale Police Chief Ed Johnson said.

Repair of jail among issues for board candidates

By Kimberly Clarke
Staff Writer

Issues facing candidates from seven districts for positions on the Jackson County Circuit Court judges for the repair of the jail's sinking corner, deciding whether to have a grand jury, and the implementation of the 911 emergency dialing system.

The issue raises questions such as who is to blame for the problem and who will ultimately pay for it. Some candidates feel the 2 a.m. closing hours for bars in Carbondale should be the same throughout the county. Another issue facing the candidates is whether liquor vendors should have to have a dial-up system, which would protect them from liability. Candidates are also deciding if the 911 emergency dialing system and how this system will be funded if implemented.

In District 1, William "Bill" Ablat, Republican, is running against Larry Pratte.

Bill Grieb currently holds this position but is running for the circuit clerk's position. Candidates for District 2 are 10-year Republican incumbent Larry Lay and Jackery Kerley, assistant to the vice president of student affairs at the University, challenging incumbent Natalie Triebel.

In the 7th District, Republican Ginger McCaughey is challenging John D. Taylor for the remaining two years of his appointed term. Taylor was appointed to the seat earlier this year when Doris Weaver resigned.

The other race in District 7 is between six-year incumbent Greg Schaefer and Republican Gerald Holmes. They are voting for a four-year term.

Winchester seeking to regain district seat

By Scott Parry
Staff Writer

Since the race began two months ago, the battle to represent the 58th District in the Legislature has been one fought over.

Republican Robert Winchester, hoping to regain the seat he held for ten years from incumbent Rep. David Phelps, has been issuing campaign ads on the idea that Phelps has not been doing all he can for the people of his district.

"Bob Winchester has proven he can do things in Southern Illinois," Nancy Bridges, coordinator for the Winchester campaign, said.

Among the leading issues has been Phelps' vote against a tax increase and the loss of the Hardin County Work Camp. Phelps said the loss of the camp was out of his control and there was "nothing I could do to save this facility."

As for the tax increase, Phelps said the tax increase would be beneficial to the people of his district unless it was raised too high. It is for education.

"I don't think it would be good for this district if it didn't," Phelps said.

Until then, Phelps said, he would consider other means of gathering the funds needed to run the state.

Phelps attacked Winchester for his "negative" campaigning, saying it proves his opponent "has lost respect for the people."

Bridges disagrees, saying the ads are dealing with the issues.

She, however, believes the advertising put out by the Phelps campaign is bad because it is a direct attack on Winchester. Phelps said his opponent has a misunderstanding of what negative advertising is, saying his is based on public record, while Winchester's is not.

Both sides feel confident they will come away victorious.

To All Faculty....

The SIUC IEA-NEA Organizing Committee invites you to meet Ann Shadwick, President of the California Faculty Association, the largest higher education bargaining unit in the country. The meeting will be held in the Illinois Room of the Student Center on November 9, from 4:30-5:30 P.M.

Professor Shadwick is in her second term as CFA President, and has headed CFA's bargaining team. She is a member of the library faculty at San Francisco State University, a member of the National Education Association's Standing Committee on Higher Education; she has served on the Academic Senate and has been a political lobbyist for higher education.

We urge you to attend, especially those of you who are undecided. Professor Shadwick, your faculty colleague, can give you a first hand accounting of the impact collective bargaining has had on faculty in higher education and how it has benefited faculty.

P.O. Box 483
Dundee, Il 60118
WASHINGTON (SHNS) — Here's a guide on what to look for in the election returns that you can expect to come in tonight.

The first thing to remember is that the running total of popular votes will change as votes are counted, but networks feature prominently are meaningless. The number that really matters is 270—the number of electoral votes needed to win the White House.

If Bush wins, he'll have to carry California, where the polls close at 7 p.m., Florida, 8:30, and the vote opens in the South, Plains and Rocky Mountains.

If Bush is to win, he'll have to carry California, where the polls close at 8:30. If Bush should win there, then the election may not be sure for Bush. That doesn’t mean Dukakis is on his way to the White House if he loses Bush in Kentucky, but it would be a sign he’s running stronger than expected.

THE ABC, NBC and CBS evening news programs will be the next indication. The networks interview voters exiting polling places in key precincts throughout the day all over the country. Network officials have pledged not to announce the results of polling in a state until the polls close in that state, but they'll know in the late afternoon what the likely results will be.

