WSIU-TV To Televise Summer Commencement

The WSIU-TV control room will be moved under the McAndrew stadium during the commencement exercises Aug-ust 10, according to Marshall Allen, producer-director, broadcasting.

The control room, formerly located in the press box, will be moved under the stadium, behind the tunnel that the football players come out of during SIU home games. Head football coach, Carmen Pic-Registrator Offers A Legitimate Way To Cut Classes

With the right class combination the Registrar's Office recommends a class cut. Examination pressure Will be eased considerably for a special make-up exam. The only exception would be the exam scheduled at the same time for those who find it difficult to attend the exam, the Registrar's office recommends a class cut.

Students who have a final exam scheduled at the same time as an eleven week class should attend the exam, the Registrar's Office announced. The only exception would be a special make-up exam session arranged by the instructor.

Further, they officially urged all eleven week instructors not to give tests during the two days, August 8-9, when final exams are being held for the eight week session.

Room conflicts during the two-day exam period will be cleared through each department chairman.

Co-Chairmen Put New 'Spirit' Into Slumbering SIU Spirit Council

The Spirit Council after four years of slumber has been awakened by the enthusiasm of Frank Heiligenstein and Dick Moore, chairman for the coming year.

"Better co-ordination of student activities is the prime purpose of the Spirit Council," Heiligenstein said. "While we hope to arouse student interest in the various activities, we also will work along with the other organizations responsible for the activities."

"In the fall we hope to have a card section, at all home football games, parades, pep rallies and other activities to arouse students to take part in the University activities," Heiligenstein continued.

"In the past students have been completely unaware of the important role they could play in University activities if they only wanted to," Heiligenstein said. "It is Dick's and my duty to show students the opportunity they have to run student government, show the athletic teams we are interested and also to show that students are interested in all phases of the University."

Heiligenstein mentioned student government as an example where students claim interest yet when elections are held less than 30 per cent take part. "It is our duty and my job to get students to realize that their vote can influence the decisions of the student government officials," he said.

"This fall we hope to work with the New Student Week leaders in order to get the best freshmen to work with the Council," Heiligenstein said. "If they don't do their job then we will get rid of them."

The Spirit Council has a bus scheduled for the Drake-SIU football game Sept. 22 at Des Moines, Iowa. This is only one of several trips Heiligenstein hopes the students will make.

Heiligenstein pointed out the difficulties he has faced in trying to bring the Spirit Council back to life. "Right now we are operating on a limited budget and how long we can operate is only a matter of speculation," Heiligenstein said.

"If the Student Council doesn't want to appropriate us enough money then Dick and I will work twice as hard and use our own money, if necessary," Heiligenstein said. "We have received little co-operation from the Student Council."

"Heiligenstein said regardless of the student council's attitude the Spirit Council will operate all year and go to the students in the fall for the necessary support it needs to operate."

Heiligenstein ran for senior class vice-president last spring but lost by a slim margin to Melinda Federer, Moore sat on the Student Council last year and this year is devoting his time to classes and the Spirit Council in order to get students interested in the various activities.

The Spirit Council was organized in 1955 with the purpose of generating student interest in student activities.

He said they suffered no nausea despite the considerable "inhumanity" in that the jail officials tried to discredit them and the hunger strike.

Twelve Forestry Students Get Scholarships

A dozen SIU forestry students have been selected to receive scholarships for the 1964-65 school year, according to Dr. Neil W. Hoosier, chairman of the SIU forestry department.

The scholarships, each being a cash grant of $225 distributed throughout the academic year on a term basis, come from a $9,000 grant to SIU from the Sahara Coal Co. to help qualified southern Illinois students prepare for forestry careers. Entering freshmen must rank in the upper half of their high school graduating class to be considered. Forestry students previously enrolled in college must have at least a three-point (C) grade average.

The firm's $9,000 grant last year was the second scholarship fund provided by Sahara Coal Co. to help SIU forestry students. The first grant of $600 was made in 1957 for distribution in scholarships over a four-year period.

