Police party-hop over the weekend

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Saturday afternoon toeight-o'clock on South Washington Street was littered with fast-food containers and plastic cups draped of their beer from the night before.

Broken beer bottles were strewn for half a block on the sidewalk.

And a condom filled with a yellow liquid hung unabused from the antenna of a black Volkswagen Rabbit.

Friday night there were three parties within a block and a half of each other, with each exceeding 150 revellers throughout the night.

The party on the corner of South Washington and East Freeman was one of a dozen that Friday night, Sgt. Johnnie Dreyfuss of the Carbondale Police Department said. Sgt. Jim Rossiter would not comment on how many parties police would respond to Saturday night.

Before the weather turns cold, Dreyfus said, police will usually respond to at least 16 parties about parties each weekend.

"As police lights flashed and the party got going, one disgruntled reveler yelled, 'Hey, you bust a white man's party,'" he was apparently referring to the seeming arbitrary police decision to arrest or termination as another round merrily away within sight.

But Knapp said Carbondale police will use a method when dealing with the madness of Carbondale revelry.

Witnesses testify Nitz used Miley's credit card

Witnesses testified in the Williamson County Courthouse that Richard Nitz used Michael H. Miley's credit cards on April 6, two days after Miley was murdered, and a tape found in Nitz's possession had once belonged to Mark Miley, Michael Miley's brother.

Nitz is charged with the April 6 murder of Miley. Miley was reported missing to Jackson County authorities when he failed to return home after his practice that evening.

His decapitated body was found in the trunk of his car April 9 near Rocky Fork Road in Union County.

Miley's Attorney Charles Garnati said in opening statements that Miley's head had been found.

Illinois State Police Sgt. James Nelson testified Friday that Nitz used Miley's credit cards at the Kentucky Oaks Mall, Padsuka, Nelson said three mail employees picked Nitz out of a photo lineup.

Nelson said one of the employees helped Nitz load stereo speakers into the back of his car.

"I distinctly remembered the individual (Nitz) because he had his hand wrapped up and he couldn't hold it," he said.

In the summer of 1984, James Reed recorded a cassette tape for Michael Reed, who was a disc jockey at Main Street Bar, the bar new called If Hearts, he recognized the music and his own voice on the tape.

The cassette tape was recovered when police searched Nitz's property.

"We have to get out and do the work that needs to be done. We can do it. We must do it," he said.

C. Ray Chancey, chairman of the committee of the poor turnout in the polls nationwide to elect the nation's president.

"I can predict a possible only 26 percent of the voters voting is pathetic," he said.

Simon: America's turnout at polls has been 'pathetic'

"What we have to do is build a better future for that young man," Simon said as the audience greeted him.

Simon was one of many Democrats on hand at a picnic sponsored by the Jackson County Democratic Central Committee Sunday in Murphy's Shop.

Making reference to an Illinois poll showing Michael Dukakis and George Bush tied at 46 percent in their bid for the presidency, Simon encouraged everyone to go to the polls.

The race in Illinois is very close, he said, and every vote will count.

The future of America depends on the way the country votes in November, Senator Simon said.

CTC proposes plan to aid rural Nepal

By Jon Maguire
Staff Writer

The College of Technical Careers has worked 18 months on a proposal to assist the economic system of rural Nepal.

The proposal still is in the concept stage. Fred Kirk, executive director of Foster Parents Plan, Harry G. Miller, CTC dean, and Madhav Sharma, special assistant to the CTC dean, have worked on the proposal to help the economically depressed rural areas of Nepal.

A second draft of the proposal was submitted and CTC is awaiting a reply from the project leader.

The main contractor of the project is the Foster Parents Plan. The project is now being funded by USAID.

If the proposal is agreed upon, a micro-enterprise development center would be established in Tribhuvan University in Nepal's capital, Kathmandu. The center would be used to train people in such fields as agriculture, health education and animal husbandry.

Sharma, a Nepal native and a SIUC graduate, went back to Nepal for eleven days this summer. The purpose of his trip was to look into micro-enterprise development in Nepal for eleven days this summer.

"Our project is to help the people make a difference in social and economical development," Sharma said. "We have a long way to go, but all signs are positive."

No injuries were reported in the clash.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The wreckage of the plane crash that killed Pakistani President Zia ul-Haq last month has been secretly flown to the United States, where analysts hope to trace whether the plane was downed by a bomb blast, administration officials said. U.S. intelligence sources said the wreckage of the Lockheed C-130, ferried in sections on U.S. military transport planes 10 days ago, is being examined by Pentagon and CIA analysts and technical experts working for U.S. defense contractors.