The key to understanding what the networks know is listening to the code words they use on those newscasts. If the anchor says it's going to be a good night for Bush, you bet her data show Bush has won. If they say it's close, then maybe it's closer than expected, but it's unlikely an upset in the making. If they say it's very close, then that could mean you're in for a long night.

The thing to remember about exit polls is that despite politicians’ criticisms of them, they are almost always on target. There is one exception: California, where the Republicans put together a massive absentee-ballot operation and the exit polls underestimated GOP strength. A dead heat in California exit polls would mean a likely Republican victory.

Six states close their polls at 6 p.m. and are all locked for Bush as the exception of Vermont, where the race is thought to be close.

If Vermont goes for Dukakis, or if any of the other five — Florida, Indiana, Georgia, South Carolina or Virginia — are lost, it might not be a sure Bush win.

At 8:30 p.m. you'll get an indication of whether it's going to be a Bush landslide. If West Virginia, traditionally a Democratic state, but where Bush wins until recently had the Republican ahead, goes for Bush, it's all over. If Dukakis holds onto it, it doesn't mean much.

Also at 8:30, the polls close in Ohio, a state in which Bush is expected to win. If he doesn't, it's possible to put together a scenario in which Dukakis wins the presidency, although the Democrat would still have a long way to go. North Carolina, where Bush is favored, also closes at 8:30.

But the real key to the evening will come at 7 p.m. That's when 10 states, including most of the major battleground states, close their polls. Among those will be Pennsylvania, Texas, Michigan, Missouri, Illinois, New Jersey and Wisconsin.

For the network they have pledged to keep the presidential winner nationally when the voting has ended in enough states to give either candidate the 270 electoral votes needed. They will do so even if polls haven't closed in some states.

If Dukakis doesn't pull a major upset, but wins enough of those battleground states to stop Bush from going over the top in the 7 p.m. wave, the Republic will almost certainly have enough electoral votes to win the 11 states with an 8 p.m. closing times report. These states are Arizona, Iowa, Colorado, Louisiana, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Mexico, New York, Rhode Island, South Dakota and Wyoming.

States with 9 p.m. closing times include Idaho, Montana, North Dakota and Utah, all seen as safely in Bush's column. Only if Dukakis sweeps the major 7 p.m. states can be keep the result in doubt until 10 p.m., when California — the biggest prize with 56 electoral votes, along with Oregon, Washington, and Hawaii — report.

What will you be doing on November 8?

• Check your ballot

Jazz, modern dance pieces demonstrate various ideas

By Theresa Livingston

The Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theatre presented an evening of jazz and modern dance Friday night at Shryock Auditorium.

Dunn's program featured original pieces choreographed by SIORF faculty and students, as well as adaptations of established pieces. Various themes were addressed in performances by SIRDY dancers as well as members of the Dunn Barnes Dance Company.

"My Tribute to God," performed to Vivaldi's

Dance Review

"Concerto in B Flat," was choreographed by students Kin Ng and Hiro Furusho. Ng performed the solo.

Ng carried through with his religious focus in the following piece. Titled "Where Will You Be On That Day?" the dance was based on the Book of Revelation in the Bible. Dancers clad in black and white costumes acted out Ng's perception of what the second coming of Jesus Christ will be like.

"Dedicated to Freedom in South Africa: The Struggle Continues" was originally choreographed by Catherine Vacher with variations and additions by Melissa Joy DeBella and Danielle L. Cormons. Inspired by jailed South African Nelson Mandela, the dance featured dancers performing first individually, then as a group, symbolizing the oppression experienced by victims of the apartheid system.

"Blues in Motion" placed the dancers in a Roaring '20s dance hall. Complete with redors and flappers, the dancers portrayed nightlife in the smoke-filled gin joints of yesteryear.

Clarke: Age isn't the issue

By Richard Goldstein Staff Writer

The age of 74-year-old state Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, is not an issue in the campaign for the seat of the 16th District, state senator candidate L. Richard Clarke said Monday.

Clarke, D-de Soto, said Dunn has resorted to mud-slinging by accusing Clarke of modelmaking.

"(Dunn's) campaign has taken a turn of the Republican national campaign," Clarke said. Clarke was referring to an interview on a local television station in which Dunn said that Clarke is trying to make Dunn's age an issue and that Clarke called Dunn "senile."

