Writing not always easy, students find

By Jerie Jayne
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Fred Hargardon, dean of admissions at Stanford University, recently reflected that "this is the generation of students who have been raised by television." In a March 3 article in the Chronicle of Higher Education on college entrance examination scores, Hargardon said, "many of our students are viewing and listening types as contrasted with reading types."

He said students are common who write passages of prose that do not support a focal topic and that contain logical fallacies. Examples of vague thought such as these could be corrected by logic, said Prescott. "I don't see how a logic course could hurt. Persons with structured thoughts write structured themes. And it's been said that time and time again. A good theme is a structured theme."

Friend said no one person or group can be blamed for students having mediocre writing skills, but she identified several contributing factors. "Elementary and high school teachers aren't always qualified to teach English. The state exercises no control over who is qualified to teach English. The State of Illinois doesn't require teachers to be certified in English, but without a certification in science you can't teach science," she said.

Friend said students show that both junior and senior high school English classes spend less time on writing skills than on literature. "Students don't see their language as a manifestation of their own personalities. They can see how music or art reflects their lifestyles, but not language. Few seem to recognize that their language says much about who they are and who they are," she said.

"As a result," Friend said, "students see the relevance of expository prose and, of course, logical thought to the direction they want their lives to take." She said, "Too often they lack the writing skills to communicate their ideas to the rest of the world when they get to college."

Ken Gray to work for University, city

By Mary Whitter
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU President Warren Brandt confirmed Tuesday that the University plans to hire former U.S. Representative Kenneth Gray as a consultant for federal programs.

Gray will be hired jointly by the University and the City of Carbondale. He will be paid $600 per month by both the city and University, Brandt said.

Mayor Neil Eckert presented the proposal to the City Council at its informal meeting Monday night.

Eckert, in a letter to the council said, "I think that Mr. Gray is now in a position to work in our behalf in Washington, D.C.

"During his 20 years in office, Congressman Ken Gray has demonstrated his tremendous skill in dealing with the federal bureaucracy and elected officials. Results in Southern Illinois, Washington, D.C. and throughout the country are visual proof of his skills," Eckert said.

Brandt said he believes that Gray can help SIU in a number of projects. The railroad relocation project and the career counseling center are examples of projects that would benefit SIU, Brandt said.

Gray is currently trying to clear up questions raised by the Chicago Sun-Times newspaper about his handling of campaign contributions.

The newspaper questioned the propriety of Gray selling a helicopter bought with campaign funds and using the proceeds for real estate investments.

Eckert said Gray told him the questions will be cleared up in a week or two.

Gray said he would not contract with the city and University until the questions are cleared up, Eckert said.

Monday the Council indicated general agreement to hire Gray, but it must take final action in a formal meeting.

In other business, the Council held a public hearing on the proposed Capital Improvements Program. The council had, sny questions and decided to continue the hearing next week.

The Council directed City Manager Fry to pursue plans for a city newsletter. Fry said the primary purpose of the newsletter would be to outline and explain changes and other contemplated by the Council, advise of upcoming meetings and report other formal actions of the Council.

Eckert proposed that the Council suspend for six months the provisions of the zoning ordinance relating to signs in the City of Carbondale. He said the City Manager to prepare a voluntary program to upgrade signs and to have the city staff to investigate a more desirable ordinance governing signs.

Eckert said, "The value of any ordinance passed by the City Council should meet three criteria. Is it fair? Is it enforceable? Does it serve the results for which it was passed?"

"In my opinion, the present and proposed signs away governing the in the City of Carbondale fall all three criteria," Eckert said.

Cost to determine fate of student phone book

By Ray Ubel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU-C students may have a phone directory next fall if the Daily Egyptian can publish it for $5,000 or less.

Patricia Cox, administrative aide to Acting Dean of Student Life Loretta Ott, spoke with Adrian Combs, business manager of the Daily Egyptian, last week about the possibility of publishing the student phone book.

"We're in the process of computing the cost," Combs said. "We don't know whether it would be economically feasible." Combs said he hopes to report back later.

Cox said the "top figure Student Life is willing to pay" for publication of the book is $5,000.

The phone book, if published, "will be strictly students' names, addresses and phone numbers with no ads," Cox explained.

Ott said University Graphics was contacted to determine how much the estimate was "too much money to go that way." She said she could not recall what the estimate was.

"We're trying to get all the information together," Ott said. "When we have that information, we'll sit down with constituencies and decide what we ought to do."
Faculty Senate gives approval to salary hike resolution

By Gary Marx
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Faculty Senate Tuesday approved a resolution calling for a two-part system of salary increases for all University employees beginning with fiscal year 1978.

The first part recommends between one-half and two-thirds of the total amount available for salary increases be across-the-board increases to all employees. The second part calls for the remainder of that amount to be awarded on the merit basis.

Flash flood warnings issued for lowlands

A special flash flood warning has been issued for lowland areas around Carbondale, the National Weather Service reported late Tuesday.

Heavy rains and melting snow will threaten lowland areas in the southern third of Illinois through Wednesday, the special weather report said.

A special radio report was issued by the Illinois State Police Tuesday afternoon, warning local civil defense and city authorities of the flood possibility.

Shryock stage work to be Board topic

By Laura Coleman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Another attempt to obtain $50,000 to complete the major renovation of the City auditorium at Shryock Auditorium will be made at Thursday's Board of Trustees meeting at the SIU-E campus.

Rino Bianchi, director of Facilities Planning, said the figure represents $50,000 for new cycloramas, rigging, weights, and mechanics to raise and lower curtains and a central lighting control panel. The remaining $9,000 will pay for the services of Associated Equipment Consultants of Knoxville, Tenn.

Bianchi described the current situation as "hard pressed" when traveling shows appear at Shryock Auditorium. "The stage is not equipped to handle all the scenery which comes with the traveling companies. "There's not much we can offer them," he said.

"We've tried for several years," Bianchi said, referring to previous attempts to obtain the funds, "but the Board has always had higher priorities."

Later in the theme the student writes, "After he had left, I was laid flat on the bed and was asleep."

Study results of fall semester's GSD 101 classes, the beginning English composition course, show that of 2,266 students enrolled, slightly more than 700 were out of the country by scoring a 90 or above on the College Level Examination Program test or the American College Testing exam. Fifty-five students advanced to GSD 117, the next English course, by doing better than satisfactory work in GSD 101 during the first five weeks of the course.