Mediator to help negotiate
Granite City School strike

By United Press International

A federal mediator has scheduled separate meetings with both sides in a nearly one-week old teachers strike in Granite City that has extended summer vacation for some 8,500 Southern Illinois students, officials said Sunday. Shirley Stoll, president of the 466-member Granite City Federation of Teachers said the mediator is calling for separate meetings before the two sides meet face to face. The teachers walked off the job last Tuesday, canceling had no classes since.

Cool Cray heats up Shryock audience

Rhythm and blues tradition alive in group's music

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

The Grammy Award-winning Robert Cray Band took the stage Thursday night at Shryock Auditorium to deliver a set of the tight rhythm and blues that has won both Grammy and a wide-world following.

An audience of about 600 people roared appreciatively as the band's own distinct sound, evident on vinyl, came to life as the band played old favorites as well as material from the recently released LP, "Don't Be Afraid Of The Dark."

Against a black background, synchronized colored lights flashed, but the emphasis was on the music, not the stage show. Placed at the center of the stage, the leader of the band, Robert Cray, was the focal point visually as well as musically.

Cray displayed the technique that earned him the title of No. 1 R&B Artist of the Year in Rolling Stone and Downbeat magazine. Changin' the Mood, which Cray dizzled the audience with blistering guitar licks and his distinctive vocals.

Bassist Richard Cousins had a strong presence as well. Graceful, gliding style belied the powerful, urging rhythms he provided the band, Robert Cray Band is by no means an overnight sensation. It has 15 years of extensive touring under its belt, sometimes playing 236 nights a year, with several sets a night.

Carbondale was the smallest stop on the tour as well as the band's only Illinois date. The tour had previously been requested throughout Brazil, Japan and Australia, according to George Alper, in charge of merchandising.

Media overkill fuels SIUC party image

IN RECENT years, Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit and University administrators have fought to change SIUC's image as a party school to that of a respectable institute of higher education. Pettit, who recently expressed a renewed interest in building the spread of rumors, has a long, hard struggle ahead.

Many people — faculty and administrators in particular — think of SIUC and the Southern Illinois region as a quiet, scenic and serious-minded area. For the most part, they are correct.

ALTHOUGH STUDENTS at SIUC tend to blow off a lot of steam during the weekends, they are no worse than other students across the country and are just as serious about their education. The legacy of SIUC's infamous Halloween celebration has spread like wildfire, especially to the Chicago area. Media attention has fanned these flames and, on occasion, has blown the situation out of proportion.

THE CHICAGO Tribune recently published a feature story about life at SIUC. Although it was fairly accurate at capturing the spirit of SIUC, the story focused mainly on the image of the University as a party school. The story included statements by 1968 alumni Dennis Franz — more popularly known as detective Norman Buntz from "Hill Street Blues" and "Beverly Hills Buntz" — who said, "I came down and got involved in a three-day party, and I said this is the life for me. It turned out to be a two- and a-half-year party.

In 1987, the Chicago Sun-Times polled 35 high school guidance counselors and asked them to rate Illinois universities as to their party habits. Once again, SIUC was ranked the No. 1 party school in the Midwest.

The highly suspect survey did a great disservice to the University. Most likely, the opinions given by those surveyed were based on rumors, not first-hand observation. Most damaging was Playboy magazine's ranking of SIUC as the top party school in the country. Some of the tidbits in the article included, a comment by an SIU-C student who said, "We'd put our sexual tem­porature at about lO2 degrees" and a story about a couple called "Happily Hawaiian." The stories focused mainly on the exploits of James Madison. The youngsters have learned exactly what this country has seen fit to put emphasis upon.

You see, our education in America is built around the Top-40 tunes in drunk driving.

No one in this country, truly, can now believe that the University of Southern Illinois is a "party school." We are the story of a couple called "Happily Hawaiian." We are the story of students and faculty.

THESE STATEMENTS plague the University. Out-of­towners who visit the University during Halloween or Springfest, spread their stories north, where they become highly distorted. Their stories are transmitted to high school students, parents, teachers and guidance coun­selors, and many of these people write letters to editors and students to try it.

The University's image probably will never fade, for the media tend to give credibility to students, faculty, and parents who are trying to change that designation. And as long as the media place emphasis on the University's image as a "party school," accomplishing the goal will be near impossible.

