No increase in prices for 71 football tickets

By Tom Oelen

The Springfield office of the U.S. Department of Internal Revenue told the Student Executive Board Tuesday that prices for football tickets cannot be increased.

Boydston had previously said he felt that prior publicity given the ticket price increase would exempt it from the freeze. He said the price increase was planned and the tickets were printed well before President Nixon's Aug. 14 announcement of the wage-price freeze.

The question about SIU ticket prices was referred to the Springfield office by the local branch of the Office of Emergency Preparedness.

Resolution passed on Canut-Amoros case

By Richard Loven

At its Tuesday meeting, the Faculty Council passed a resolution asking for a reappointment of negotiations in the Marias Canut-Amoros resignation case.

In another resolution, the council asked the administration not to respond to the Illinois Board of Higher Education's request for a priority list of programs until the council has drawn up a priority list.

The motion on the Canut-Amoros case, sponsored by Keith Sanders, an associate professor of speech and amended by Donald Detwiler, an associate professor of history, put the council on record as "requesting that Ms. Canut-Amoros and the SIU administration resume negotiations in an attempt to arrive at mutually agreeable conditions under which her services can be continued."

There were three conclusions upon which the recommendation was made. First, that Ms. Canut-Amoros has proven her scholarship and that the administration has not challenged her execution of her assigned duties. Second, that it was because Ms. Canut-Amoros was a source of irritation that the administration re-
SIU to publish 1500 copies of Grassroots arts magazine

By Barry Cleveland
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"Grassroots is not a literary magazine but a magazine of the arts," Frankline "Buzz" Spector, executive editor of the magazine said Monday in announcing its impending publication.

"At least 1500 copies of the student-edited, student-financed Grassroots will soon be available for 75 cents each. Students seem to feel that Grassroots is entirely a literary magazine," Spector said.

Grassroots varies its format each issue, putting a heavy emphasis on graphic art in an effort to remain fresh, Spector said.

All of the artists and authors are SIU students, said Spector, except on the rare occasion that a guest artist is invited to contribute.

Contributions do not have to conform to a strict literary style or format, said Charles Webb, content editor of Grassroots. The magazine may publish a conversation between a graduate student and a high government official regarding national issues.

"We are thinking about writing national figures who didn't make it in poetry and asking for their poetic creations," said Spector. "Even though we might get only 5 replies from 500 letters it could be worth it."

Other possibilities include a Grassroots reading to coincide with the writer's platform in the spring, a photography graph recording a local band or perhaps a University musical group to be sponsored by Grassroots.

Grassroots needs personnel for the editorial board and for the sales and layout staffs, Spector said. Those interested can contact Spector, Webb, Larry Garren or Stu Philp at the Grassroots office 455-2777.

Peters: ‘I didn’t sign Me Govern group’s letter’

Jim Peters, student body president, said Monday that he did not sign a letter distributed by the McGovern for P.4.2, an organization urging New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay not to run for the presidency. Peters’ name was among those of more than 150 student body officials and student newspaper editors from across the country listed as signatures of the letter, which endorsed South Dakota Sen. George McGovern for president.

“I have never seen the letter,” Peters said, “and I’m sure that I didn’t sign it,” he added. “They must have copied my name off of some list.”

Academic freedom

To the Daily Egyptian: Jenkin Lloyd Jones' syndicated article "Gray area of academic freedom" (Daily Egyptian, Sept. 23) is a good example of resurgent McCarthyism once again threatening American university life. It is an article written by a person who "admires Marx" or who "use the classroom to promote his views." In a "gray area" of academic freedom, i.e., they should be liable to dismissal.

Jones' conception of the nature of the university classroom is fundamentally unsound, for the teacher is not in the business of "promoting anything; he is not a cop, mark, a prospector or a salarier. He is a moral traveler who explains all the phenomena of the world. He does not grade students on how much they "admire Marx" but on how well they understood his works. If that is the subject at hand. This understanding, according to the McCarthy-Jones school, must be in safe and reliable hands; otherwise the natives have a tendency to get restless.

Opinion & Commentary

Is 'big-time' football a wise goal?