Grade distribution showed 40 per cent of the students did average or below average work in the GSD 101 course. Twenty-nine per cent received C's, 10.4 per cent received F's, 17 per cent remained in the course the following semester. Fewer than one per cent received D's or E's.

Students can get a D or E only by taking the course a second time or not attending class under SIU's "no chance" system. Students earning a D or E on the first attempt are taking the course a second time are required to pass the class the second time at a C or higher, meaning their work is in progress. The grade doesn't show on the transcript the student and he can't re-enroll in the course and complete the work during the next semester.

This doesn't mean, Friend said, that a student can graduate from SIU without completing the beginning English course. Students are required to pass the class the second time at a C or higher, meaning their work is in progress. The grade doesn't show on the transcript the student and he can't re-enroll in the course and complete the work during the next semester.

"The problem is that (President's Budget Advisory Committee) are well along in their planning," Brandt said. "It is difficult to make a recommendation to the Board to change the schedule halfway through the year."}

A recent resolution came from a faculty budget committee which met with Vice President for Administration George Mace before making its recommendation.

"Mr. Kenney, reporting for the committee, said Mace assured the committee that no faculty members will be dismissed because of insufficient funds. The committee, Kenney said, feels justified in making the salary cut because of the financial crunch."

Time will tell

Risks are imperative when one is attempting to rectify a drastic slack. Our governor, in dealing with the dire condition of Illinois' economy, realized that need when he prepared and presented a record $10.75 billion fiscal 1976 budget.

Certainly a budget calling for the state to spend every dime and dime and a half, as well as, a considerable amount of money, would be a gamble. But Governor Walker, in his state of the state address, said, "I believe we have a responsibility to spend and spend wisely." However, Governor Walker was clearly a gambler when he stated that the budget he has outlined will help the state's recovery. Governor Walker has said that the budget he has proposed is designed to stimulate an economic and financial recovery. However, Governor Walker has failed to mention that the budget he has proposed will not only stimulate an economic and financial recovery, but will also stimulate the political system. Governor Walker has failed to mention that the budget he has proposed will not only stimulate an economic and financial recovery, but will also stimulate the political system.

Almost 40 percent of Walker's budget covers his accelerated public works program, his personal approach to the state's $300,000-plus unemployed. Most of the capital for this project is to come from the sale of general obligation bonds which must be paid back over the next 25 years. Walker has assured us that the bond market is good and, while that is probably true, the fact remains that these bonds will have to be paid back.

This might, as some critics argue, throw us into massive inflation when repayment time comes. Walker, however, has dismissed these criticisms, saying that the bonds, used to finance highways, bridges, schools and other capital projects, will be retired through funds these operations generate. This, too, remains to be seen.

It is comforting to see that some of Mr. Walker's priorities are in the proper place. He plans to increase the state's education, health and welfare. For the first time in Illinois history, the state will match the taxpayers' contribution to the elementary and secondary education budget. He has also provided more than one billion dollars for higher education, a decided increase in scholarships to be made available.

Walker's $2.5 billion budget line, as he put it, is the transportation budget. Much of this $2.5 billion budget is designed to increase new road construction and public transportation spending. Walker has put too much money into this area, according to some transportation experts. They say the additional funds will go waste on the automoblies while he should have done more to aid public and mass transportation. Increased public transportation programs would take some of the burden off our roads, our environment and our pocketbooks.

Walker plans to implement this record budget without a tax increase something that would be politically unpopular. But, as the governor has acknowledged, the budget he has spelled out must be balanced by reduced spending in other areas of the state's budget. If the Walker administration is faced with a $255 million savings account, that $215 million savings account, that $10.75 billion budget, is one line in the Walker's budget. That is the same amount he set for the state last year.

Short Shots

Governor Walker appeared to be tired as he walked into his press conference last Thursday about ten minutes late. Still, he had his alert confidants about him as he entered the plush conference room at the Southern Illinois Airport.

Walker is miraculously giving everybody more without raising taxes. This governor has set aside $2 billion to pay off all the uncased general obligation bonds, the general obligation type that need to be paid back within 25 years. That will be long after Walker is gone from Illinois politics, having gone either to the White House or oblivion, depending on which way the political dice fall.

Anyone that has watched Walker's career, his walk across the state into the governor's mansion and "Winner walkin' home" image develop, would guess that the day will fall to his favor. Walker's ambition pours forth like water from a broken dam, forceful and mammouth, but with definite direction. It is a shame that the group of reporters that interviewed Walker at the Southern Illinois Airport were so cordial to the governor. Few of us have any budget expertise—our inherent distrust of politicians is about our only salvation, and that didn't help much because the stories on the radio and in the newspapers were fairly favorable to the governor, supporting his every claim. But, even the Chicago Tribune, that revered institution that likes to think of itself as being soberer than thou, didn't understand the budget very well, either.

Walker is smooth, probably enough so to slide his way into the White House, if not in 1976, then, perhaps, 1980. The truly successful politicians have had great personalities and Walker's is no rush to enter the presidential race. Besides, with the press pulling him because most of us don't know what the hell he's talking about, who'd vote against him? After all, we are the watchdog of the government. If we don't bark, who will?

Dear Mr. President: Phooey on you

By Arthur Hoppe

To the Daily Egyptian:

Dear President: I, Joe Skispak, American, take personal and public to poke a finger in your eye. It’s about this New Directions program you got. Like I was down at Paddy’s Place last night. “Give me a super-high, Paddy,” says I, and tell me who got us into this mess we’re in.”

“Well, Joe,” says Paddy, “the conservatives blame the liberals, the liberals blame every President back to L.B.J., Henry Kissinger blames that he’s a failure, and the oilmen blame that man in the White House, by whom she means F.D.R.

“But who was it, Paddy?” says I. “It was you, Joe,” says Paddy.

“Well, Paddy,” says I, kind of surprised. “What did I do?”

“Remember this time last year,” says Paddy, “you were living high on the hog—eating a steak once a week, taking the wife out to dinner and the movies on Saturday nights, buying a new color tee-vee.

“Flaherty, Joe,” says Paddy, “The President will let you know under his New Directions program. It’s working great. He’s got a new one every couple of months.

“So I just want you to know, President, how sorry I am. I got us into this mess. I’ll fight anything whatever New Direction you say.

“Gee, Paddy,” says Joe, “you ought to hear out those WIN buttons and get a new one. It’s got a One Way street sign on it with an arrow at each end.”

