WASHINGTON (AP)—Former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman was convicted of conspiracy and perjury Friday in connection with the burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

The jury in the trial of Ehrlichman and three employees of the White House Plumbers unit deliberated for less than six hours before returning the verdict.

Ehrlichman was acquitted of the final count of the five-count indictment, which had charged him with obstruction of justice.

In pretrial motions, Ehrlichman had asked that the trial be moved to another city. He stated that Washington's preoccupation with Watergate and the heavily black Democratic character of the capital would make a fair trial impossible. The jury which convicted him was composed of nine blacks and three whites.

“Also a great deal of the substance and background of this case was excluded from the evidence by rulings of this case,” Ehrlichman said. “And this also will be a part of our appeal.”

Ehrlichman, embracing his wife Jean outside the courtroom, said, “I have had for many years an abiding confidence in the American judicial system.

“Nothing that has happened here today has in any way shaken my confidence in that process.”

The jury's verdict was returned about an hour after President Nixon left Andrew's Air Force Base near Washington en route to California and a two-week working vacation at his San Clemente home.

Word of Ehrlichman's conviction was radioed to the President's jetliner, sources said, but there was no immediate comment from Nixon or White House spokesmen.

Wholesale price index rises sluggishly as food costs fail

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale food prices rose only slightly in June but industrial prices continued to soar, lifting the Wholesale Price Index, 6.5 per cent. It was the smallest increase in eight months. The June increase, reported Friday by the Labor Department, is also the smallest annual inflation rate of 6 per cent.

Prices fell below the 1.3 per cent rise in May when prices climbed at a 5.6 per cent annual pace. Last month's increase was still high by historical standards.

The figures gave further evidence that inflation has shifted from the food area into industrial commodities. Economists regard this as a more ominous sign because, unlike food prices which move up and down, industrial prices tend to become locked into the economy. They also mean higher retail prices ahead.

Industrial prices rose a seasonally adjusted 2.1 per cent in June following a 1.2 per cent decrease in May. These prices have surged at an annual rate of 11 per cent in the last three months and were 21 per cent higher than a year earlier.

Agricultural prices, on the other hand, have been dropping for the past four months, plunging an additional 1.2 per cent below a year ago. But prices declined in June for livestock, off 1.4 per cent; fresh and dried fruits and vegetables, down 3.7 per cent; and poultry, 5.8 per cent, and milk, down 5.7 per cent. Granary prices rose 6.6 per cent, the only major farm product to increase in price.

However, the decline in agriculture prices may have passed. Chairman Herbert Skinn of the President's Council of Economic Advisers said wholesale farm and food prices rose again in July.

New graduate research policy approved

By Bill Layne
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A research program recommendation for graduate level research was approved by SIU Interim President Hiram Leroy.

During the Graduate Council, announced appointments to several committees were made, including the council’s monthly meeting Friday morning.

David said the new policy will allow at least 20 per cent of research research to be spent outside the department where the research is performed.

“This additional money to the departments will allow for further research,” David said.

Murphsboro ready to go ‘apple way’

By David Kornbluth
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Apple juice will be served at this year’s apple peeling and an apple parde has drawn from the people.

The 23rd annual festival, to be held Sept. 12 to 14, is entitled “Those Were the Days.” The event will be highlighted by the crowning of the Apple Queen and a parade on Sept. 14 led by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Paul Michaels, a member of the Murphsboro Chamber of Commerce, said that the parade has drawn from 20,000 to 25,000 people.

Another feature of the festival is the national apple pie contest, Nash said. All the world is invited to compete in the two pie baking events.

The first event is winner is determined by the number of inches piled by the judges in three minutes. Nash said the second event’s winner is the contestant with the longest continuous apple peeling.

Cash prizes and trophies will be awarded to winners. And the cider to be served at this year’s festival “is the real stuff,” according to Marion Nash, the festival’s organizer. “It’s got worms and everything.”

Murphsboro merchants will have a chance to display their wares to the crowd when the window-decorating contest starts. Judges are judged for originality, color and neatness of apples. Awards are given to the seven best windows.

Other events to be featured include a square dance, apple pie baking and the drum and bugle corps. Nash said.

“Positive incentive’ OK’d

The board has told the committee that the presidents of SIU-C and SIU-E are to be highly visible people in the governance system, while the chief of board staff is to remain low-profile, Malone said.

“There is only one goal one aim of this committee—to find people who will provide effective leadership for this University,” Malone said.

In other business, the executive committee of the council submitted the names of three professors to serve on the President’s Budget Advisory Committee. Ronald J. Beasley, Donald D. Page and John H. Zimmerman were nominated.

The four will sites that the nominee to serve on the committee. The committee will have one member from each University constituency. The committee will assist the president’s staff in determining short and long range priorities in budget planning.