Opinion by Tracee Seaman
Graduate Student
English

The athletic department will quickly point out that our inability to draw major attendance--to partially the result of an inadequate stadium. Whether SIU football could truly draw wall enough to support itself is a moot point since even with the expansion the seating capacity proposed in the renovation of Memorial Stadium (a renovation to be paid for out of the ex- tension fees), it will still be enabled revenue generated to balance the football books.

In reality SIU football doesn't support itself and very likely doesn't support any of the athletic program. At SIU the picture is for- gotten intercollege activities. It is also evident that it rules the financial chances of other sports like soccer, baseball and water polo from being introduced at an intercollege level. The money wasted on football might also be used for intramurals, the stepchild of the athletic family, or for recreation facilities for the general student. It's clear that not only do the economic disadvantages far outweigh the advantages of our present direction in football, but also that it would be very difficult to find an economic advantage in ever doing so.

One of the principle justifications advanced for attempting to attain big-time status is in football. Football is a major sport, and football is the basis for the benefits of the athletic program. The truth is that a majority of major football schools are losing money according to a recent NCA A study (Sports Illustrated, February 1, 1971).

The study indicates that the football revenue was increasing by 12 percent in 1968 and 1969, football expenses were increasing by 17 percent. Since we're spending on football like one of the "119," but we're generating revenue from fan support like a very small college.

The economic picture alone decrees that we need to reevaluate our field in football.

Football apologists will also assert that big-time football will in fact add to SIU's reputation. The Ivy League's de-emphasis of football has shown, however, that academic reputations do not equal football excellence. Clever to time is the ex- ample of the University of Chicago which dropped football in 1939 and only resumed on a small scale basis in 1969. Success in big-time football is not necessary to have a competitive and respected program. Coaches' fees and athletic directors whose fame and salaries increase with the reputation of the team and players whose chances of collecting a draft bonus in- crease with the team's status.

The de-emphasis or elimination of football will bring additional benefits. For instance, it would eliminate the professional atmosphere around football at SIU. Hopefully, we would not see student cheating demogorg from Saturday's heroes' and the actions of a man like Ralph Nader heroic. With the pressure of television pageantry and enthuasiasm to drive us, we would be able to save more clearly what the basic aims of an academic institution should be.

Now is the time to change our present direction toward big-time intercollege football. The athletic department might begin by arranging future schedules so that we can lose in the manner that we have nothing but very "big-time" teams on it. If we gave no new NCAA Scholarship football, neither would we funded. There would be little incentive for future players. Let's develop a new league structure. The economic picture alone decrees that we need to reevaluate our field in football.

Washington Merry-go-round

To the Daily Egyptian: Dear Ambassador Bunker,
"You are instructed to hand the following statement to President Thieu:..."

Washington Merry-go-round,

Lever for the President's wage and price freeze.

This is illustrated in the case of Northwestern University vs. Action Express Chicago Tribune. Actually, the clime never became subject to an actual court test, because the university officials in charge of the admissions administration will to the point that they never were thinking. Increased enrollments are personal and the students that the Northwestern University football tickets at the higher prices.

It seems that everybody thinks that the case is a special exception to the price freeze, but if they are being cause of it. I do not object to the less as price increases attributable to price freeze to Northwestern. But it's clear that the Newlands and McCrackens out on the insured issue, this justification for higher pricing is highly questionable.

Football price hike

To the Daily Egyptian:

Dear Ambassador Bunker,
"You are instructed to hand the following statement to President Thieu:..."

Washington Merry-go-round,

The Government of the United States is confident that both parties are endeavoring to do their utmost to settle their difficulties through the agencies provided by law and without recourse to the methods which would cause a dis- turbance throughout the Republic."

"The Government of the United States, as a friend of the people of the Republic, heartily point out that election controversies have not been held within its territory, in which party feeling rules the tax base, we may recall to mind that these disputes have al- ways been settled by a process of arbitration. The most notable case which has occurred in the United States was the Hay-Tilden controversy, which machinery finally decided in favor of the candidate who had the minority of the popular vote. This controversy clearly proved that a ballotless election was elevated by a resort to law rather than by force of arms as in the Creek Indians and the Creek Indians by the stockade, Tens, and mindless of the Creek Indians, the Creek Indians, by the day."

"The Government of the United States knows better than any other nation knows the patriotism of the Creek Indians, the Creek Indians, by the day."