Students selected for 1962-63 scholarships are:

Teachers Must Know How To Use Class TV To Get Most Out Of It

Teachers must know how to use classroom television before it can provide greater educational opportunity, says Paul Andereck, director of audio-visual education for the St. Louis Suburban school district.

Andereck addressed his remarks to 75 teachers from Southern Illinois University who took part in a week-long conference on the new methods of teaching through the use of WSYL-TV.

In addition to learning that not only is it necessary to provide the right kind of atmosphere for television education, they also learned the importance of evaluating the uses of television in a classroom.

According to Andereck, teachers should plan the Article Traces Progress By East St. Louis

The progress of East St. Louis has started its suburbanization into a social and economic growth area.

The Illinois city started its community development program in 1960 with the aid of SIU, this year it has begun a program of tearing down condemned houses and coupled this with a "Clean-Up, Fix-Up, Paint-Up" effort with the help of neighborhood units.

An adult reading improvement course was started in East St. Louis High School in February, 1962, designed to determine the extent of local need for remedial reading and dramatic efforts, this effort is planned this fall.

Another goal for 1962 has been improvement of Grand Marais State Park.

Among the alarmists of the "Spunk-Watchers" who have proposed that we should introduce into American schools many of the features of Soviet education, there are many who seem to have forgotten Montessori's observation, made two centuries ago, that there is an appropriate education for every form of government.

That's a view by a distinguished educator now in residence at SIU's College of Education as a new lecturer and visiting professor in Administration and Supervision.

He is George S. Counts, author of 28 books -- including seven major studies of Soviet Education and culture -- and a foremost authority on Soviet education.

The reference Montessori mentioned above, from his "Spirit of the Laws," relating laws of education, Russian and American, or other, is an expression of a given society's condition.

Drawing on his three decades of experience in examining the Soviet educational system, chiefly firsthand and also through documentary sources, Counts reviewed his conception that any educational system, Russian, American, or otherwise, is an expression of a given society's condition.

Thus the oft-heard question, "Is the Soviet system of education better than ours?"

is a question that makes very little sense as expressed in this form, he said.

The Russian system is a product or function of the Russian culture, and American schools similarly are an integral and vital segment of our society, as Counts sees it.

How well either is doing the job for which it is intended, how well either serves the purposes of its political and social system," or a similar criterion of achievement does offer some basis for comparison, according to Counts.

As an associate director of the International Institute of Columbia's Teachers College, Counts made three long visits inside Russia in 1927, 1929, and 1936, to study schools in the Slavic countries and to write about them.

Counts' "The Challenge of Soviet Education" was "an 'adjudged' distinguished book of 1957 in contemporary problems and affairs" by the American Library Association.

In 1927 Counts toured Russia extensively by railroad for three months, visiting institutions of many kinds and engaging citizens from all walks of life in conversation.

Two years later he took delivery of a new Ford in Russia and for seven months toured the country alone, driving some 6,000 miles wherever he chose throughout the European section of the U.S.S.R. On his next visit, in 1936, he found that certain sections of the nation had been closed to travel by outsiders.

Much of the 1929 trip by Ford, Counts said, was over unimproved forest trails so rough that they reminded him of de Tocqueville's description of Russia in 1831.

To get a Russian driver's license before the trip, Counts took a Russian official for a short drive through Moscow. The Russian examiner told Counts, "You drive very well," then advised him that it would take so long for the license to get to him through official channels that he should go ahead and start the trip without a license. "Nobody out there will ask to see it anyway."

Counts supposes that by now the license may have been granted, and that it could have been waiting for him in Moscow.

Trent University.

Through a New York book store, Counts subscribes to Pravda, the daily Russian newspaper, and "Teacher's Gazette," a tri-weekly educators' journal. His copy is airmailed directly from Moscow, arriving within two or three days of publication.

Counts likes to ask a visitor to guess the cost of subscriptions to these two papers, air-mailed to him, and the usual estimate is forty or fifty dollars annually.

A recent annual statement from the book store showed that Counts owed his usual eight dollars for the two papers.