David also told the council the executive committee has nominated seven faculty members to serve on the newly formed Faculty Program and Personnel Review Committee.

One graduate faculty member from each of the seven subject matter areas was nominated. The nominees are: Lewis E. Hahn, Dorothy Hugginsham, J. Balthacharyya, James C. Parker, Benjamin A. Shepherd, James G. Smith and Milton T. Edelman.

According to Davis, the committee will be composed of not less than five nor more than seven faculty members. The Faculty Senate has also nominated individuals to the committee, and Leroy will choose the members from both constituency’s nominations.

The committee will function as a primary mode of official faculty involvement in any reduction in programs or personnel based on budgetary considerations, according to Davis. The committee will also deal with institutional problems resulting from financial exigency.

The next meeting of the Graduate Council is tentatively scheduled for Aug. 2 in the Missouri Room on the second floor of the Student Center.

Historical homes highlight Walnut Street

By Marian W. Mitchell

(Tenth in a series)

Another effect the Normal had on Carbondale was to cause the town to physically expand. Out on the west side of town, in the area where Colonel Brush maintained "Brush's Grove" as a public gathering, speechmaking and barbecue center, new houses began to go up. Fine homes they were, and the West Walnut Street area soon became the ritzy neighborhood of Carbondale.

It is not difficult to understand why it was that West Walnut Street should be selected. The elevation of the terrain was somewhere higher there than downtown; it gave a good view over a good deal of the little city and building college. It was on the right side of the tracks, i.e., the upwind side of town so that smoke, fumes, and noise generated from the railroad and manufacturing establishments in the central area would be carried away from the fine houses by the prevailing west-southwesterly winds. Also, the example had already been set. Colonel Brush had early settled in that general vicinity by first building a house just west of the west end of South (Monroe) Street. He then had a fine house designed and built by Isaac Rapp near the corner of Main and Missouri (University) Avenue. Brush School now occupies a portion of what was formerly Colonel Brush's extensive lawn.

Watergate syndrome

It's effects include yawning, watery eyes and even actual sleep. It's accompanied by a shake of the head, by no connection ever being made with the president who couldn't care less (or if he does, (along with the American public) a big break and the new law department in the new Normal.

The advent of S.I.N.U. brought a small boom to Carbondale. Several services which heretofore were of minor significance became important. Rooms had to be made available to the influx of students. Since young ladies in particular had to be properly chaperoned, hotel accommodations were out of the question. Therefore, the answer lay with the townpeople themselves. Families began to develop facilities (such as an extra bedroom) where one or two students could be accommodated. Most were generally taken with the idea. In numerous instances, the students worked out a portion of their "room and board" by helping with the housecleaning, cooking, yardwork and furnace tending. This remained an important part of Carbondale's economy until during the late 1950's when the university embarked on an ambitious dormitory building program which, for a while, cut deeply into the "room & board" trade.

Editorial

Two heads are better than one

The staff of the Senate Watergate committee concluded that "the process by which we nominate and elect our President" needs remedy. Maybe we should go back to the system where the executive position itself because the job of being President of the United States is too important to trust to one man.

The terms of Presidents Richard M. Nixon and Lyndon B. Johnson give evidence to this. In opinion polls the majority of Americans have agreed that Nixon has done a good job in foreign affairs but that he has failed with his domestic policy. The opposite is true for Johnson. Americans give him credit for having done a good job domestically but for having been weak in foreign affairs. And one of the reasons that Johnson declined running for a second term was for foreign reasons. It is obvious that the job of being President of the U.S. ages a person twenty years.

Maybe a system where one person handles foreign affairs and another handles domestic affairs would be more satisfactory. Because foreign countries would want to deal with the top person in the government, the president could handle foreign affairs and be a sort of foreign minister. The vice-president could be the domestic affairs minister and handle matters at home. Candidates for these two positions could run and be voted for independently of each other too.

With this sort of realignment in the executive branch of the U.S. government, two heads could literally be better than one.
Chamber of Commerce sets target of 75 new members

By Nancy Landis

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The immediate goal of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce is to raise the membership of the Key Club to 375. Landis, a student member by the end of 1974, according to Dave ReSal, chairman of the key club steering committee.

A meeting of interested chamber members on Thursday will get the Key Club underway, ReSal said and said the club will hold its first formal meeting. ReSal said that an advisory board of the chamber personally invited some people to attend the meeting Thursday. The chamber office has assisted in stimulating interest in the chamber by contacting utility companies and financial institutions, he said, and the chamber's newsletter announced that members may join the club.