Truly Yours,

Joe Skispak, American

The federal government is our largest monopoly

To the Daily Egyptian:

Modern thinkers see that the free enterprise system is not working. Monopolies are sprouting everywhere and competition is becoming extinct. What do these thinkers propose to do about the problem? They propose to create a super-monopoly run by the government and eliminate competition altogether. If there are any sacred cows running around, the objects of unthinking, superstitious behavior, surely it is the Federal Government and not the free enterprise system.

To prevent abandoning the free enterprise system, for example, in the area of energy production and consumption, one should understand how over-regulated and crippled it is.

This is what the Federal Government has done to cause our energy crisis.

It has held the price of interstate gas at an artificially low price since 1955. This has guaranteed high demand and low supply and encouraged gas-mining companies to sell their supply in-trie-rate.

The government banned offshore drilling. It restricted domestic drilling, especially on federal land.

It limited the number of refineries and the amount of oil they could refine: instituted import quotas on oil, including the amount of foreign oil; blocked and delayed until recently the development and transportation of Alaskan oil.

It outlawed the use of most coal and some fuel oil because their sulfur content is "too high;" forced mandatory pollution devices on all new cars that use an additional 5 billion gallons of gas a year (according to the U.S. Office of Emergency Preparedness).

It forced bus companies to use 300,000 children a year which compells the waste of millions of gallons of gasoline yearly. It delayed the development of new fuel sources, for example, nuclear power plants.

Government regulation and interference with private mass transit has driven most of the private companies out of business and provided incentive to do so in the future.

Price controls have produced waste. They increase demand and limit supply by keeping prices low. The demand for distillate fuel oil by the nation’s railroad industry, the medical industry, and others has been increased from 2 to 100,000 barrels a day in 1970 (before general wage and price controls) to 180,000 barrels a day in 1972. Price controls have caused troubles in oil-related in-ducties. An example is the lack of capacity of pipes needed for drilling. Government inflation of the money supply has had to rise of prices of nearly everything. But these reasons will do nothing to stop shortages, inflation, energy crises, and numerous other consequences.

The regulatory agencies have been justly criticized for favoring the very industries they are supposed to regulate. This is only one chapter in the decline of our economic system. By being a monopoly, the government has contributed to the abandonment of the free enterprise system. But, clearly, big business continues to perpetuate the energy crisis.

It’s one of the greatest mysteries of modern times: that the government is not trusted to run the newspaper industry (at least not directly), yet we are expected to run the oil industry, the railroad industry, the medical industry in a non-self serving manner.

Letters to the Daily Egyptian

To the Daily Egyptian:

The Daily Egyptian expresses appreciation of letters from all members of the University community. However, with the new semester beginning in the recent event has a time constraint. Please bring your letters to the Daily Egyptian newspaper office on university or the day is possible. The editors reserve the right to edit or reject letters, to appear in a larger variety of sections, to correct minor typographical errors, and to shorten letters to fit space requirements.

To the Daily Egyptian:

The reason I’m writing is that I am indifferent and cannot afford to buy your newspaper and would appreciate a copy of your last issue. I have been in prison for the past seven years studying, political, criminal, and real estate law.

First of all let me say that I am an in-mate in the Illinois State Prison, Menard Branch, Psychiatric Section. Security, Fortieth Street, Murphysboro. The Illinois,1976 gives state prisoners the right to receive all types of newspapers and magazines.

Since the Burhnam vs. Oswald Case (1972) gives newspaper reporters the right to write a state prisoner who has expressed the desire for a visit, it would be appreciated if a member of your staff would visit me for a personal interview.

Ridiculous fees

To the Daily Egyptian:

Even in this time of inflation, this time of economic depression, this time of another, making it more difficult to go to school. That may seem so small—yet another, making it more difficult to go to school. That may seem so small—yet the costs of living is going up, except that the fees they are raising are for things like the Student Center and inter college activities which are not against equal benefits for women’s athletics, but how come we have to pay for some? Big business colleges are charging more than the first place, just because he or she happens to be a woman. We’ve had a hard enough time paying for our own education! Perhaps this reflects major problems in our education system and University; the unwillingness to educate the whole person, particularly in the fat areas that have little, if any, to do with our education (or the smooth flow of our society).

Anyone out there listening?

To the Daily Egyptian:

I am writing in response to the letter written by Mrs. JoAnn Hoerner, concer­ning the state of the economy. It appeared in the Daily Egyptian newspaper letter on March 15th, I Da sympathetic wholeheartedly with her statement that the SIU arena should serve not only the students’ body, but also the downtown businesses and the surrounding area.

However, whereas the problem to the polemic is that the SIU arena is serving the residents of the surrounding area first and disregarding the needs of the paying students, something is definitely wrong.

In her letter, Mrs. Hoerner thanked Dean Justice (SIU arena manager) for a clean, comfortable place. I am not sure that he is solely responsible, but if he is I would like to take this opportunity to say that I have done most of the students) very little to thank him for.

I think most people would agree that there is no shortage of rock groups these days and, as the Doobie Brothers mentioned, there are a lot of people here at SIU who enjoy rock music. Why, then, does the administration limit the number of top groups that are touring the campuses and cities throughout America?

Letters

Maybe Mr. Justice has a logical explanation. If so, I hope he makes it clear by writing a letter to the Daily Egyptian as I have done. Otherwise this letter will only be one more complaint that has appeared from time to time in the Daily Egyptian about this subject.

Shyrock hosts piano concert

A faculty piano recital will be presented by Steven Barwick, professor in the School of Music, at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Shyrock Auditorium. Under the auspices of the School of Music and the College of Communications and Fine Arts, Barwick's recital is number 77 in the 1974-75 Music and the Communications and Fine Arts Auditorium program.

Bob Shipp, the new FAA tower chief, said the take-over has gone very smoothly, largely because of the efficient procedures used by the private crew. He said the tower chief will operate 24 hours a day at first, with possible expansion of hours if needed. He added that the FAA may replace the present structure with a larger one in the future.

Shyrock said the tower handles two to three times as much traffic as other towers in the area. The present rate is 95,000 annual operations.

One of the previous controllers has been accepted to enter the FAA program and will remain on the job at the tower. Two others are being trained for work at FAA flight service stations. The former tower chief will work in the airport's weather station.

Nightblind child seeks Army's aid

GRANITE CITY, Ill. (AP)—Special glasses developed to help soldiers see at night may help an 11-year-old Granite City boy suffering from a rare form of night blindness, Army officials say.

The youngster, John Young, has been unable to see anything at night for several years, the result of retinitis pigmentosa, doctors say.

But now John and his family are hoping that his night vision will be returned by the glasses, which are due to be tested on him Wednesday, in Washington, D.C.