He cites this an an example of the Russian propaganda offensive, which is demonstrated by the below-cost distribution of Russian literature throughout the world, and the pricing of Russian books very low to bring them within budgets of readers in "emergent" or underdeveloped nations. Counts depends on these papers to help keep him informed of the latest trends in Russian education and culture.

Counts, who holds a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago, is assistant professor at the Universities of Washington, Chicago, Michigan State and Yale.

Editor:

In the last several days, I have been quite pleased to see several students write to The Egyptian concerning the Cairo action of the Student Council. Several of these letters express the concern that actions of the Student Council may cause the students to be more critical of the council itself. These students are quite right in their concern. The council will respond to their criticism.

In regard to Student Council, resolutions supporting this type action in other places have been passed. For the last four years, Student Council has passed resolutions, sent telegrams and sent letters to places throughout the country where similar situations have arisen. I think that the main difference between this situation and those is that there is a little closer to home; this is right here in Southern Illinois where we must face this situation with it, and we don’t wish to do this. So we say we shouldn’t go to Cairo because it is a matter that we never go to Cairo again, and then again many of us will, as this is on the way home. But this is important. I am from Southern Illinois as is my entire family and Mary McCollum is from Nashville, Tennessee, but we feel that it is our right and duty to fight injustice wherever and whenever we feel it. When we consider that by saying nothing we are in fact supporting the opposition, we realize that the best choice is to do what our feelings know and act accordingly. Those of us who say that we favor “the principle” but aren’t sure of the method might consider going to Cairo to see what that method really is, and not be taken in by rumors. And again, personally, I am appalled at the kind of council that Student Council has proposed to bar the press from any of our meetings. I am very interested in hearing this rumor substantiated, as I think that any such action should have to come through Student Council, and I would certainly oppose it as I am sure most, if not all of the members of the council will. Also in regard to Student Government participation, it might interest some to know that the Illinois branch of the NSA (National Student Association) has already sent a letter to the Cairo Non-Violent Freedom Committee commenting for their actions. I’m sure that this does not mean that all of the students at Southern Illinois or the members of the council are in agreement with the committee, but this is the opinion of some of those students who have been placed in leadership roles.

Likewise, I do not feel that the duty of a Student Council member is merely to mirror and echo student opinion, but also to exercise his own judgement. The whole purpose of the campaign period is for the electorate to become familiar with the candidates themselves, if at all possible, and if not, to become familiar with their views. I think that the fact that we were elected is indicative of support of our stated principles as well as a vote of confidence in our judgement, which is to be used in a leadership capacity. First of all, it is impossible to have the student body opinion correctly stated without having the student body state it. In other words, if the Student Council is to echo student opinion, it must have a voice in the first place. Why not just take a student body poll every time we want to appropriate twenty-five dollars to take a bus to a football game. I feel that there is a distinct difference between Student Body opinion and Student Council opinion, and this difference must be recognized.

I think that it is painfully evident that until each of us realizes his personal involvement in this situation that confronts us that we are shirking our responsibility and abusing our privilege as people, as Americans, as Individuals.

Wendell O’Neal

Questions Need Answering

The purpose of this letter is to point out what I think is an obvious fact that the council has not seen, or at least has not considered. I think that students are individuals and not the council or student body as a whole.

The question, of course, is how should the council be integrated. The question is whether the Student Council or the students should represent themselves in the matter at hand. No resolution as such has been passed by the council.

It should be in the interest of both sides of the issue to clarify the council’s situation. Some individuals on the council are taking an active part in the movement every right to do so. As citizens of this country it is their privilege. But in doing so, I feel it should be made apparent that they are individuals and not the council or student body as a whole.

The question, of course, is how should the council be integrated. The question is whether the Student Council or the students should represent themselves in the matter at hand.

This depends on the wording of any resolution passed in council. If the council commits itself to a position which, it believes, it does do commit itself in Northern Illinois as it has committed itself in Indiana and Tennessee. And in what way should the council be actively involved? Should we condemn and praise individuals who may reflect poorly the council and the University?