Clarke, 56, denied that he is trying to make age an issue in the campaign and said Dunn is trying to influence the senior citizens population of the district by portraying Clarke as an unfavorable light. Dunn declined to comment on Clarke's statements.

"I know how I feel at age 56 and (Dunn) must certainly know how he feels at 74," Clarke said.

"We have not had an active senator working for the entire district...not just for Murphysboro and Carbondale," he said.

Technique gives body awareness

The Alexander Technique is a way to become aware of your body. It teaches you where muscles are tensioned, how to release it, and how to have freeer movement. Essentially, it is consciousness of previously unconscious habits.

To Your Health

Often, people who have chronic pain become interested in the technique which does not claim to be a cure for existing conditions, but as a re-education to prevent further movement.

People have reported relief from such conditions as tension headaches, arthritis, back pain, asthma, peptic ulcer, stomach ulcers, and invertebrate colitis. The technique also is beneficial to musicians and others who hold their bodies in unusual positions for long periods of time, including students who sit for long hours in classrooms.

F.M. Alexander developed the technique in the 1920s when he read that movement and the loss of voice that did not respond to medical treatment. Alexander, who was giving one-man recitations of Shakespeare in Australia, decided he must be doing something to contribute to the problem.

In observing himself in mirrors, he noticed he threw his head downward and back, compressing his spine, in such a way as to create a difficulty in breathing. He then realized that this stressful pattern and the awkwardness disappeared.

about 10 points in the most recent nationwide polls, hoped his commercial would tail off his support, while Dukakis knew only too well a message to somehow turn around several key states he must campaign to. He has any chance at an upset.

In the final hours of a campaign that began almost two years ago, Bush shadowed Dukakis every step of the way. Some of the same states as the governor before heading to Iowa to end his campaign in his adopted hometown. The tactic was viewed as an insurance strategy because those states — Michigan, Ohio and Missouri — are up to winning to Bush, but must be stolen by Dukakis should the governor is to have any hope.

on both sides, but Brezeal said the undecided voters are tending to fall in behind Dukakis. All three agreed the Dukakis camp waited too long to respond to the newer campaign by verstating put forth by the Bush campaign, but said Dukakis had a very strong vote in the final weeks at setting his record straight.

Burris brought into question about what you are doing," Bush said. "Think about the fundamental question: Is this country headed in the right direction? The answer is, you're I and will keep it that way.

"Yes, we've traveled a lot of times and gone the extra distance, but I never felt any better in my life," Bush added at a later rally at Ashland College in Ohio. "That adrenaline is flowing. Our family is together, the country is coming behind our can- didate and I want to win this election!"

He sent the partisan crowd of several thousand into a frenzy by telling them: "You give me this state and you're looking at the next president of the United States."

While Bush was pouring it on, his advisers were confident Dukakis could not turn around enough states to keep Bush from becoming the nation's 41st president and the first sitting vice president to suc-ceed his boss into the White House since Martin Van Buren did it 183 years ago.

But Dukakis refused to give up, pressing ahead with an exhausting schedule he began Sunday that has him cam- paigning and flying across the country non-stop for the last two days of the week.

After traveling all night from the West Coast, the governor held morning meetings in Cleveland and St. Louis, promising a late upset he said was forming because he represented the hopes and dreams of average America.

"They talk a lot about October surprises. Tomorrow is not going to have a November surprise. This race is very, very tight and it getting tighter by the hour," Bush said.

Dukakis planned to keep up the pace until Tuesday morn- ing. He was to leave California late Monday night, hold a middle-of-the-night rally in Des Moines, Iowa.

