Following a Rainbow Difficult
With Rainfall Below Normal

Follow a rainbow to its end and you'll find a pot of gold. The hard part is finding the rainbow, especially in the near-overcast atmosphere of southern Illinois.

We've had 310 inches of rainfall for last month show that the precipitation pattern was hardly enough to moisten the ground, let alone sprout even a tiny rainbow.

5.50 inches of rain fell last month, far below the normal 4.26 inches for June. Rains totaled 4.91 inches in June, 1965.

Things could always be worse, they say. The record low rainfall for June was 23 inches in 1933. The record high for the month was set in 1935 with a wet 135.95 inches.

Rainbows will be scarce again this month, the Laboratory says. An impressive .04 inches fell Wednesday night and rainfal Thursday brought the total count to only .18.

However, the box contained none of these. Instead in it was an unusual book entitled "Neitzri Holy Quran."

Ralph W. Bushes, librarian of the Rare Books Room, explained that the book is "a facsimile of a version of the Koran written by calligrapher Ahmed Neirizi in the 16th Century, which has been mechanically reproduced for the first time."

Bakther Dajesh, an SIU student, is responsible for the book. He had the manuscript sent to a printing company and the books were sold for $25,000 at his own expense.

"We can now talk to the students without them scrutinizing themselves, I wanted them to react to this letter before they talk to me," he said.

WHAT GOES ON HERE?—Students who passed the Agriculture Building and couldn’t figure out what was going on in several of the calculus rooms in the north wing now have the answer. Summer Music Theater workers use the rooms for assembling costumes and other materials for the shows in Muckelroy Auditorium. In response to some strange looks, they tackled two signs to explain it all.

The Light and the Rock: The Vision of Dag Hammarskjöld

Reviewed by A. R. Ley

Department of Philosophy

The speech that most closely approached a call for peace, the diary of the late Secretary-General of the United Nations, when Markings was published two years ago, many readers were surprised to find that it contained almost no comments upon the substantive issues that had confronted Hammarskjöld, as executive officer of the United Nations. His daybook contained only some very general reflections on the meaning of life and the flowering hopes for a world without armies.

Settel, the editor of the present volume, has not attempted to match Hammarskjöld's public utterance with the thoughts that were not published until after his death. Rather, the editor has given quotations topically, Part I presents forty-five pages of selections on "The Individual and Society," Part II is a milieux theme on "Narcissus, Art, Writing and Religion," Part III deals with "The World's Condition." Part IV consists of 34 pages of statements about the United Nations, the sources and occasions for these public utterances are indicated in an appendix.

There are several sections of Markings who suspected that the proverbs and epigrams in Hammarskjöld's diary were expressions of a systematic philosophy. The Light and the Rock, with no evidence to the contrary, delegatates there is no cross in the room, there is no star and crescent, there is no hammer and sickle, no rising sun, no placid Buddha. There is only a shaft of light, striking the surface of a rock. The Light and the Rock is a book that takes its title from that of that room of silence. It consists of excerpts from the speeches and published writing of Dag Hammarskjöld.

The New Republic

Complicated War Novel Is 'Lance Caine Mutiny'

The Air War Over Britain

The best advice for a reader of The Air War Over Britain is to keep a notebook. The author, a television news analyst in Cleveland, Ohio, has spent 29 pages of his book telling of her early life and her family. About the only amusing performer or section is devoted to her feminine side, a plump, middle-aged, widowed woman with nine children who refuses to marry the man she now lives with because she thinks she was a jinx to her first three husbands.

Once through these early pages, the book improves considerably. Miss Fuldheim details some of the events and people she has covered in her long career in journalism and broadcasting, an interesting tale, although sometimes inconsistent since she skips from one event or person to another with no transition. Her experience in interviewing everyone from pauper to pontiff and from a German prisoner to Hitler are sometimes humorous, sometimes tragic, but usually amusing.

The book's strongest appeal is man's inherent curiosity about his fellow men. Miss Fuldheim has had ample opportunity to discuss the personalities of a number of prominent persons, the average person meets only on the surface in headlines or newscasts.

Daily Egyptian Book Page

Of the many reports on the air war fought over Britain during August and September 1940, Eagle Day comes the closest to providing that "I-thou" feeling. Author Collier has reconstructed personal lives of key participants for this narrow but crucial span of history from eyewitness interviews and diaries and a search of documents related to the period. We hear British Air Marshal Dowding lecture the government about the Cabinet as if they were schoolboys. Churchill proposes sending additional Spitfires and Hurricanes to France even though the battle had been lost the continent. Dowding demanded these aircraft be saved for the inevitable attack on Britain. Juxtaposed to British War Secretary of State's Order to arrange Dowdinger's orders to the Luftwaffe commanders to mount Operation Adlerangriff, Eagle's Attack, as he named it. This reproduction of conversations of English and German counterparts gives the reader an eerie eye-of-the-hurricane feeling and Battle process goes.