Senate alters bill-passing methods to shorten meetings

The Student Senate will have a new procedure for passing proposed bills and resolutions this year, according to Jim Peters, student body vice president. Peters told the faculty council that the Senate plans to conduct all business at an orientation meeting Monday night that bills would be read at meetings and then sent to committees, instead of being discussed and voted on at the same meeting. Peters feels that this will eliminate needless discussion and make meetings much shorter.

An ad hoc committee to evaluate the effectiveness of student government will be named at the first senate meeting Wednesday. The ad hoc committee will study the committee system of student government to see if all of the committees are needed, or if they may be transferred to the University Senate's jurisdiction; re-examine the Student Senate constitution; study the possibility of a student treasurer and re-examine the senate form of government.

At that same orientation meeting, Peters announced that 127 positions were open on Student Senate and University Senate committees for interested students. Peters added that the student applicant does not have to be a student senator. If he is interested, he should contact Peters in the Student Senate Office.

The Senate's first meeting will be Wednesday in Lawson 151 at 7:30 p.m.

Police find statue at baseball field

The last of the two wooden statues stolen from Morris Library last week was recovered early Monday by SIU Security Police.

As yet neither Security Police nor library officials have any leads into who stole the statues. But they say they have what they consider a more feasible explanation of how the statues were stolen without notice of library personnel.

Sidney Matthews, assistant director of Morris Library, said Monday that the statues might have been taken from the library while textbook rental services were open Friday.

 Whoever took the statues, he said, would have carried them down the west stairwell of the library and out through Textbook Rental entrance at the west end of the library.

Security officer Lt. Bernard Nigg said Monday the statues might have been carried down the central elevator and then out the Textbook Rental entrance.

Matthews said that carrying the statues out that entrance could have been done only if the entrance, in the library basement, was unlocked. These doors usually are locked, he said.

Nigg said Security Police received an anonymous phone call at 2 a.m. Monday saying that books missing from Morris Library were on home plate at the baseball field.

When police arrived there, he said, they found instead the last missing statue.

The other statue, the "Pioneer," was returned to library officials last Wednesday.

Imperialism to be topic of October conference

By Richard Lowen
Daily Egyptian Staff

A new coalition composed of student and non-student groups is planning a conference late next month dealing with American imperialism.

Douglas Allen, philosophy instructor and a member of the coalition, said Friday that the coalition is a loosely structured organization with voluntary membership by the individual groups, Allen said the idea behind the coalition is to bring various groups together when there is an issue of mutual concern.

The first phase of the conference will be a dinner that is tentatively scheduled for Oct. 10 at the Wesley Foundation, Allen said. The objective of the dinner, he said, is to build up momentum for the conference.

The conference, scheduled for Oct. 22 and 23, has planned workshops, panels and movies on China, Indochina, the Vietnam war, Cuba, East Pakistan and possibly drugs, said Allen. He said that the conference will try to have a broad base, but will center around Vietnam.

Allen said that the conference will serve as the second conference on "Scholarly Integrity and the University." The first conference on that subject was held last year.

Allen said that one of the results of that meeting was the international boycott of the Center for Vietnamese Studies.

Local, national and internationally known speakers have been invited, Allen said. Pro-

Little 'Scooter' has football twin

He's freshman Jerry Burns

By Ernie Schmitt

Only Egyptian Sports Writer

When Gerald 'Scooter' Wilson burst upon the SU football scene last year, many people were amazed that somebody so small could end up playing collegiate football. Those same people better look again tonight, because there is another running back, who, given Wilson's numbers and uniform could pass as his twin. His name is Jerry Burns, and he is currently holding forth with the SU freshman squad.

Whether or not Burns—who measures 5-5 and weighs in at 255—can duplicate Wilson's football feats remains to be seen, but one of the necessary talents appears to be there.

"He has good lateral movement and he has improved me with his speed and quickness," said Jim McKay who coaches the freshmen offensive backs.

"In fact his lateral movement is the best of any back we have in camp."

Burns put that speed and lateral movement to good use while at Kansas City Central High School. In one game of his senior year, he gained 413 yards and scored five touchdowns as part of a 57-7 Central victory.

"I wasn't the leading ground gainer in that game," he recalled. "Our big fullback gained over 200 yards!"