If the council so far has had no organized present, have mixed feelings on the whole way the student body views. Would debates in the fall or a referendum help to eliminate the consequences and reflections, regarding the council acts, be given consideration.

Editor:

With regard to the Cairo issue, as the other sides of the story have not been stated publicly. No doubt these other sides do exist, and we feel that they should be brought out in the open.

In the first place much has been said about the rights of Negroes and not the rights of the Caucasians. We do not condone segregation, but we do not wish Negroes to have a status not given the other students. We realize the importance of integrating races, but we also understand the importance of culture and how it can upset and even explode the social conditions that exist to date. If such an integration is to take place, we feel that it can take place only when it is done through education and social economic gains. When Negroes can be accepted because of their education and social exodus, which will eventually take place with the importance of education, then and only then will a permanent integration take place, a lasting merger. Such demonstrations as we have seen in the past can only create problems that will bring separate ethnic groups, separated in a greater manner than now needed. Of certain individuals look f disturbances on our gains, then the ultimate purpose is defeated before it begins. In this logical movement there are too many disturbances and not enough realistic thinking in the sense of to range goals. The immediate satisfaction of publics seer not only to glorify certain eccentric individuals, but also to represent the student body without justification. We a here to be educated, to show our ideas in an educated manner, and to back our idea with respect for the other people’s rights and beliefs. We ask all that in the fur such integration does not take place, but not in the manner that seems to be prevalent. Perhaps Corbion could be the starting point for a culturally integrated society.

Teachers Travel Far To Learn How To Inspire Budding Novelist

Teachers came from far and near to be students in Maureen Applegate's Workshop in Creative Writing in the Elementary School.

Miss Applegate shows teachers 24 to teach children to express themselves in words. The teachers were instructed in the use of various ways of writing such as poems, stories, and letters that have happened. The workshop sessions were also encouraged to write stories, book reports and soon on that children would be interested in reading.

Venita Georgieff, one of the 24 teachers enrolled, claims both long and short distances for travel. Although Miss Georgieff is now living in nearby Ziegler, she has spent seven of her nine teaching years in foreign countries in instructing children of military personnel.

This is an economical way to travel," smiled the blonde. "The first country to which Miss Georgieff traveled was Germany, where she stayed four months. During the two years she taught in Japan, and last year in Turkey.

Because Miss Georgieff has taught only lower grades, she is trying of thinking of the upper grade students. "The traveling teacher" said it as though her instructor had set aside the story, spring within her for "she had teaching to write."

Voicing a similar thought was Mrs. Grace Welch of Englewood, Colo. "Miss Applegate has stirred up in us a desire to be better writers--and teachers," said Mrs. Welch, a SIU alumni.

Morris Library Addition Bids Opened

Apparent low bids totaling $35,000 were recorded Thursday as bids held the first of three bid-openings for additions to Morris Library. The project calls for completion of the second and third floors and addition of the third through seventh floors.

Plumbing, heating, refrigeration and ventilation bids will be opened Friday. Electrical installation bids will be opened Monday (July 23) and the general construction bids will be opened July 26.

Apparent low bidders in the first letters are: plumbing, S. J. Pennington, Champaign, $74,650; heating, piping and refrigeration, J. A. Julian Co., Chicago, $205,845; ventilation, Elgin Sheet Metal Co., Elgin, $182,172; and electrical, Sprinkmann and Sons, Peoria, $47,728.

Said Mr. Welch expressed an appreciation of the work shop. Her pretty tooth flashed a smile as she added, "It is wonderful how the campus has grown. (after 20 years)! Why, the only buildings I recognized were those right around Old Main."

Traveling over a thousand miles for the workshop was Besie Rieves of Melbourne, Fla. Miss Rieves is the Curriculum Coordinator for grades one to six in Melbourne.

"I've saved enough by riding the Greyhound buses here so that I can buy all of Miss Applegate's books," she said. With eyes twinkling through gray-rimmed glasses she added: "I didn't mind the 36-hour ride; I could look out the window at all your pretty Illinois country."