Ertthal said the primary function of the Key Club will be to get new members for the Chamber of Commerce. He said this will be done by contacting businesses which are not members and contacting new businesses which are not members and contacting new businesses that are not members and contacting new businesses that come to town. The University Mail will have a lot of potential members when it opens, he noted. Ertthal said the Key Club will also act as a liaison between people and businesses to see what programs people want businesses to implement. He said the Key Club will act as a welcoming committee to new businesses and act with the Chamber of Commerce at ground-breakings.

Ertthal said that anyone interested in becoming a member of either the Key Club or the Chamber of Commerce may call him at home, at the IBM office or at the Chamber of Commerce Office.

Free program to offer weight control advice

Laura Brown, psychology graduate student, will begin a free weight control program from 7 to 8 p.m. Monday at the Women's Center, 604 W. Walnut.

Brown said the program will involve discussions of ways to control weight, and which types of diets are best for whom and by what measures to control overeating.

Anyone may attend the meeting. Brown said she has a program designed for others who would like to lose weight, which will be a diet that will follow and alternative diets will be available.

Southern Illinois mini-tour scheduled for Thursday

A mini-tour of Southern Illinois is planned for Thursday by the Ven- nevors for Southern Illinois Tourism (VISIT) organization.

The one-day tour, costing $19.50 per person, will include a buffet lunch, a tour through Lebanon, Salterpe Cave, and a ride on the old stream train. The cost includes two meals, the bus trip and refreshments.

The tour will begin in Belleville at 7:30 a.m. Further information can be obtained at the VISIT office in Marion, 903-569.

A trip to Hogg Bluff in Johnson county, limited to males, will be held July 21, 22 and 23.

A $10 deposit for the tour should be sent in with the tour list. Outdoor Illinois Magazine, Box A, Belleville.

Tax bills mailed; residents must pay assessments

Jackson County tax bills were mailed Friday by the office of county Treasurer Raymond J. Dillingar.

Mailings included 7,260 bills for almost $3.4 million to Carbondale residents and 6,286 bills to Murphysboro citizens for about $1.5 million.

The bills include current charges for 1974 bills on last year's real estate assessments, back taxes, railroad and utility bills, and personal property bills applicable to corporations, according to Dillingar.

First installments on the tax bills are due Aug. 15. The remaining installments are due Oct. 1, Nov. 1 and Dec. 1.

Carbondale youths earn summer cash working for city

By Charlotte James
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Thirty Carbondale youths are earning money for high school expenses, college, dates and other entertainment working for the city this summer.

The employees are working on the federal Neighborhood Youth Corps (NYC) project providing summer jobs for youths ages 14 to 21.

The NYC employs work 28 hours a week a cleaning streets, city hall and University City, painting crosswalks, mowing cemetery lawns, carrying out special events and performing other duties the full-time city staff doesn’t have time for.

The workers not only have varied jobs but varied priorities in spending their earnings. (Lee Kirksey, 17) who is assigned to mow the city cemetery lawns, said he spends some of his money to buy school clothes and some for partying.

Charles James, a high school sophomore, said he’s saving his money for college. Several workers admitted the NYC jobs are their only source of spending money. Overall, the consensus among workers appears to be, “we don’t mind the work, we take pride in our jobs and we sure are not broke.”

The NYC applicants are screened on the basis of income and size of family. A graduated scale is used to determine eligibility. For example, a family of six could earn no more than $5,500 per year or a family of seven no more than $6,700.

The nine girls and 21 young men are earning about $50 a week during the 9-week summer work schedule.

The 36 workers in Carbondale fill a third of the NYC jobs slots allotted for Jackson County.

About 250 Carbondale youths applied for work this summer and there just aren’t enough jobs to go around. Arthur Black, Carbondale Community High School principal and supervisor of the program said.

In addition to providing income, the work experience provides a valuable job reference for later employment. Black said.

But benefits of the NYC program are mutual, Scott Ratier, city personnel director, said. The city keeps a record of what the workers accomplish.

Last summer 23 NYC workers in Carbondale worked 3,778 hours for the city earning a total of $1,436 on the federally funded project. The city didn’t have the money to hire the summer workers although it needed many odd jobs done, Ratier said.

This summer it would have cost the city about $15,000 to hire the youths for the work they will have accomplished in nine weeks.

Last year, the summer employment program, part of the federal Emergency Employment Act, provided an additional 80 jobs to Carbondale youths. The program expired last year and hasn’t been replaced, Ratier said. The summer employment program, part of the Job Corps, was a real success in Carbondale and the administration for it is needed, he said.

The demonstration garden, with more than 200 kinds of annual flowers, as well as the demonstration area of perennial flowering plants, will be in a new location near the greenhouses at the former Federal Small Pests Station one-fourth mile south of Chautauqua Road about a mile west of the campus. Visitors to the flower gardens also can see varieties of garden vegetables planted at the same location.