Opinions from elsewhere

TV tunes in drunk driving

Kansas City Times

PLANS TO make the problem of drinking and driving part of television's fictional world may be one of the most socially responsible steps the networks have taken in some time.

WHETHER OR not the average skeptical American who's jealous of his independence and believes priorities are exactly in the opposite order of what he wants to see on his TV screen will take the media to task for their efforts is yet to be made, but the proper use of this method is closer to the promise of educational work than most of today's commercial programming.

After all, the networks have learned that the only way they can reach everyone, including those young people who are tuning out the other programs of "The networks have taken in some time.

AGREEMENT AMONG the three main television networks and the Hollywood studios to campaign against drunken driving joins a powerful communication tool with one of the most successful grass-roots advocacy efforts in recent years.

THE THEME that society does not accept drinking and driving will be given voice in program dialogue and in public service messages. Television already gives America notions about family life and love, business and professionalism, violence and crime daily and nightly. This message isn't all that different.

Letters

American children getting education the American way; by consumerism

I am writing this letter in reaction to an article that appeared in the Daily Egyptian on Monday regarding the University’s concern with the local Halloween party scene. The article quoted a number of university officials, saying that SIUC’s image is being damaged and that this is not the place for students to party. The story focused mainly on the exploits of James Madison. The youngsters have learned exactly what this country has seen fit to put emphasis upon.

I support the by-product of American education — consumerism. Some of you are muttering “cynic,” while more paranoid individuals are probably screaming “commie.”

Let’s examine some behaviors right here on campus. Go up to the strip on any given night and you will see stupendous examples of the American educational system at work. Everyone, but everyone, will be wearing the absolute latest in designer denim. We all know what’s cool and we all love it. Perhaps you should try it on and ask yourselves if people at SIUC are here to absorb true knowledge and enlightenment or is this simply a means to an end, that being employees of this country in and of itself? Is SIUC concerned with students and learning, or is it a self-sustaining bureaucracy managed through the principles of economics?

How many of you received a bursar payment and still had an ac­tive schedule the next day? Maybe the students who visit the University during Halloween are just a part of this cycle, but by now some of you are cer­tainly starting to follow it.

So here we are in Illinois. Thompson did not get his tax cut but obviously he solved the social problems of us old enough to write our own bills. The drinking and partying on the other hand, was still the same. We have a White Sox and, harken Americans, a corporation was saved! Not only were the Sox saved, but a lot of Budweiser and Oscar-Mayer — (the cute kids spell it right in the commercials every time) — will be sold at gate-time to boot.

Education is alive and well in America! We all want to make money. We all know which cars prescribe the most pleasure and pain, but of us old enough to write our own bills, we assume that the majority of us can’t distinguish between a Budweiser. So, take a look people, the older generation is going to hold on to their jobs, and the educational system is going to be saved.

But what about a university education in itself? Go ahead and ask yourselves if people at SIUC are here to absorb true knowledge and enlightenment or is this simply a means to an end, that being employees of this country in and of itself? Is SIUC concerned with students and learning, or is it a self-sustaining bureaucracy managed through the principles of economics? How many of you received a bursar payment and still had an active schedule the next day? Maybe the students who visit the University during Halloween are just a part of this cycle, but by now some of you are certainly starting to follow it.

Organizers need Hawaiian lessons

As a former resident of the state of Illinois, I personally know that the Chinese food (36 percent of them is Chinese extraction), and don’t sprinkle pineapple over everything.

Even more amusing, however, was the foible at­tempt at reproducing the Hawaiian language. Although Hawaiian is actually spoken by only a few thousand of the million or so inhabitants, anyone who lives there for more than a year or two seems to sing the hundreds of Hawaiian words that are in common use.

We learned that the Roman Room has been renamed Lalaia-Kona, they mean Lalaia-Kona, the resort town on the island of Hawaii. The best part of all, however, is the Big Muddy Komeono Comedy Club. Presumably, the Hawaiian word for "big" is something quite different. If we assume that "ko" is just a mispronunciation of "kai" then the word is defined in Elbert’s Hawaiian Dictionary as "to hang around begging for food, to be stupid, to be thick.

Unfortunately, Komeono does, in fact, mean something quite different. If we assume that "ko" is just a mispronunciation of "kai" then the word is defined in Elbert’s Hawaiian Dictionary as "to hang around begging for food, to be stupid, to be thick.