Basketball signing Wednesday
United Press International
Among the big winners during Election Week were those sports basketball coaches who will sign up next year's recruiting class before this season has even begun.
The one-week fall signing period for high school players starts Wednesday and runs through Nov. 1.
Most of the top prep prospects are expected to sign this week rather than wait until the traditional period next spring.
The fall signing period, in its sixth year, has proved a great benefit to several schools and coaches. Those who have used the most effectively are generally among the sport's better programs. At the top of that list is Duke, which has two ACC titles and two trips to the Final Four in the last three seasons and is the No. 1 pick in many of this year's preseason polls.
Also assured a good recruiting year from early signings are Syracuse, Villanova, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio State, Arizona and North Carolina. Several other schools will work into the list, depending upon the final decision of the better high school players this week.
Over the previous five years, Duke signed 11 of its 18 recruits in fall. The Blue Devils already have three commitments this fall, and all are expected to sign this week.
The latest recruit is 6-foot Bobby Hurley of Jersey City, N.J., 6-4 Billy McCaffrey of Allentown, Pa., and 6-4 Thomas Hill of Lancaster, Texas. Each is highly rated and Hurley, a savvy point guard, could be an immediate starter.
"That will close our recruiting," said Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski. "We won't have to spend our evaluation time to look at seniors. Instead, we'll see juniors, and get to know those we want to recruit the following year.
"And, I'm going to visit a lot with the kids who have committed. Once players sign, you get unlimited visits, so it's an opportunity to nurture relationships. They (recruits) will have a chance to get to know me before they come to Duke next year."
Also, with recruiting done, Krzyzewski can devote more attention to those seniors. Most coaches won't have that luxury. They'll have to turn an occasional eye or ear to recruiting.
Many other coaches have worked almost perfectly for Krzyzewski in building Duke's program to one of the country's best. He said the keys have been convincing in on the players he wants and not gambling on going after a large number of players.
"We have targeted only a half-dozen or so most years," he said. "We probably are going to miss on some guys that way. But I don't believe in getting caught up in what I call a soap-opera syndrome of wondering who's up to what. That's a disease."
"We made a commitment to the player when we recruited him, and we're making a commitment to the (high school) juniors we're talking to now. They know where they stand with us."

an orthopedist on Thursday, "If it is not fractured, he is in pain-free and strong enough he will play," Thompson said. "Right now he is in too much pain."

Rhodes said the possible loss of Gibson for the remainder of the 1988 campaign hurts. "He is our best running back, so it sure doesn't help. Rhodes said. "We have to get someone to step in and get going."

Linebackers Kevin Kilgallen and Tyrone Johnson should both be available for play against Youngstown State Saturday, Thompson said.

Kilgallen did not play last week, as he was out with a bruised shoulder. Johnson played some at Southwest Missouri, but was hampered with knee troubles.

Thompson said defensive lineman Vince Deblassio, another member of the Salukis' back knee club, is practicing this week and should be ready for action Saturday.

The Salukis practiced Monday without pads, and there was little physical contact.

"We have had so many injuries that we thought we would give them an extra day to get over Saturday's game," Rhodes said. "Also, it is a little bit of a change for this point in the season."

Xavier conference favorite
In preseason coaches poll

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI) — Midwestern Collegiate Conference coaches and reporters who cover the league have picked Xavier as the favorite to win the MCC basketball championship.

In a preseason poll, coaches and media ranked St. Louis second and Loyola third.

"Teams are going to be gunning for us. That's good, though. We'd rather have teams after us," Xavier Coach Pete Gillen said Monday.

"That shows people know who we are and have some degree of respect for you. We'd rather be up there in the high cotton than down there in the Everglades fighting off the alligators and iguanas," said Gillen, who is in his fourth season at Xavier and holds a 70-22 record going into the 1988-89 campaign.

According to the media, the top players in the conference are Gerald Hayward of Loyola, Anthony Corrott of Dayton, Tyrone Hill and Stan Kinsborough of Xavier and Monroe Douglass of St. Louis.

The coaches picked Hayward, Hill, Kinsborough, Darrean Fowlkes of Butler and Roland Gray of St. Louis.

Gillen, named 1986 conference player of the year, said his scoring strategy this year would be to "spread it around."

Mike Maurizio; Trained for the Job!

A vote for MAURIZIO means a vote for a man with managerial experience spanning a period of 20 years... experience desperately needed when it comes to managing an office with a $1/4 million budget:

- 3 years U.S. Army, 1 year Viet Nam
- 11 years Carbondale Police Department, as a dispatcher, patrolman, juvenile officer, public relations officer, detective and sergeant
- Graduated SIU-C with a B.S. in administrative justice in 1975
- 4 years as an attorney in private practice including 2 years as Jackson County Public Defender
- As a private attorney and public defender has handled hundreds of cases, ranging from murder to DUI
- Taught in Central Law Enforcement program at Southeastern Illinois Junior College
- Taught business law at Shawnee Junior College
- Guest speaker at SIU Carbondale and John A. Logan Junior College

As a result of his varied background and extensive administrative and supervisory experience, he is much more able to work with all of the citizens of Jackson County to accomplish the goals of the State's Attorney.