Open House visitors will see a variety of other kinds of plantings at the Horticultural Experiment Station headquarters on West Chautauqua Road about a mile west of the campus where the demonstration flower gardens previously were located.

Coors said subjects of interest at the Horticultural Station center will include a phenology garden containing samples of most kinds of domestic plants - grasses, vegetables, fruits and field crops; lawn turfgrass variety and management plots; nursery plantings of ornamental annuals and rhododendrons; and a variety of dwarf ornaments for home plantings.

Frazier recalls Carbondale days

By Mark Topper
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Carbondale might not be the same city that Walt Frazier left seven years ago to become one of the most familiar faces in American sports, but Walt says he's still the same guy.

"It's a whole different scene from when I was a student. Everything is free and easy here now—there's less rules, no code for dressing—the young people are still doing good things but in a different way," Frazier said as he reminisced sitting on the weight machine of the SIU Arena.

"I used to live real good here in Carbondale on $125 per month, supporting my wife, going to the movies, paying the rent, groceries and everything," Frazier said. "Now it's a little different."

Frazier is in town to help conduct the Saluki-Murdale basketball clinic, a two week camp for area youths. His return to Carbondale last winter when SIU retired his jersey was his first visit to his alma mater since he became a New York Knick in 1967.

"I know the reason I'm back," Frazier said in a serious tone. "Like I said when they retired my jersey, people have treated me great in Carbondale. No one blamed me for passing up my final year of eligibility to turn pro and I remember that.

"Maybe the parents of some of the kids here at the camp were here when I was playing for SIU and this is just a little way of repaying them," Frazier said.

"I know people read about all the things pro players do and all the money and fancy clothes, but I'm the same person I've always been. I try to be considerate, I like people and I want people to remember that," he said. "I guess I'm not as shy and quiet as I used to be in public."

"I've been having a great time in Carbondale," said Frazier who has seen Carbondale night spots in his New York tradition. "Just being in the Arena again I can remember all the weight lifting and running I put in there and I see how it all payed off for me.

"I try to tell the kids that too," he said. "I do try to get to work hard, play good at anything. I don't want them to think that you get to be a pro just on natural talent. It takes a lot of hard work, no matter what it is you're doing. Not just sports."

Walt conducts his own basketball clinics and believes that the teaching fundamentals of extreme importance at a young age. "These clinics are for a good cause and give a kid a good experience. It's probably something most of them will never forget."

During the week Frazier has been in Carbondale he has scrimmaged with SIU players Mike Glenn, Corky Abrams, and Perry Hines. Walt, who complimented Glenn's play on his visit last winter, said SIU said after having played with him, "he's a real good player. I like his game and his shooting."

Frazier has had to sacrifice a bit of his flashy luxury for a slice of the Carbondale life, namely his burgundy and white Rolls Royce, to pay for a penthouse apartment that provides him with a huge round bed.

Frazier did say that sleeping in Ed Zustrow's trailer, is "different" than his circular mattress, but then recalled the days of his own trailer bed and his dog Jones. Walt Thompson Point is one of Frazier's better Carbondale friends, a former teammate from his 1967 NIT championship team.

"It's hard to believe that it's been seven years," the former Saluki ponders. "It's like I never really left."

When Walt repainted his Rolls, it cost him a cool $2,000 and took two weeks to apply 15 coats of paint. "I think I'll keep that car for forever," Frazier laughed. "It doesn't depreciate, in fact it goes up in value about $1,000 each year," he said of the 1965 model often driven by his personal chauffeur. "I think the paint job is a sign that I'll come to Carbondale and I'll bring it with me."

The clothes are probably not in his closet today, but this is how Walt Frazier looked when he was a student at SIU in 1967. Frazier said Carbondale is a "whole different scene" today than it was seven years ago. "Free and easy. Walt calls Carbondale in 1974.

Ed Snedeed captures lead in Quad Cities Open

By Dan Even
Associated Press Sports Writer

BETTENDORF, Iowa—Ed Snedeed, a 31-year-old five-time All-Pro tour player, won the 36-hole opening round of the Quad Cities Open Golf Tournament, which ends Sunday.

Former U.S. Amateur champion Bruce Fleisher equalled the course record with a 63 and Mike Morley shot a 64 to move into a tie for second at 133. First prize in this four-day event will be $20,000.

Snedeed's two birdies on the 64th and 65th holes gave him a five-under-par 69 and a three-stroke lead over fellow pro Snedeed, who carded a 69 and vaulted into a one-stroke lead at the midway point of the $100,000 Quad Cities Open Golf Tournament.

The winner of the Milwaukee Open last week, used a round that included five birdies, one bogey and an eagle three on No. 18 for a 69-62-131.