Reminiscences Of a Journalist

Was the killing of the two SS men murder or was it a justified killing of escaping prisoners? This is the question that faces Captain Thomas Rankin, a young non-combat officer newly assigned to one of the American units in Europe, finds Capatai n Dowding, in Frederick L. Keene's new novel The Investigating Officer. This novel, based on an actual incident which took place shortly after the victory in Europe, finds Captain Rankin assigned to investigate the shooting of two captured SS men by one of the division's most decorated junior officers.

On one hand, Rankin is faced with the statement by Lieutenant Maddox and his doctor that the prisoners were trying to escape and that the killings were part of an effort to prevent the escape. On the other hand, he must consider the story of two civilian witnesses, one of whom has Nazi sympathies and manages to disguise his feelings, that the prisoners were ordered to run and were shot in cold blood.

Rankin's search for the truth covers 48 hours, the period of the book, during his investigation Rankin discovers there is much more involved than the simple murder or revenge.

This realistic and graphic novel deserves a place among the best ten books to be written about World War II. It has been appropriately reviewed by Joseph C. Lang.

American Military Government, which is such an institution, and the civilian population, which are being treated like subjects in a book."
El Anciano de las Aguas

Veintiocho hombres parados con los brazos extendidos y cogidos de las manos forman un círculo de casi 14 metros (45 pies) de diámetro, o de más de 45 metros (140 pies) de circunferencia. Sembrante cerca humana apenas se puede circundar un árbol que crece en el pueblo de Santa María de Tule, Estado de Oaxaca, México. Ese árbol se presume que está más de 4,000 años de estar creciendo allí, en el que antiguamente era un valle bien regado por ríoscitos, y rodeado de bosques. "El Anciano de las Aguas" declan prodigiosamente las jutias refiriéndose a estos árboles con sus nombres científicos: "Tillandsia usneoides". En el himno azteca este árbol es "abahuquis" que "en la forma espiritualizada es "ahuquehue". El Árbol de Tule es el más grandioso árbol de todos ellos, según se cree. El de Tule es uno de los Árboles más grandes del mundo entero, y uno de los más grandes. Su altura es de unos 84 metros (280 pies).

Los abahuquis son árboles que crecen en las cumbres de los parques, lagos, y Ates, y en las regiones de clima templado y calen ser muy grandes, son de larga vida, y su madera es muy resistente. Pertencen a la misma familia de los cipreses y saúnos.

Cerca de la capital mexicana existe un bosquecillo de abahuquis que la tradición atribuye su origen a un plano hecho por el rey Blanda de Texcoco, Nezahualcóyotl, y otro abarbaria de los mismos está dentro de la capital en el Bosque de Chapultepec, y se atribuye a un plano de Momzuma, rey de los aztecas al llegar de las españolas.

Casi todos los abahuquis sostienen un tipo de planta epifita, o flor del aire, la Tillandsia usneoides, popularmente conocida como "herb", o "moso" de la Florida (español). De color blanquiza, esta planta da a los abahuquis el aspecto de un anciano canoso, de ahí "el Anciano de las Aguas." En muchas culturas existe la tradición de la veneración a los S bóles, y tal es el caso del Árbol de Tule. Este "yagucueixá" (así le dicen los zapotecas que habitan la región) mide hace unos 40 años por falta de agua, la zona cerca tiene escasa y llena de vegetación ha sufrido la suerte de tantas otras partes de México. Lo que era jardín ahora es casi desierto, por la falta de los S bóles.

Por fin, a petición de los habitantes, el gobierno federal confirió un poco e instaló una bomba para alimentar constante y arbol subterráneo. En el curso de sus trabajos de conservación del Arbol (as expertos de la Fue necesario un pelotón de soldados para protegerlos gentilexban el propósito de la obra. El viajero o turista que quedó ofrece un ramo de, esta se encontraría en peligro de ser apedreado. Se venera como a un personaje muy respetado o hasta como a un santo. Foreign Student Orientation Program Planned for Fall

An orientation program is being designed for new international students enrolling at Southern for the fall quarter, according to the International Student Center. The purpose of the program is to make the students more adapted to the new environment as they begin studies at SIU.

The program is scheduled for September 8-17. During this period the students will be grouped together in a university residence hall adjacent to the campus.