Mrs. Mona Bonacker, who teaches first grade in Algonia, Iowa, drove the 800 miles in her Volkswagen to attend the workshop.

Another student from "far" was Mrs. Elsie Stark, who teaches an elementary principal from Charleston, Ill.

All of the other workshop people were from Illinois cities, including Carbondale, with the exception of one from Cape Girardeau, Mo.

During the last week Miss Applegate is an assistant professor of education at LaCross State College in Wisconsin. Besides teaching creative writing there and supervising practice teachers in elementary education, she conducts seminars over the state educational radio program "Wisconsin School of the Air." This program goes right into their classroom. "Six thousand children listen and send in their papers," she said.

 Bubble Is ‘Hair’ Today Gone Tomorrow

Hair Stylists Predict Return of Natural Look This Fall

The fashion “bubble” burst and the “pale face” has faded away. These were some of the fashion predictions for the 1963 season revealed at the School for Advanced Cosmetology being held here.

Mrs. Dorothy Woolery, instructor at the eighth annual conference held in cooperation with VTI, claimed the “natural look” will replace the “bubble.”

The hair stylist, said the “bubble” made popular by the “beehive” and “bouffant” styling will be overshadowed by the smaller head look during 1963.

Mrs. Woolery is a member of the Official Hair Fashion Committee of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association. The nearly 190 NAC members set coiffure and cosmetic styles for 500,000 beauty practitioners in the United States, she said.

The Committee set these styles by coordinating new hair styles with fashion silhouettes submitted by the designers each season, the stylist commented.

“Pale face” is disappearing from the make-up scene, the NAC member noted. Natural skin tone with emphasis on the rosy cheeks are returning to the lips of the American woman. The iridescent will fade away, she was pleased to report.

Red will be the big accent color this fall. Brown, gold, and deep green will be other main winter hues which will dominate fashion windows. These colors will be muted into the princess lines bringing the women’s design closer to the body as opposed to the “sack” craze during the ‘50’s.

Eyes are not to be over made-up, the cosmetologist noted. Eye liner and shadow are to be employed with discriminating taste, This make-up tool is to frame the natural beauty of the face.

Soft muted beige blond hair coloring will be the vogue, revealed Mrs. Gaye Meyer, St. Louis hair colorist. The hair colorist instructor said women of the past were judged by their hair color... “dumb blond, etc.” Most women will be pleased with this new flattering color -- “It looks expensive,” she said. “It wasn’t imported either, it’s truly American in origin,” claims Mrs. Meyer.

Pink, lavenders, soft blue, and silver tints won’t be too uncommon. “They won’t, however, be the accepted fashion for the American woman,” muted the color expert. She also noted nearly 80% of the women in the U.S. use some form of hair coloring. The fact explains why women desperately avoid getting caught in a cloudburst.

Charles F. Budas, director of the Advanced School, claims it is the first of its kind in the world. It was the first to be approved by the NAC, he said. Since its approval eight years ago, ten other schools have followed. Each school must, however, be approved annually by the NAC to maintain accreditation.

The progressive program, beginning at the freshman level, runs for three years. Homework assignments are arranged between terms which include research work and term papers. While at the conferences students are given mid-term and final exams which cover course material during the entire year.

Each student must pass the exam to qualify for next year’s study program, the director said. We use two grading systems: the alphabetical and numerical to achieve accuracy, Budas said. “Each year we select a valedictorian and salutatorian from the graduating class.

The graduating ceremony climaxes the annual two-week conference and we attempt to duplicate the academic atmosphere by wearing caps and gowns during the ceremony,” the director said.

Following the three year curriculum, the graduates are awarded diplomas which signify completion of a prescribed course in advanced cosmetology.

Seventy-six students representing twelve states are attending the school. Among the states are: Wisconsin, Indiana, Florida, New York, Missouri, Ohio, Kentucky, Kansas, Michigan and Illinois.

A wide variety of courses are included in the school’s curriculum. They range from psychology to physics of the hair.