Albert Young, the boy's father, said the bulky, mask-like glasses were used by the Army for soldiers in Vietnam.

If the test is successful, the glasses will be loaned to Young under an arrangement worked out by Granite City Eye Physicians, Granite City Eye Physicians, and the Army.

Count Basie strikes big band sound

By Deborah Singer
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Style, in the form of a 17 piece band and a short "mahogany watermelon," of a man was seen in Shreve Auditorium Monday night. The Count Basie Orchestra was true, Basie and his band are really royalty.

Seated behind white monogrammed chairs, the saxophonists headed the band's arrangement, behind him it was "queen for tenor men," and claims that, "The band has always been a rhythm section to the tenor and then on to the echo boxes and it continues that way in traveling with Basie are Eddie "Lil Joe" Davis, and Buck

Drums was featured in a solo that opened the show. Almost without introduction, Brian Swift made his way to the front of the stage, Basie no longer is restraining his solos. On a number called "Left Hand Jump," the distinctive Basie sound that relies on a heavy rhythm section and a steady 4-4 time, was laced. The response to this song, as well as to most of the others was tremendous.

Even though Basie claims that the basically unchanged and identifiable sound that has been his trademark for over 40 years has been the key to his survival, fans don't array because of a little difference.

One of the distinctive surprising qualities of the "same sound" in Basie's marsem sound of piano playing. People remarked at Monday night's concert that they loved what was happening, but that they wanted to hear The Count play more piano.

Basie uses his piano like a baton to lead the band, and on all but a few selections, his playing is so short that it usually only amounts to 30 seconds of a five minute tune. This quality remained consistent in the Shreve performance. Those who had come expecting to hear Basie give a virtuoso performance did not come to listen to the Kansas City-based blues of Basie's band.

One of the Count's more well-known songs was "What Are You Doing the Rest of Your Life?" which featured Plater on soprano sax again. It was a beautiful, slow number, and Plater's wailing sax was exceptional.

Billy Cobby is the vocalist traveling with the band and is an otherwise excellent concert, he was slightly out of form. He was only featured on three songs and part of the problem was possibly the material he was singing. "Big Bad Louie Brown" seemed especially unsuited to Cobb's smooth, deep

Calibre hosts stage version of new bawdy Vonnegut novel

By Michael Hawley
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Attention all empty-headed, erased capitalists and truth-searching artists whose lives have nothing but "dauber-quant!"

The Kurt Vonnegut novel written about you, "Breakfast of Champions," will be performed at 8 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday at the Calibre Stage of the Communications Building.

Assistant Professor of Speech Janet McHughes, who is directing the production, promises that she has kept the script very faithful to the novel.

"Breakfast of Champions" is teaching, among other things, the morning of a psychiatric psychiatric patient. The novel was written in 1973 by Dr. Vonnegut, who was named Kilgore Trout whose stories are narcistic, character-filled novels. It's also one of the most controversial ones of America over it appears in print.

While playing the production for laughs, McHughes said she has served in on this cynicism. The sets for the show have been painted red, white and blue; and Vonnegut's outrageous illustrations, which accompany the book, have been worked into the production.

According to McHughes and McHughes, "Chamber of Champions" is structured so that chapters alternate between Hoover and Hoover and Vonnegut has divided the Calibre Stage in half to accommodate them.

To shorten the production to two-and-a-half hours, McHughes says she has eliminated some minor characters. Claiming to have left all the novel's lewdness intact, McHughes also emphasizes that the production is definitely not for children.

Women find college re-entry tough

NEW YORK (AP) — Finding older women to go back to college is not a priority in many places.

The problem is finding enough money for scholarships and innovative programs to eliminate the hurdles of reentry, says Professor Susan Cless of the Education Head Start at Indiana University. A recent study says that 8,000 older women are staying out of college because of the cost. The study found that 80 percent of older women who are college graduates are not using the education they have gained.

It's not only five or six colleges and universities that have good programs but many others which have available reentry educational programs for women.

There are many more opportunities for older women than ever before. The spectrum of education for older women has grown.

"Women notice," Cless says, "they have different needs than younger women. Older programs are developed for older women. It's a problem, but we are finding solutions.

"Women, at a certain age, decide to re-enter the education system. They want to increase their knowledge and improve their skills," Cless said.

"Women who are successful in re-entering college do it with confidence enough in her to give her the financial means within her geographic limitations and her early limitations. It's a new concept in higher education, she notes, yet money is the crux of the problem. The programs which are sponsored by a hair products manufacturer, is going to go very far, but what Cless is hoping for is that other companies will recognize the vast intellectual capacity of the mature woman and "put her money where their mouth is."

"There have been very few scholarships throughout the country for women over 25, primarily because there are not that many over 25. But usually only five or six colleges and universities are funding scholarships and fellowships are partly available. Yet, if one takes every little moment, one can get a woman back in school. Most more programs are for either two-year or four-year educational institutions. A good idea to them is the middle-aged woman. She can do what she wants or needs for a college but is not ready for a university."

Man charges Navy with false advertising

CENTRALIA, Ill. — An Illinois man has brought a $100,000 libel suit against the Navy with promises that don’t ring true.

"Lured," he said, "by advertising about benefits that Navy people need for personnel, including background in journalism," Joe Culver filed suit in federal court in Chicago last week against the president and managing editor of the Chicago Tribune.

"He promised me an honorable discharge with full benefits because I was in the Navy," he said. "He said the Navy was facing a challenge that Navy journalism professionals is a man is equivalent to the challenge railroad train faces when confronted by a toad frog.

In fact, Culver said, he doubts the Navy ever will.” When he reported for duty at Guantanamo Bay, he said, he was ordered to serve with the military police for two months even though his rate is in journalism, second class.

Actually, he said, he should be discharged because he’s in a list of Navy experience criteria but no one showed him the list until it was too late.

That, Culver said in a discharge request he sent to the chief of naval personnel, is just an allotment of bureaucratic shoe’s is floundered on.

For example, Culver said, his wife and children had to live out of suitcases in the white years of transportation to Cuba. The Navy wouldn’t fly them down because they didn’t have the necessary paperwork. That was held up because the Navy had lost some other necessary papers but hadn’t bothered to tell them.

No such troubles befall their household effects, which were en route to Cuba, which is why his family was living out of suitcases. And when the furniture arrived it was heavily damaged.

For Culver the sailing wasn’t much smoother. When he finally had to work at the Gazettie, the newspaper, he found “an apparent policy of ignoring and surprising” news which doesn’t suit the commander, something for which the civilian experience the Navy was looking for hadn’t prepared him.