Most of Burns' yardage in his high school days was picked up running outside where he could utilize his speed and quickness. The same case has prevailed so far in freshman ball also.

"He has only been into the line once or twice," McKay said. "We'll have to run him into the line more and see how he looks."

If he had the choice, Burns said he would much rather run to the opposite end running inside wouldn't bother him either.

"When I go into the line I like to get the ball and run over it," Burns said. "That way I'm a smaller target for the linemen to aim at."

"Besides, being so small, the big man may get one good shot at me," he said. "They usually grab my head or something."

If the Deacons in high school were big, then those which Burns "will be bumping into on the field should be even bigger," Burns knows it.

"In high school you might have only two or three guys with good ability," he said. "But here everybody is good. "Some things you could get away with in high school you can't do here."

Like scoring five touchdowns and rushing for 175 yards?

Five rule violations being probed
ISU cage coach in hot water with NCAA

NORMAL—Publicity comes easily to Will Robinson, the short, graying coach who just last year was telling everyone that Illinois State would someday win a national basketball crown.

That made Robinson good news copy, being the first black man to coach basketball at a school which considers itself a major college also made him good news copy. Fact is, most statistics bureaus still call Illinois State a small college. But that was rarely mentioned.

Well, Robinson is making news again, but this time the image of the hard-working coach Robinson is being tarnished with charges of NCAA rules violations.

The charges include improperly transporting a prospective student-athlete, taking his team in an ISU bus to a professional basketball game; accepting free tickets to the same game; being present while recruiting practice and conducting an out-of-season practice program.

Robinson's reaction when questioned was, "I have no comment on anything. You'll have to see Dr. (Bill) Weisbecker, our athletic director."

The investigation didn't come to light until 14 days ago when a statement from ISU President David K. Berlin said the university "will cooperate fully with all parties concerned to determine exactly what happened and to make sure that no further violations occurred."

But Berlin, nor Weisbecker is required to release any information regarding any NCAA investigation until the procedures are completed.

"If there are any facts on which Dr. Berlin is not to be released, I will be happy to discuss them in private," Berlin said. "I have no comment on anything. You'll have to see Dr. Weisbecker, our athletic director."

The NCAA's 21-day deadline has expired. The investigative staff will not be present until the investigation is completed.

About the investigation, Weisbecker said, "In my opinion, based on what I've learned about NCAA rules enforcement, the two rules that concern the most serious violations, we're not involved in. That's in the field of academic violations, which are not violations of the and that type thing. We're not involved in those at all."

Since Berlin is not required to release any information, Weisbecker was asked if the president's statement has done more harm than good.

"If I respond to that, I'll cut my throat so decided with my president, I'll better not," said Weisbecker.

"I can give you a circular answer. I think the idea of openness carries more weight than it ever has. I think this is a time where openness is more necessary than ever."

"Dr. Berlin's position is there are no secrets at Illinois State University. There are no sacred cows," Weisbecker said.

Sacked cows or not, there's good evidence that Robinson might be judged guilty on at least three of the five counts.

Major college scoring hit by a 'freeze'

NEW YORK (AP) - Along with the nation's economic freeze, brakes have been applied to the runaway scoring trend in college football.

Latest statistics by the National Collegiate Sports Services, the NCAA arm which keeps up with such things, reveals that last Saturday's games were the lowest in scoring in three seasons.

There were no shutouts among the major teams, the most since Nov. 17, 1967. But by season scoring averages are well below last year.

In 66 games last week the major conference cumulative average was a little below a point a game, the lowest since Sept. 28, 1968. The season's average is 38.6, compared with 42.6 last season and the record 43.2 in 1969.

"I explained it by observing that coaches have turned greater attention to the defense," said Ivy League coach, Cornell, with an outstanding back in Ed Marrino, is leading the country in total defense with 311.4 yards and rushing defense with 493 yards for the single game it had played.

Blues to defy price freeze

ST. LOUIS (AP) - President Sid- ney Volante and Illinois Swimming and Diving Bosses yesterday said that the National collegiate swimming team and its competitors will go ahead with a 15 percent price increase announced last month and before the wage-price freeze.

"The Blues" decided that last day and before the federal government's freeze took effect, as required by order of the Federal Trade Commission of the National Football Leagu-