Weather dampens wildfires

Federal officials bury controversial 'let burn' policy

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Light snow and rain dampened fire-blackened Yellowstone National Park Sunday and lifted the spirits of firefighters who mourned an afternoon on a blaze that had threatened park headquarters.

In Boise, Idaho, Interior Secretary Donald Hodel said the disastrous 1988 fire season — more than 3 million acres in smoke — had finally persuaded federal officials to bury the controversial "let burn" wildfires policy.

Less than a mile from the Mammoth Hot Springs headquarters complex of the nation's oldest national park, hundreds of firefighters attacked the North Fork fire, backed by dozens of bulldozers and water-dropping aircrafts.

Light snow began failing overnight and continued much of the day, mixing with rain in the afternoon as temperatures crept into the 40s, spokeswoman Amy Vanderbildt said.

Up to 3 inches of snow remained on the ground in areas, and while experts said at least a 10-inch layer would be needed to extinguish the fires, just the sight of snow boosted the morale of more than 9,000 firefighters on scene within the 2.2 million-acre park.

"There were sure a lot of smiles around here this morning," Vanderbildt said. "It's not a lot, it's just a brief respite, but it helps."

"It certainly is helping us," one firefighter added. "It's giving us some breathing room — if the next few days are very nice, we can gain some ground on these fires."

But he also acted in behalf of Bush, wishing all those in attendance a Merry Christmas. Simon was marking a Sept. 7 speech by Bush where he mistakenly referred to the day as being Pearl Harbor day.

Simon also made attempts to deflect attacks by the Republicans concerning Dukakis' allegiance to the nation. Dukakis has been questioned about the veto of a bill that would make the pledge of allegiance mandatory at all schools in Massachusetts.

"We're all loyal Americans. That's not the issue," Simon said.

Simon also took time to give a class on picking a candidate.

"Don't ask to whom they say, 'Pay attention to what they say.' After this is done, he said, "I don't think the Democrats will have to be the choice for president."

New Ballroom Dancing Club holds first meeting tonight

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

Students who wish to learn the tango, the fox trot or the samba are invited to attend the University's new Ballroom Dancing Club at 7:30 tonight.

The club meets on Monday evenings in the Student Center's Ballroom B and is also open to the faculty, staff and community.

Charter member Amy Dughi, junior in Radio-TV, said that many dancers may stay away from joining because they don't have a partner to enroll with.

Dughi assures potential members that although couples are definitely welcome, beginners and new members can be teamed with each other or with more experienced dancers so that everyone has a chance to learn the dances.

Beginners and new members can be teamed with each other or with more experienced dancers so that everyone has a chance to learn the dances.

This assured them of little trouble in acquiring a dance hall.

"Last spring we were just hoping to survive; now we're an R.S.O. in full swing. No pun intended," Sumer laughed.

Dughi said she enjoys the club mainly because she gets to meet a lot of people. "People of all ages come to dance. There's one couple in their 70s and they dance circles around the rest of us." Other featured dances in the club include the Lindy Swing, the cha-cha, the waltz, and square dancing.

Fees are $8 for students and $10 for the faculty.

Culture beats sports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans, taking fresh interest in the nation's cultural life, spent more money going to museums, exhibitions and lectures than on sporting events in 1986, a report by the National Endowment for the Humanities said Sunday.

The report, which endorses Chairwomen Lynne Cheney wrote alone, said that in 1986, Americans spent $844 million to attend cultural events and $3.1 billion on sporting events. In 1979, she said, spending for cultural events was $500 million and $1.1 billion for sports.

But, Cheney, in a 70-page review of the state of American culture, also found that America's college students are not studying the humanities — literature, philosophy, because they are more concerned with learning a money-making skill.

Film review

The plot of the film is predictable. It is as old as the Prince and the Pauper and as recent as an actor in the White House.

Yet, it is humorous and charming. The jokes are funny and the scenery and the music are beautiful. Carnival in Parador is loud, glittery and impressive.

Dreyfuss plays an ordinary man. Jack is a minor actor with a touch of vanity and a bit of humility. This role is similar in that respect to the self-made millionaire he played in "Down and Out in Beverly Hills." This is not too surprising because the creators of "Down and Out" also made this film.

A number of well-known actors have small roles in the film. Ed Asner has a cameo role as himself. David Daging, from TV's "China Beach," plays a conceited American actress. Charle plays a seductive palace servant.