Had the career opportunities been as good and as challenging as I had been led to believe, I would have made the Navy my career," Culver said. "However, since the challenge and opportunities were misrepresented, I neither want to make the Navy my career nor to complete my enlistment." During this enlistment I am gaining no marketable employment skill, and am, indeed, losing proficiency in the one skill I possess.

Culver said there is no regulation to support his request. However, about a week after he made it, the Army granted a discharge to a soldier denied benefits promised by a recruiter.

"This is simply a case of one insignificant sailor attempting to battle the red tape jungle of the U.S. Navy," Culver said. The Navy spokesman said he couldn’t comment specifically on Culver’s request because it was still in channels.

Women in psychology offering sexual assertiveness classes

Plans for weekly sexual assertiveness training sessions are being finalized in Psychology Department.

The training will begin the week following spring break, to be held from March 21 to April 4. The exact methodology will be based on the work of Nechama Lus-Levinson, a graduate student in psychology.

"The training will last for five weeks, in small groups of five to eight for women, but we have plans to have sessions for men in the summer," she said.

She said the planners are trying to get enough women registered to schedule two sessions, one in the late afternoon and one in the evening.

"Any interested person is encouraged to sign up," said Donna Harris or Emily Coleman at 453-5310.

The sessions are an extension of the idea that assertiveness training can help people express their rights without stepping on the rights of others. Sexual assertiveness is designed to enable women to get in touch with what they want and teach them how to ask for it. If they don’t want something, it can teach them how to make refusals," Lus-Levinson said.

Meany says jobs will end recession

NEW YORK (AP)—"American workers are the most productive and ingenious workers in the world," said George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO.

But when asked to back up, he said, and there is still time to prevent a depression.

"With more than 7.5 million Americans out of work, the president of the nation’s largest labor union is urging the government to do something about the recession.

"When asked to comment, Meany responded quickly and in typical labor language, a demand for unionization and a bit of anger. Workers, he insisted, are the basis of the American economy, but he wasn’t sure how they are going to do it.

"The people need to know that the leaders of their government see human beings in the unemployment line, not statistics," he wrote.

"The jobless are not loafers, they are the victims of ill-advised government policies. The unemployed who need food stamps, he said, "are not cheats, they are hungry."

What should be understood, the labor leader continued, is that it is in the self-interest of Americans that enable them to buy the goods they produce. "Unemployment wastes this valuable productivity and robs the economy of its essential strength—its buying power."

Meany said "American workers have faith that their government...can still prevent the current recession from becoming a depression. But faith alone is not enough."

"These government leaders must be powered by the people to act in their name and for the public good must move quickly, in an atmosphere of compassion and fair play, to buttress the people’s faith," Meany said.

Panel seeking new chairman

George T. Weaver, assistant professor of forestry, will serve as acting chairman of the SIU Forestry Department until July 1 when a chairman will be named by a search committee.

The previous chairman, A. A. Molinari, resigned March 1 to become the associate dean and associate director of the experiment station in the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Scientists of the University of Idaho at Moscow.

Budelsky said "there have been a few tentative inquiries," but the screening process will not start until "around April 4 & 4."

The candidates first will be screened by the search committee, Budelsky said. A few will then go to the Forestry Department faculty members who will recommend between three and five to School of Agriculture Dean G.H. Kroening. Kroening will make the final selection.

Veteran Loan attracts only three takers

The Illinois Guaranteed Loan is still a better deal for students who are veterans than the new Veteran Loan, according to Ron Hubbs, coordinator for certifications at the Veteran's Benefits Office.

The Veteran Loan allows qualified veterans to borrow up to $600 for the academic year and $300 for the summer term, but it is designed as a "last resort loan," Hubbs stressed.

He said there is no telling how long processing loan applications will take once three students have applied so far.

Hubbs said that veterans are not eligible for the new loan unless they have applied for the Illinois Guaranteed Loan and have been denied by at least two lenders.

He added that applicants for the Veteran Loan must have at least six months of eligibility remaining on their GI Bill benefits.

Hubbs explained that applicants will receive only $525 under the Veteran Loan program because the interest on a $600 loan is eight percent. The Guaranteed Loan is an interest rate of seven percent.

Hubbs said the Veteran Loan is retroactive to the beginning of fall semester. Loan payments begin nine months after graduation or when a student drops below half-time status, he said.

The student will have 18 years and nine months after graduation to work off the loan, Hubbs added.

SIU appraisal submitted by forestry team

The Society of American Foresters (SAF) visitation team has concluded its visit to SIU and will present findings in a written report to the accreditation committee during the September SAF meeting in Washington, D.C.

The SIU Forestry Department will receive a copy of the visitation team's report, but official accreditation would not come until the SAF meets in December, George T. Weaver, acting chairman of the department, said.

The visitation team was making an "on-site visit to gather any further information they might need. It is a fact-finding team, not a recommendation team," Weaver said.

Before the visit team left SIU, Feb. 18, it received a report with all the information it needed about the Forestry Department including budget, facilities and facilities, Weaver said.

SIU to receive helicopter as gift

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale, announced Monday that the General Services Administration has approved the donation of a TH-13 helicopter to SIU.

The helicopter is to be used by the aviation program at SIU, Simon's press secretary, Terry Michael, said. The helicopter will be transported to the University of Illinois for conversion to SIU. Michael said the helicopter will be needed, among other uses, to supply an aviation education program.

"Dope" sniffing canine retires from customs

The U.S. Customs Service said Bill, a 10-year-old German shepherd, is still "enthusiastic" about sniffing out concealed narcotics. It's just that he can't see well anymore.

In two years on the job along the Mexican border, Bill was credited with 250 narcotic seizures that netted more than 14 tons of marijuana. He was honored recently in El Paso at a brief retirement party attended by his handler, Customs agent Ted Ryan, Customs district director Robert N. Balicki and Commissioner of Customs Vernon D. Acree.

"Since completing Customs training in 1971, Bill served both Customs and Office Ted Ryan faithfully and effectively.

"In honoring him, Customs not only pays tribute to an effective dog enforcement team, it honors all dog-officer teams keeping narcotics out of the United States," said Acree.

Bill was recruited by Customs in 1971 after a career as an Army sentry dog.

Between April 1971 and March 1979, while assigned to the Calistoga, Calif., port of entry, Bill's investigative nose led agents to 4,800 pounds of marijuana.