Lectures on the educational system in the United States and on the history and role of the University will highlight the programs.

Charles H. Lange, professor of anthropology, will contribute his knowledge of American and other cultures.

The students will be informed of such programs as general studies, advising, graduate studies, counseling and testing, financial assistance and housing as well as facilities of the library and textbook service.

Representative from religious foundations and various service clubs in Carbondale, including Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis, BPW Women's Club, will explain their activities to the students.

Other programs will include explanation of function and activities of the International Student Center, physical check-up at the Health Service, visiting American families, and meeting with officers of international student associations on the campus.
Five Major Airlines Grounded by Strike

NEW YORK (AP)—A strike against five major airlines swept westward across the United States today, upturning vacation and business travel plans for 150,000 people and stranding thousands of service men.

The strike by machinists crippled airline service in much of the nation, and left only one transcontinental carrier—American Airlines—still operating out of the north-east United States.

The five struck airlines, Eastern, National, Trans World, United, and Northwest—handle 60 per cent of the nation's air travel, carrying an average of more than 150,000 passengers a day to and from 251 cities in the United States. Trans World also flies to 23 foreign countries.

At some terminals long lines piled up in front of the counters of airlines affected by the strike. The airlines added flights as they could, and feeder airlines sought to fill in the gap. Personnel of the struck lines worked feverishly to make new travel arrangements for passengers with other carriers and on trains and bus lines.

The Defense Department declared Friday that service men caught in the airline strike will not be penalized if they are late returning from leave.

‘Martian’ Arrested
Pushing Life Pills

ROME (AP)—A man who calls himself Cai Re-Nos and says he is a Martian has been charged with fraud for building purported 300-years-of-life pills in a midnight rendezvous in St. Peter's Square, police reported Friday.

They booked him as Patrizio Rimana, 23, a law student who apparently hadn't yet studied the code of fanciful deals by telephone.

Kennedy Helping Mississippians In Building Integrated Party

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and three House members—two of them Southerners—are lending support to young Mississippi Negroes and whites trying to build an integrated Democratic party in their state.

The congressmen, John Brademas of Indiana, George W. Crider of Tennessee and Charles L. Weltner of Georgia, and Kennedy are sponsoring an unusual cocktail party here next week to raise money to step up voter registration activities for the youths, who have organized about 20 to 30 Youth Democratic clubs in different Mississippi communities.

The clubs are the only racially integrated Democratic party groups in Mississippi, Spencer Oliver, first vice president of the Young Democratic Club of America, said the integrated group is recognized as the only legal Young Democratic Club in Mississippi. He said he expects up to 500 persons to attend the $5-a-ticket reception in a local hotel.

A number of congressmen besides the four sponsors are planning to attend, said, adding that the affair is also getting support from labor, civil rights and other groups such as the liberal Americans for Democratic Action.

The cochairmen of the club are holding Catter III, son of the Pulitzer Prize-winning Greenville, Miss., editor and publisher, and Cleveland Donald Jr., a Negro graduate of the University of Mississippi.

The executive director is William Silver, son of former University of Mississippi Provost, James Silver who wrote "The Closed Society," a book about Mississippi, and is now teaching at the University of Notre Dame.

Goldberg, Pope Talk Viet Peace

VATICAN CITY (AP)—U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg, who met with Pope Paul VI, Friday and Vatican sources said they undoubtedly talked about the stepped up air raids on North Viet Nam. The Vatican has criticized the bombing, however, and is urging to U.S. foreign policy.

As the two talked for 50 minutes, Mr. Goldberg pressed ahead with their campaign to make an armistice to the war in Viet Nam to be followed by peace talks.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson met in London with President Georges Pompidou of France, who seemed to cast doubt on Wilson’s chances of succeeding his trip to Moscow next week to urge a peace conference at Geneva.

In the present atmosphere and in the light of recent developments, we do not think it would be convenient to call a conference at the present time,” Pompidou told reporters before meeting with Wilson. "I was a signer of the Geneva agreement in 1954 ending the French war in Indochina. France would attend such a conference."

As cochairman with Britain of the Geneva Conference, the Soviet Union also has opposed another conference at Geneva.
Southern will attempt to stay out of the Midwest Summer League All-Star, while the St. Louis Billikens will try to come out of it this weekend as the two meet in St. Louis today and Sunday.

A part of the doubleheader is scheduled for today, with another twinbill slatted for Sunday beginning at the same time.

Both SU and the Bills are far behind league leading Parsons College, which has dropped just one game in nine league starts, The summer league will continue over 24 games through the end of the month.