Janet Walker has a role as a CIA agent and Polly Holiday, best known as Flo on "Alice," plays his wife.

Raul Julia gives an intimidating, yet comedic performance as Roberto and Sonia Braga sizzles as Madonna.

Slide show to examine rivers

By Lorla Roberson
Staff Writer

From the late 17th through the 19th centuries, rivers like the Mississippi, Ohio and Big Muddy formed a network of waterways that explorers and traders followed. Many small towns and cities sprang up along their banks.

But today, the place of rivers in Southern Illinois’ economy is only a ripple compared to the major role they played in the development of the region, Sheila Ryan, assistant archivist at Morris Library, said.

A slide-tape presentation scheduled at 4 and 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Morris Library Auditorium will take a look at the factors that brought about the change in the river industry in Southern Illinois.

The 40-minute presentation titled “Riverwork in Southern Illinois: The Paradox of Progress,” includes historical pictures, plans of towns and areas along the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, and such original source material as diaries and letters, Ryan said.

“These are information on how thousands of people made their living fishing for mussels and then sold them to industries that made pearl buttons,” she said.

“There’s also the story of how everyone thought Cairo was going to be a really successful city because it’s at the junction of the Mississippi and Ohio rivers,” Ryan said.

Ryan said the slide program and the accompanying exhibit of historical photos and illustrations are available for loan to schools and libraries.

Field hockey drops three games

After opening the season with two victories, the field hockey team fell hard on hard times this weekend in St. Louis by losing all three of its games. The Salukis dropped a 2-0 decision to Chico State on Saturday.

"We were dragging," Coach Julee Illner said. "It looked like we were tired. They ran us all over the place and we let them take it away from us."

The Salukis had only 13 shots on goal against Chico State.

On Saturday, Michigan defeated SIU-0, 2-0, on a goal by Sara Clark with only 3:06 remaining in the game. "It was a super game," Illner said. "It couldn't have gone either way, but Michigan got more aggressive at the end."

The Salukis led 2-1 at halftime on goals by Cindy Op- permann and Jenny Cardot. St. Louis beat the Salukis 6-4 on Friday. "Our defense was not there, period," Illner said. "We got beat on the fast break time after time after time."

North Star Conference, which doesn't get an automatic berth to the NCAA, and secondly as a Midwest school, Notre Dame will only earn an at-large selection if it can demonstrate that it is on a higher playing level than the favored West Coast schools. Winning the Sahki Invitational, recognized nationally as a competitive tournament, would have been a big step in that direction. The NCAA selection committee is prejudiced against Midwest schools. In 1989, only nine schools east of the Mississippi River made it to the NCAA tournament. Of SPIKERS, from Page 16 playing well enough to win."

"It was an up and down match," she added. Bowling Green State defeated SIU-I5-8, 15-13, 15-9 Saturday afternoon.

Noble had 17 of SIU's total of 29 kills on the match. Bowling Green was without its top player, freshman Lisa Noble, who had surgery on her knee during warmups of Friday's match with Iowa. Even so, Bowling Green held on behind the 16 kill efforts of Sheri Pela and Kelly Edelst.

those nine, a mere three were at-large selections. The Irish were 35-4 last season and not even considered for post-season play.

Letting Arizona, an NCAA qualifier the previous two seasons with records of 14-13 and 18-13, walk away with the title will certainly hurt Notre Dame's chances in November.

If the NCAA is going to snub Midwest schools, then it is up to tournament hosts like SIU-C to take care of their own. Arizona, admittedly a fine team, found it too easy to grab the trophy and run.

Saluki coach Debbie Hunter said the tie-breaker produced the true champions of the tournament. "I think in these kinds of things it's a close call," she said. "What I could notice, though, was that Arizona was more consistent at this stage of the season."

That was probably true. But there is also the same coaches exchange before any contest: "May the best team win."

In a head-to-head showdown, Notre Dame proved it was the better team. Unfortunately for all those Midwest schools that could ultimately be helped by Notre Dame making the NCAA tournament, and unfortunately for the Irish themselves, the best team didn't win.

Spikers get trounced in own tourney

By Lisa Warns

The women’s volleyball team lost all four of its matches at its 12th Saluki Invitational this weekend. SIU-C is 2-4 this season.

Although the Salukis lost in three straight games to Notre Dame on Saturday, they did go to five games against Iowa and Bowling Green before losing.