Bill was taken out of service for treatment of cataracts, then given additional training and returned to duty with Ryan in Calistoga. Customs said. Shortly thereafter, officials said, he discovered 1,300 pounds of marijuana hidden in the back of a camper bus.

Woman winemaker says gender no problem in employment

HEALDSBURG, Calif. (AP)—In the distinctly masculine world of winemaking, a name like Mary Ann Graf stands out.

She is the only woman winemaker in a major California winery.

"When I was in college I didn't particularly give it a whole lot of thought. I just thought I would go into business or a woman's business," said Graf, who lives in the Healdsburg area and who didn't think I had any problems getting into it," she said.

Graves, 49, graduated from the University of California at Davis in 1963 with a degree in enology.

"Women are making wine so that's not going to make a problem," she said.

Both men and women make wine, but Graf said she has found that the business is not an issue for her.

Two men rob gas station late Monday

Carbondale police are searching for two black males, both about 5-10, who robbed the Clark gas station at 191 E. Walnut St. about 9:52 at 9:53 p.m. Monday.

Both suspects were armed, Fred Gustafson, the attendant on duty, told police. Gustafson said the pair asked him to open the cash register and fled with cash from the station. They began to leave, Gustafson said, but then turned and each posted a pistol at him.

Gustafson said they ordered him to give them the money and left after he gave them the money. He said he then ducked behind the counter and did not see the direction they fled or if they had a car.

Sex attitudes examined by women's panel

The effects of society on women's attitudes towards their sex roles will be discussed at a seminar from noon to 2 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center Auditorium.

Discussion leaders will be Harry Rubin, School of Medicine; Barbara Gable, School of Education; and Chuck Landis, assistant director of SIU's Counseling Center.

Model U.N. features speaker on topic of 'Starving Millions'

Thomas Malone, an international authority on Third World development, will deliver the keynote address at the 17th annual Model United Nations, or MUN, competition in the Student Center Auditorium.

The world food and population crises will be the topic of the mock United Nations, or MUN, which is sponsored by the United Nations Association of Southern Illinois and the Student Body at SIU.

On Friday, the annual Model U.N. will be held in the Student Center Ballroom D.

A native of Sonoma County, then worked a lot of weekends interning at the largest wineries, in northern Sonoma County, then worked in the laboratory of a premium winemaker.

She was hired by the Simi Winery in February of 1979.

She said in an interview in her lab at Simi, located on the outskirts of this Sonoma County town on the Russian River, that she had recently received a questionnaire asking about women in business.

"I was hard pressed to find things to write about because I don't spend a lot of time thinking about it," she said.

"I'm not particularly feminist about the feminist movement because I've got other things to do. I have to worry about doing a good job just like any man has to worry about doing a good job.

Mary Ann is so enthusiastic about her work she occasionally helps out in the winery's tasting room on crowded weekends.

As winemaker, she is essentially responsible for the product that goes in the bottle and on the shelf, that includes everything from the vineyard to the foil covering on the bottle.

"I do have an advantage being a woman," she said.

"You're interviewing me," she said to a writer, "and I've been on two television panel shows. It's a case of my being a novelty. People want to talk to me.

But she rather be known for the quality of wine she makes, which experts rate highly.

"I think the important thing is that ultimately, I hope I'm judged by whether I'm a good winemaker—not that I'm a good winemaker for a woman.

Simi was started in the last century but was in near dormancy until it was purchased five years ago and revived by Russell Green, the former head of Signal Oil. Green had a home and vineyard land in the nearby Alexander Valley.

Mary Ann helped finish the 1972 wines, already aging when she was hired, then had her first crush in the 1973 vintage.

World's tallest woman gets red carpet

By Linda Henon

Sandy Allen, the tallest woman in the world, said she knows why Frank G. Gerber is interested in her.

Danny Gerber, who wants to be her boyfriend, "can understand why I have any title at all."

Allen, 19, from Shelbyville, Ill., is listed in the "Guinness Book of World Records" as the world's tallest woman. She is 7 feet 5 inches and weighs 43 pounds.

Gerber, a 7-foot-4-inch compressed football player who also plays on a professional basketball team.

On March 12, Gerber will be at Allen's home town, Flora, Ill., located about 160 miles north of Carbondale, through the efforts of Leah Yates, a 1974 SIU graduate, a reporter for a local newspaper, "The Clay County Advocate Press.

This second area was covered extensively by the media. The couple's first date on Feb. 8 earned them worldwide publicity.

Yates, the head of the "Sandy Allen Day" committee, arranged the day's activities which included eating at five local restaurants, visiting and receiving gifts from several businesses and meeting residents.

People of the town of 3,000 turned out by the hundreds to greet Allen. So many, in fact, that the couple found it difficult to walk down the street. Even though the crowd tired Allen, she still considered the day "fantastic."

Gerber said his acquaintance with Allen started from a magazine article he read about her. "I decided to call her because she is my size and on the phone she sounded like a nice girl," Gerber said.

After the phone calls began to snowball, the couple decided to meet. The meeting resulted in a mention on Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show." The show has been contacted concerning an appearance of the tall pair.

'I'd love to go on Carson's show. If I went there, Dan would go with me," Allen said.

If the Gerbers do decide to visit Flora, Allen's brother, Bill, and his family will be invited to the Carson show. Gerber said he had become interested in the sexual appearances and publicity they brought from the couple.

Gerber works at RNB Enterprises. When he isn't working at the grain mill, he spends time at his brother-in-law's 114-acre farm. There he helps to gather the eggs laid daily by 16,000 chickens.

Allen works at the Indiana State Board of Animal Health in Indianapolis. She commutes to work, riding in a limousine. The tall girl enjoys her work, but doesn't plan to remain there the rest of her life.

"I will probably like to get into public relations to work in advertising," Allen said.

One of Allen's favorite sports is basketball. She is a member of the Radio WIBC "No Stars" basketball team. She is the leading scorer of the team's leading scorers, totaling 22 points in the first game.

The cause of her abnormal growth is her pituitary gland. Doctors have found that the gland works 100 times the normal rate.

Allen has passed her maximum height but her pituitary gland is still overworking. Doctors have told her in the past few months that if the gland isn't removed it will cause an early death.

Allen said the surgery will probably be performed, but right now she said she doesn't want to think about it. Allen has already undergone two operations on her legs in an effort to control her growth.

"The most trouble I've had with my height was my freshman year in high school. I was about seven feet then," Allen recalled. "The kids really picked on me. It really hurt my feelings, but now I've decided not to let remarks bother me."