St. Louis is winless in league play, having dropped a four-game series to Parsons two weeks ago.

The Bills now have one victory to their credit, an extra inning win over Parsons, but have dropped four contests to the Wildcatters.

Overall, Southern is 4-5 for the summer, while combining three of four non-league tilt.

College Student to Workshopers: "SIU's A Great Place to Learn"

SIU has been invaded by 116 high school students and the general reaction by the regular college students is quite varied. Although most of the university students expressed total indifference to the high school juniors and seniors, they admitted that they were too busy to notice the "little youngsters".

One bearded college student named after a famous sea captain voiced his opinion that all workshopers should stay clear of him. Maybe the combination of heat and classes blended in his nervous system during the brief interview.

A few college students interviewed, such as senior Ann Freeberg said, "A lot of times I can't tell the difference between high school and college kids." Also, all the boys have been warned not to bother Brown Hall, first floor.

Others such as Bob Mazzi, a sophomore, expressed the Workshop as "a fine experience". Sue Hackbart, a senior commented that the workshopers didn't bother her at all, and another SIU senior advised the workshopers not to "act too big". It seems that all upperclassmen enjoy their seniority.

While freshman Jerry Smith says, "He doesn't mind the girls", graduate student Bill Miller exclaimed, "Oh, I didn't know you were here!"

One former journalism workshoper, Lynn Wyman, now a student here, said, "I must laugh when I overhear the high school kids walking around. They seem to walk in groups and (he doesn't realize it, though.)"

Pat Abell, a freshman, said, "I can't, really tell the difference." But her blonde companion, Barb Ed, also a freshman, was quoted as saying, "I can definitely tell the difference between high school kids and college students. The Workshopers don't bother me at all, though." Although many students were asked, a sophomore missed it up. "I hope SIU proves to be helpful and interesting to the high school kids. It's really a great place to learn!"

First Impressions Revealed By Summer High Schoolers

Vague as they may be, the imprint left on a workshoper's mind when the first view of SIU presents itself can often be a contributing factor to the success or failure of their stay. The summer workshopers, not unlike their more experienced counterparts - the university students - had mixed emotions about the university.

Mark Doremay found, "The layout of the place is sorta confusing, whoever set this place up made the buildings hard to find." Sid Falkenberg proposed a solution for cardavers.

"Students are friendly, and they help me get across campus when I'm lost!" Kathy Tuley complimented the university on its excellent food, friendly students, and good facilities.

"Life here is new and college kids are nice and understanding," states Darrell Aherin. "I really like it here.

Nancy Dykes had few complaints, though. "It's hot here, and it's bigger than my home town." Ira Wachter suggested, "The campus could use a lot less arm bars, I'm glad I wasn't stuck in one."

Mr. Wachter is also quoted as saying, "I'm sure to stay clear of those eccentric who haven't used a razor in four years."

A workshoper who preferred to stay anonymous complained, "I've lost too much money on the "bumb" coke machines."

Good or bad, the first confused impressions taken by workshopers will grow and develop as the month progresses.

The first CLASS - One group of the 116 High School Workshopers complete in their first class at SIU. The reflection of their faces in the vastness of their subjects. This was the beginning. As their month of SIU continues they progress in their knowledge of the study of communications will be sharpened and mirrored in their future endeavors.

College Student Debuts For Shoppers

From the first speech of Summer Workshop Editor David Falstaff, "The Merry Wives of Windsor" never lagged. The rendition of this Shakespearean comedy was accented by the outstanding performances of the Mistresses Page and Ford, Falstaff, and Slender.

Introduced into the play immediately, Abraham Slender served as a comic relief. The audience sympathized with Slender's feeble attempts to capture the heart of the beautiful young Anne Page. His well-timed interruptions of "Mrs. Page," never failed to produce laughter.

The Mistresses Page and Ford united to make Sir John Falstaff's life a joyous one.

The portrayals of the two masters were most clever and lifelike and those two characters carried the audience's empathy through display.

Sir John Evans' mutilation of the English language with a Welsh accent was quite comical. The portrayals of the rest of the cast contributed to a fine over-all performance.

Shakespearean Comedy Debits For Shoppers

The publication students are taking advantage of this summer workshop mainly to improve their various publications. However some are here to begin prepara-tions for next year's Al Bronstein, newspaper student, is learning ideas with other workshopers and learning new journalistic techniques. Hes developing his own school newspaper for more professional appearance.

Unauthorized Male Invades Steagall

It seems as if the girls at Steagall Hall finally got a male in the dorms. It was quite a problem of the male attraction that caused this event.