"We got a little bit of everything wrong defensively," Coach Debbie Hunter said. "I've got all kinds of ideas on what can make us sharper. We've got three more games ahead of us here to get things done."

"I was the tournament with a 3-1 record. Notre Dame was second."

Notre Dame trounced the Salukis 15-8, 15-4, 15-5, finishing the final match of the tournament in 1 hour, 36 minutes.

The Salukis had 24 hitting errors to 23 kills. It was the second time in the tournament they had failed to produce more kills than errors.

Only Nina Brackin (nine kills) and Beth Wissett (four kills) had fewer errors than kills for the Salukis.

Notre Dame dominated behind Mary Kay Waller's nine kills and Zorica Bennett's eight. Both made the all-tournament team along with freshman Julie Bremner, who had 26 assists against the Salukis.

Friday night against Iowa, SIU-C finally reunited through five games 15-10, 15-7, 15-12, 15-7, 15-7.

Don Simpson led SIU-C with 22 kills. Brackin had 17 kills and Teri Noble had 16 kills.

"I think we're two or three sets above last year," Hunter said. "We're processing information better, but not 10 percent to our advantage."

The victory was Iowa's sixth straight, but they've been pulled out a lot of five game matches," Iowa coach Sandy Stewart said. "We've been

Rugby club starts season with victory

By Robert Baxter

The SIU-C rugby club opened its season in convincing fashion as it blew past visiting Southeast Missouri State 15-4 on Saturday at the rugby pitch near Abe Martin Field.

The club had a strong second half rally to capture the victory.

Down 4-4 at the half, SIU-C bounced back and outscored Southeast Missouri 10-2 the rest of the way.

SIU-C's backs were controlling the action throughout the match, rugby club coach Steve Montez said.

"Our backs dominated their backs, causing them to be cautious with their passes," Montez said.

Montez said this, along with the play of SIU-C's forwards, disrupted the game plan Southeast Missouri State had tried to establish while taking a two-point lead early in the game.

SIU-C got scoring from several players, including Tim Cronin who scored the first point of the night after teammate Dave Tesfaye blocked a kick, but Southeast Missouri came back before the Salukis' Scott Herrick. SIU-C's Scott Herrick. SIU-C's Scott Herrick.

Montez said he is looking forward to a great season as all but two members of last year's (8-5) squad are back.

Championship slips through Irish's fingers

Notre Dame women's volleyball coach Art Lambert

Notre Dame as he got his players on the bus for the nine-hour ride back to south Bend Sunday night.

He knew that the Irish had done enough to capture the 12th Saluki Invitational — the three-day, four-team round robin held at Davies Gymnasium — somehow ended up in the back of Arizona coach Ron Weagrich.

Incredibly, the tie-breaking system used for this tournament dictated that the Trojans belonged in Tucson, not back home again in Indiana.

But then to the surprise of the Irish, Lambert knew the game Arizona was 11-4 on games. A three-game victory over SIU-C and Arizona finished the tournament with identical 3-1 records, or that the Wildcats had been beaten in head-to-head competition.

No, according to the mathematics of the tie-breaker, Arizona deserved the prize because it had a better game record than Notre Dame.

So even before Notre Dame took the floor in the tournament finale against the Salukis, Lambert knew the game Arizona was 11-4 on games. A three-game victory over SIU-C and Arizona finished the tournament with identical 3-1 records, or that the Wildcats had been beaten in head-to-head competition.

No, according to the mathematics of the tie-breaker, Arizona deserved the prize because it had a better game record than Notre Dame.

"We have only ourselves to blame," Lambert said. "It's our own fault. Bowling Green deserved to win. Had we played the rest of the tournament the way we played the rest of the tournament, we'd have still leave the Irish short of.

"Now the best we can do is let out a sigh of resignation."

Wegrich, who will be polishing the trophy the entire plane trip, obviously found the tie-breaking system to her satisfaction.

"At least it's a good determinant," she said. "The idea of this kind of tournament is to have a champion based on overall performance, and the tie-breaker does that."

"If you play sold overall and just miss playing well for one match, you shouldn't be penalized for it."

Of course not. Notre Dame played well overall and just missed playing well in one match. The Irish shouldn't be penalized for that.

But they were. Strong victories over Iowa, SIU-C and Arizona won't replace the prestige Notre Dame lost by not getting first. "This is a team searching for an identity," said Lambert, who was cautious with their passes.

But as a member of the