Gerber said he was never the victim of ridicule because of his height, but he does have problems. His biggest problem is getting through doors. "I've cracked my head a lot."

Most people don't know how it feels being a celebrity. Nor do they understand the feelings of an unusually tall person. Allen and Gerber experience both. They agree that the worldwide recognition has changed their lives but not their outlooks.

Carbondale police change patrols to cover for four suspended officers

The Carbondale Police Department has changed its patrol operation after four, 16-hour work weeks are five day, eight hour operation.

Carbondale Police Chief George Kennedy said the patrol plan has been changed due to the leave of absence of four officers charged with illegal restraint in the Sylvester Manor case.

The change became effective Monday.

The new system gives the Officer to aid minorities

Cleveland Matthews has been named the new Special Operations Officer for Carbondale. Matthews said his mission is to implement a special operations program in compliance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act and Executive Order 11246.

Matthews's assignment will be the responsibility of helping racial, ethnic and sexual minorities feel more comfortable.

He said his first responsibility will be to check out complaints of minority employment in Carbondale. He wants a "bias-free" office.

Interstate phone rates hiked

Rates for out-of-state long distance phone calls increased on March 8.

The rise resulted from a Federal Communications Commission (FCC) decision allowing American Telephone and Telegraph Co. to increase interstate rates.

Local and intrastate calls dialed direct are not affected by the FCC decision.

The new rates affect all telephone users making long distance out of state phone calls.

Two new microfilmers hired for Jackson County Clerk

Jackson County Clerk Robert Harrel said he was pleased about the hiring of two microfilmers to photograph the county's records. Harrel said the two, Shirley Dougan and Cindy Stewart, would probably begin work by Friday.

The County Board of Supervisors approved hiring of the microfilmers on Feb. 14, but Harrel said difficulties in finding persons who met the 13-week unemployment requirement and in communicating with applicants has slowed the hiring.

The project is funded by the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA). Funding for the program ended in February 1978, he said.

"The girls will photograph the back records and do the daily work as they are trained," Harrel said.

Currently, a regular member of his office staff does the daily work which takes about 30 minutes a day, he said.

Engineering students get certificates

Two SIU engineering students were presented honorary awards recently at the annual Engineering Club Banquet.

The Annual Outstanding Senior Award was given to Atanasia S. Toman, president, Engineering Club, secretary. The award is based on character, responsibilities, scholastic achievement and participation in the Engineering Club, granted in cooperation with the Illinois Society of Professional Engineers.

Christopher H. Schreiber, president of the Engineering Club, was presented the Most Valuable Service Award. The award is presented only when there exists a truly deserving student in the current year. It is given to "recognize significant service rendered by an outstanding Engineering Club student," the Engineering Club to the School of Technology through the activities of the Engineering Club.

Both students received a certificate commemorating their awards, and both will have their names engraved on a permanent plaque in the Technology Building.

Sister urges nuns to seek new image

NEW YORK (AP) — Although nun's have moved into the forefront of lines of Christian ministry in the world, the impression persists that they're still more monastic and monastic functionaries, sister Elizabeth Toman. It's a false image, she adds, and she's not to change it.

"The gap between what we are and what others think we are still is to be bridged," she says. "We're moving into a new definition of our life and it needs to be recognized by the public, by the faith community and by the hierarchy itself.

"Sisters have become very serious ministers dealing with issues of social justice and with the gospel in terms of the world today. Sister Elizabeth, of Los Angeles, the first American nun to found her own public relations agency, is chairman of a communications task force being set up by several organizations of Roman Catholic women to make their new ways better known.

"We've been under a bushel basket," she said in an interview. "It's time to get our work out and put it on the lamplight so people know what we're going on and see the light and perhaps get some guidance from it.

A pretty, forthright brunt of 31, she said the impression hangs on that nuns are "quiet, delicate, creative and retiring," that the superior tells them what to do and the Provincial pays their salary. It's crazy. It's a completely erroneous stereotype.

...but it's a myth that has to be overcome before women can be considered for the Roman Catholic priesthood, she said. They must be taken seriously as legitimate ministers of the church.

"Once they're accepted as ministers in the church, then in the future they can be considered for ordination. I don't see any feeling yet for accepting their ordination. But personally I think it's inevitable in the long run," she said.

At present, however, she said the widespread, lingering attitude is that nun's are only engaged in the institutional, either teachers or nurses, although actually they're increasingly getting out of simply staffing institutions, such as schools and hospitals.

"When there are good public hospitals and schools, why compete?" she said. "Why keep the institutions if they're not filling the community purpose? Traditional institutional visitation must go, it's not needed, so sisters now are free."

She said a majority of the sister's communities, totaling 140,000 American nun's, now allow some freedom of choice in pursuit of a religious calling.

"Sisters are involved in every field of work now, ranging from public education, health clinics in ghettos and social welfare work to prisons, politics, studying law and becoming activists of the poor," she said.

Students to probe Southern Illinois

By John A. Barry

Participants in a new anthropology school will be to study the people of Southern Illinois this summer.

Milton Altschuler, associate professor of anthropology, received a two-year award from SIU for his field school program.

"Anthropologists have traditionally felt they had to go out into the backwoods for their studies," the teacher explained.

In opposition to this trend, he said, the study team, composed of students from throughout the country, will live and work in a selected Southern Illinois community.

Cobden and Christopher are possible locations because they are representative of most area communities, Altschuler said.

"We want to see how people define themselves and what they see as their basic problems," he said, "but we also want to learn how they differentiate themselves from people in other places.

Each of the approximately 15 student participants undertake an area of study that interests them and are asked to analyze the effects of the developing coal industry in areas adjacent to the campus. Student assistants are selected from the county's camera.

Harrel is currently awaiting delivery of a microfilm developer so that previously shot rolls of microfilm can be mounted. Harrel said.

Top challengers await gymnasts

Wayne Chandler leads the way in all-around competition for the Nittany Lions and could cause trouble on the parallel bars, along with teammate Robert DeSiderio. DeSiderio also figures in the floor exercise competition along with Kurt Pflieger, the same tandem that could qualify them for a trip to the finals. "Even though they're on spring break, they wouldn't come out here on Monday normally," Meade remarked. "It looks like a head-to-head battle between us and Indiana State, with Penn State just sitting there."

The fact that Indiana State whipped Penn State at Penn State kind of puts that team back in the picture," Meade said. "I think it's a battle between me and Roger."