Valley coaches tab Salukis seventh

League leaders don't agree with SIU-C's early optimism

By David Galliannetti
Staff Writer

ST. LOUIS — It seems the Missouri Valley Conference coaches and media representatives do not agree when it comes to the Salukis. Not at all.

SIU-C men's basketball team finished seventh in a poll of media members and is tied for fourth in a poll of media members at the basketball tipoff day Sunday.

"These are the guys who are supposed to know," SIU-C coach Rich Herrin in reference to the coaches' poll. "It gives us an incentive to prove that coaches aren't always right."

Missouri State was picked to finish on top in both polls, with Bradley coming in second.

The Drake Bulldogs were picked third by the media while Illinois State was tabbed third by the coaches.

Herrin said Drake was tied for fourth by the coaches, with Tulsa sixth and Indiana State last behind the Salukis.

"When I look at what we have returning, I can see why we've been picked No. 1," Shocker coach Eddie Fogler said. "But each Valley school has elected players that we don't know about, and some of those players will have an impact."

The coaches and media named that player of the year honors would go to Wichita State's Sasha Radunovich.

The 6-10 senior is among the top five returning scorers and rebounders in the Valley with 14.1 points and 7.3 rebounds per game last season.

Other receiving votes in the coaches poll were the Salukis' Turner, Anthony Manuel and Drake's Joe Ryan and Bader.

Manuel was named runner-up to Radunovich in the media poll.

Bradley's Dion Thurman was voted newcomer of the year by the media. Runners-up were the Salukis' Freddie McIlwain and four junior college transfers, Dio and Drake's Bill Nunn.

The media's all-conference team featured five Salukis, Turner, Sasha Radunovich, Wichita State's Sam Roark, Drake's Joe Ryan and Eddie Bird and Drake's Sam Raäa.

Among those receiving votes were Sahari forward Randy House.

Decision on Gibson expected this week

By David Galliannetti
Staff Writer

A decision on whether quarterback Fred Gibson will need surgery before the end of the season may be made Thursday, coach Rick Rhodes and men's trainer Ed Thompson said.

"He has made some progress, but not enough to be ready for this week," Thompson said. "If he doesn't respond, more than likely a decision may be made Thursday."

Thompson said there is no hurry in dealing with the knee, which Gibson injured as a result of a tackle during the Northern Illinois game on Oct. 22.

"Considering there is some cartilage work involved, he looks to be out 4-6 weeks after the surgery," Thompson said.

Rhodes said he will make a decision based on what the doctors feel should be done.

"We'll do whatever the doctors think we need to do," Rhodes said. "He is a long way from being where he needs to be. We never thought from the first day (Gibson was injured) that he'd be back."

Thompson said halfback Garrett Mines' right arm is still labled a probable fracture, and he is scheduled to see the surgery.)" Thompson said.

Ditka inspires Bears despite illness

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — The Chicago Bears lost their inspirational leader, Coach Mike Ditka, suffered a mild heart attack in late week. Several members said Monday they won't have any trouble getting inspired for next week's game against the defending Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins.

"I don't think we need to say a lot to motivate them in Washington," said defensive coordinator Vince Tobin, who is serving as acting coach while Ditka recovers from Wednesday's accident. "I think this game will take care of itself."

"They've (the Redskins) beaten us the last two years in the playoffs and they're the defending Super Bowl champions. If we don't get motivated for this game, we've got real problems." The Bears, who defeated the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 36-10 Sunday in their first game without Ditka on the sidelines, take an 8-2 record into the contest, and the Redskins, 6-4, Ditka is expected to be off the field until next week's game against Buffalo. Ditka has always been able to motivate the team for each game it plays no matter how well the team is expected to do. But Ditka said no one is underestimating the Redskins, who have won the last two seasons by the Super Bowl.

"Motivation-wise he's (Ditka) great at getting the team ready for games and I think that will probably be missed this week," Ditka said. "But I think with the players we have on this team, and (knowing) the importance of this game and what Washington has done to us in the last couple years, I think we'll be ready." Ditka's replacement, quarterback Andy Singletary, described playing without Ditka on the sidelines one of his "predictions" that after adverse conditions the team has faced since its Super Bowl championship season in 1985. But he said it was one the team should be able to overcome.

"It's a situation where sometimes I feel that you rely on a person to do certain things for your football team, especially the head coach with the type of motivator Coach Ditka is," Singletary said. "But sometimes it's not going to be that way. It's not going to be there and you have to realize that..."