"Roger" is Sycamore coach Bruce Reddick, whose Salukis performer whose team has lost only one meet this year, put three in the finals. For a time, the team was rated tops in the country—in fact, until the Salukis defeated them at the AAI meet. Doug Griffith and freshman Kurt Thomas are also rated for Indiana State, ranking in a fourth place tie nationally in all-around competition with 54.50's. The Sycamores are blessed with nationally rated performers right down the line.

Bob Mattlin leads the floor exercise parade with a 9.5 mark, good for a first place tie nationally. Teammate Randy Nelson could also figure in the battle.

Ed Paul and Joe Chidles are the top competitors in the pommel horse event with Paul Smith, Larry Brown and Jack Fischer holding hopes in the rings. Thomas is tied for fourth in vaulting with a 9.4 and, along with Griffith, packs a threat, while the third place holder on the parallel bars, though neither is ranked.

Darrel Crisble, tied for fourth, is the key threat on the high bar, but Griffith is tied for seventh and Thomas is solid, also. "They don't have any real weaknesses," Meade admitted. The pommel horse and parallel bars are their least successful events, but they're tough in compulsories.

Meade also sent out information to 36 other schools, but just Bill Waddell of Western Michigan is new this year. Neither Thomas nor Kent State returned inquiries.

Tickets are $1 for students, $2 for adults.

Eagles roll

The Elderwood Eagles overcame a last quarter comeback attempt by Jewish Tuesday night at the SIAA Arena to hold a 53-31 victory.

Cairn, down by nine after three quarters, fought to within 25-33 with 30 seconds left, but the winners pulled away and sank three free throws in the last 25 seconds to seal the win.

In Class AA action, undefeated Bessemer, the prime Southern Illinois foil, held the way by the wide, 76-44, to move the Eagles over bows at 27-2.

Other Class AA sectional scores: Thornwood 58, Thornridge 55 East Leyden 75, St. Charles 52

Sailing set

The Southern Illinois Collegiate Sailing Club will be holding a "Free Sailing" day at the club's land on Crab Orchard Lake Saturday, if weather permits.

"Free Sailing Day was started by the club to let anyone interested in the sport get out in a boat and try sailing before joining the club," said Jim Griffin, club commodore.

Griffin said the club owns seven Flying Juniors, 14-foot sloops. The boats are d. not only for pleasure sailing, but also for intercollegiate racing.

The club is tentatively scheduled for five regattas this semester, including one to be held at SIAI.

Griffin added that, for anyone not sailing, there will be a volleyball game lasting most of the day and a cookout that evening.

The club will provide rides to the lake leaving from the Student Center at 10 a.m.

"I'm really anxious to go," he said, with a look of anticipation. "I don't get nervous before meets, but I'll probably be more up for this one than some of the others this year," Track coach Lew Hartung thinks that it may not take a super jump to win the pole vault. Qualifying rounds would take a lot out of the vaulters, and Hartung wants to think it will "take quite a jump to win."

"It's hard to say, but I think we'll come out with a jump of 13-2 to win the event."

Can improve almost a foot

from his previous best of 16-7.5

"I think I'm capable of going 16-

6.5 before the meet and improving another nine inches outdoors. It's nice to be coming off a halfway decent season," said coach Lew Hartung.

The five of Port Wayne, Ind., said the vaulters do "more running than actual jumping. We also do a lot of weightlifting and gymnastics," Hartung replied.

"I asked his high school, we did a lot more running because there was no place to vault indoors."

Hartung was a highly touted schoolboy out of Norrupt High after placing himself third in the all-time high school pole vault list with a mark of 18-4.4. Hunter also won his specialty at the Indiana State High Meet and the Golden West Meet.

Just a few schools seeking Hunter's talents, neither Tennessee, Kansas and Texas-Ol Pue, how did SUI win the recruiting battle?

"I liked the coaching staff and the philosophy of the program," Hunter says by his or little-shape this year than last, but he still needs to work on his form some. Friday and Saturday he hopes to be in good form, considering a few people he knows will be in the stands when he competes.

"My parents and a bunch of my friends are coming up to watch me, as it will be just like practicing at home," he said.
Pitt press poses possible problem

Perry Illinois recovery from a leg injury is bound to last just three days away from the beginning of the season.

The Salukis converted court general could spell the difference against Pitt.

A team handled Paul Lambert learned throws a full-court press defense.

Penn State picked third

Editor's note: This is the second of a four-part series concerning the visiting happenings and events competing in the NCAA Eastern. Ohio's trip meant for gymnastics at the SIU Arena starting Friday.

If practice makes perfect perhaps Penn State could.

Don't count it.

Even though the Nittany Lions have had a tough time since Monday it's doubtful they could upset their Eastern Conference foe on the Eastern Qualifying Meet for gymnastics yesterday.

Penn State is ranked 11th nationally but it doesn't hold much water next to the meat of the Eastern Conference.

Penn State is well balanced and are being mentioned as a possible threat to SIU.-Illinois. Occasionally hall marks for such a team.

The no. 1 team is solid and floor even better. Jim Buford made a strong showing yesterday but the closest is a second place deal.

The meet this weekend is a strong one however.

The difference between SIU-Illinois and the Nittany Lions this season and SIU barely nudged the Nittany Lions a few weeks later.

Still, Penn State like also-rans Illinois and SIU are a different level.

The team doesn't have any nationally ranked gymnasts to help its cause.

Meanwhile the team figures to battle for an event championship.

Reader replies to use of ‘Dogs’

Columbia, Detroit or Penn State. When I see Salukis however, I know the story is about SIU. In journalism, as in broadcast, the match is, I am sure, a well thought over metaphor and just let it go at ‘Dogs’.

Our language is replete with using ‘dog’. A team sandwiched Paul Lambert. We often refer to a good day on the horse that finishes out the money.

The world, for generations, has gone to the horse that finishes out the money. And, in general, is grudgingly referred to as a ‘dog’.

When a newspaperman converts ‘works’ into ‘tackles’ and about the ‘Dogs’, I can accept that as a shorter, more easily handled version of the same basic word. But it is not analogous to slide down that some comfortable rut toward journalistic sloth that marks the desecration of ‘Salukis’ in favor of the inaccurate (though easier to fit) ‘Dogs’.

I have been given the impression at some future time to cover the Olympic basketball competition. It will be monotonous to be forced every day to write of the various national teams involved.

I know you would not be guilty of such bad taste in that (continued)

The world is just a doggone shame!

Just two needed notes. (1) “interchanging” and “abandonment” are two totally different terms, and (2) “inaccurate.” Those guys aren’t walking moo cows on the sidelines.

Otherwise, I bite my lip—painfully.
